

Opposing Politicos Give Views Before Same Farm Crowd

Each Attacks Other Over Proposed Farm Platforms

BY DON REEDER
BUFFALO, N.D. (AP) — Thousands stood in a chill rain Saturday to hear Sens. Barry Goldwater and Hubert H. Humphrey attack each other's farm program as "bureaucratic meddling" and "a death sentence to agriculture."

The Republican presidential candidate and the Democratic nominee for vice president spoke to crowds estimated at over 50,000 on the site of the National Plowing Contest in eastern North Dakota.

Goldwater, although his prepared remarks concentrated mainly on world affairs, pledged to the farmers: "I will stop this bureaucratic meddling in your private affairs."

Quoting Goldwater

Humphrey, responding to a chant of "We want Hubert," recited part of Goldwater's

farm voting record and drew his loudest ovation of a 30-minute talk by asking: "With a record like that, is Sen. Goldwater the man you want to trust with the destiny of American agriculture?"

A roar of "no" rose from many in the audience, comprised largely of North Dakotans whose state has not been carried by a Democratic presidential candidate since Franklin D. Roosevelt did it in 1936.

"The nation would be a lot better off if our interim president would quit trying to run your farms and instead clean out his own stables," declared Goldwater in a speech about two hours after Humphrey had left the ground.

The two candidates did not meet.

Health Care Decision Is Expected This Week

WASHINGTON (AP) — The key decision this year on starting a health care program under Social Security is expected to be reached at a Senate-House conference Wednesday or Thursday.

Chances for adoption of the program appear slim. But some of its supporters among the 12 conferees have cautioned newsmen not to write it off completely.

President Johnson reportedly has been urging that some form of Social Security health provision be included in the final bill.

The key figure among the 12 on the bitterly controversial health care issue is Rep. Wilbur D. Mills, D-Ark., chairman of the conference and head of the five-member House group.

The four other House conferees are split evenly on the issue. If Mills voted with the two other Democrats, the House conferees would agree to accept the Senate health care plan or some version of it.

However, the close-mouthed Mills has been against such a program tied to Social Security for years, and his opposition seems to have hardened recently.

The conferees held three sessions last week on the Social Security bill to which the health proposal was added as a Senate amendment.

Mills has steadfastly declined to make any announcements on the sessions.

However, it was learned that at the third meeting last Thursday afternoon there was a lengthy discussion of how the Senate plan would operate but some conferees said they could detect no hint of Mills' stand from his questions and comments.

The seven Senate conferees voted 5-2 against the health amendment when it was adopted 49-44 in their branch. But they are understood to have given assurances they will stand behind the provision at least long enough to see if the House group will take it.

NATO Ships Maneuvering In Atlantic

Seven Navies Are Taking Part in Convoying Test

WASHINGTON (AP) — The biggest NATO fleet maneuvers in four years will open off Europe on Monday, featuring the first extensive test of convoying merchant ships since World War II.

Vice Adm. Reynold D. Hogle, chief of staff of the Allied Command, Atlantic, said Sunday the exercises will involve about 125 ships, 170 planes and 30,000 officers and men. They will run from Sept. 21 to Oct. 2.

Navies taking part are the Belgian, Danish, French, Dutch, Norwegian, British and American.

Train Loaded With Bombs Jumps Rails

CHILLICOTHE, Ohio (AP) — U.S. naval personnel observed railroad crews working to clear 24 derailed freight cars five miles west of here Saturday night. One of the cars contained 180 unfused 500-pound bombs, the Navy said.

The Baltimore & Ohio Railroad freight was on its way from Cincinnati for Earle, N.J., when the accident happened. No injuries were reported.

The naval personnel were from the Crane Navy Arsenal in Indiana. They said there was not much danger but that they were to stay at the scene until the train was ready to move on.

The cars, part of a 68-car freight, left the tracks shortly after dawn Saturday. A burned-out hearing was blamed for the derailment.

The accident occurred in an isolated area. The nearest house was approximately a half a mile away.

Traffic was detoured on a parallel track, a carrier spokesman said. He said the tracks probably would be cleared by 9 a.m. Sunday.

PARIS (AP) — France suffered a deficit in trade and commercial operations for August for the third straight month, the Finance Ministry disclosed Saturday.

The deficit for August was about $78 million as compared with a deficit of about $53 million in July.

Fifteen Men Rescued From Sunken Ship

Seamen Kept Alive Several Hours by Air Inside Hull

BRISBANE, Australia (AP) — Police and civilian skindivers, working 35 feet below the surface, cut through the bottom of the hull of a capsized dredger in Moreton Bay, Queensland, on Saturday and freed 15 men trapped inside.

The men had been kept alive for hours by air pockets inside the hull of the vessel after it overturned late Friday night and, after floating for some time, settled on the bay's sandy bottom.

Seven other members of the 24-member crew of the Danish-owned Kaplajn J. Neilsen were drowned. Two others are missing.

First news of the capsizing was brought by crewman Eric Paulsen, 25, who swam 2 1/2 miles to Moreton Island. A rescue party from the island found two men clinging to the hull. Tapping on the hull revealed there were others inside and the work of cutting through to them began.

The rescued men, some injured or suffering from the effects of their ordeal, were taken to Brisbane Hospital.

Some were taken ashore in boats, others were flown by helicopter direct to the hospital.

Cyprus Arms Mission Meets With Khrushchev in Moscow

MOSCOW (AP) — The leader of a Greek Cypriot arms mission met with Soviet Premier Khrushchev on Saturday and said the Soviet leader agreed to send Cyprus military and other aid.

A Tass account of the meeting said only that Khrushchev agreed to consider the aid request "most attentively."

Andreas Araouzos, Cyprus' minister of trade and industry, told newsmen after the meeting that Khrushchev "expressed a willingness to accord assistance as requested by Cyprus."

Araouzos said he would continue talks with Soviet officials "to discuss the implementation of the assistance which is being offered in response to the Cyprus government request."

Asked then by a newsmen what kind of aid, Araouzos replied: "Military and general assistance."

Araouzos said his talk with Khrushchev was wholly satisfactory and details would be disclosed next week.

When Turkish planes attacked Greek Cypriots in early August, the government of President Makarios appealed for military

Philip Is Greeted by Angry Mob

VALLETTA, Malta (AP) — An angry mob of Malta's labor party members stoned British cars and shouted "down with Britain" Saturday as Prince Philip, Queen Elizabeth's husband, arrived for independence ceremonies Sunday.

Philip's car was quickly rerouted when stones smashed into the official limousine heading from the airport to the island's capital of Valletta. No one was reported injured.

Unarmed Malta police tried to control the crowd of some 4,000 demonstrators as it spilled into the street outside labor party headquarters in suburban Marsa.

The upsurge of violence presaged more trouble as labor party leader Dom Mintoff, haranguing the crowd from a parked truck, urged members to show dissatisfaction at the official ceremonies.

The labor party claims the island's independence in close association with Britain constitutes a "sellout" and "British occupation."

Fox Cities Only Have TV Outage

GREEN BAY — A massive power failure preceded by a spectacular fireworks display thrust the city and almost all of northeastern Wisconsin into darkness about 9:35 p.m. Saturday.

Early reports said a main transformer "blew out."

Shortly before the power went off, lights throughout the city dimmed.

In the northeast portion of the city, in the area of the paper mills, witnesses said there was a "tremendous flash, intensely bright," and splattered with oranges, reds and greens.

The flash appeared to be "high in the sky," and continued for a period of a few minutes. It extended to the east for a mile or a mile and one-half, appearing to follow a main power transmission line.

TV Screens Black

Every light within the city went out.

All three of the city's television stations went off the air, leaving TV screens black throughout northeastern Wisconsin.

One of the stations, WFRV, Channel 5, was able to come back on the air for brief periods through power generated on its own facilities.

By 10:30 p.m. some of the lights had come back on in the downtown area.

The Green Bay Press-Gazette was 90 minutes from press time for its Sunday edition when the failure occurred. Until power was restored, candles provided the only light in the city room.

Closest U. S. Ally

British Elections Get Little Attention From Americans

BY LEWIS GULICK
WASHINGTON (AP) — Tough Great Britain is America's closest ally around the world, its election campaign is drawing less than rapt attention from the U. S. public and officials.

Around the United States, the contest between the Conservatives and Laborites for British electoral approval Oct. 15 has produced few front-page headlines in the American press.

In Washington, authorities are keeping one eye on the British campaign. But they seem more absorbed in situations like South Viet Nam and Cyprus, not to mention the race between Democrat Lyndon B. Johnson and Republican Barry Goldwater to be decided at U. S. polls Nov. 3.

Some Britons have been known to grumble that the Americans are not paying as much notice to the British campaign as the British are to the American one.

State Department sources see this as no slap at Britain's importance as a prime foreign affairs partner of the United States from North Atlantic Treaty Organization to South Asia. They figure, rather, that the British campaigners are neither seeking much change in London's policy toward the United States nor focusing on issues likely to excite Americans.

According to an analysis here: —Both Prime Minister Sir Alec Douglas-Home's Conservatives and Harold Wilson's Labor party have shown in their electioneering that they intend to continue close and friendly working relationships with the United States.

—The Labor party has toned down its "socialism," once a lively topic among private enterprise-minded Americans, to a position which in practice it would not be too far from the Tories.

Nationalization of the steel industry, as proposed by Labor, would be of interest to Americans. But they recall Britain's steel has been nationalized and denationalized before. On other economic and social issues, both parties are promising improvements.

Labor's declared opposition to the U. S.-proposed Allied nuclear fleet and intent to renegotiate the 1962 Kennedy-Macmillan Nassau agreement for Polaris missiles to Britain runs against U. S. policy.

But here again U. S. sources believe that if Labor steps into government responsibilities after 13 years out of power, it will find that hard practicalities can force a toning down of pre-election plans.

Intersection Being Readied for Study
By State Officials

Another accident involving injuries occurred Saturday evening at the intersection of W. College Avenue and U.S. 41, an intersection slated for serious study by state highway officials. Injured were Henry W. Schoenberg, 48, of Milwaukee, driver of a car going north on 41, and Mrs. Clara M. Sack, 72, driver of a second car going west on W. College Avenue across U. S. 41, and Miss Emily Jackson, 65, both of 316 Clark St., Neenah. Miss Jackson was a passenger in Mrs. Sack's car. County Patrolman Robert Keating said the car driven by Mrs. Sack started across the U.S. 41 and was struck by Schoenberg's car.

Lindy's Ambulance Service took Schoenberg to Appleton Memorial Hospital where he remained overnight for observation. Miss Jackson and Mrs. Sack were taken to Theda Clark Hospital in Neenah where they were treated for minor cuts and released.

City of Appleton and county officials have requested state highway authorities to begin studies for possible construction of an overpass at the intersection. The crossing has been the scene of numerous car accidents this year.

North Dakota Republican, was not at the contest, but sent Goldwater a telegraphed pledge of support. Earlier, a North Dakota republican official had announced Young would introduce Goldwater, but Young's office said he had not agreed to do so.

Sen. Karl E. Mundt, R-S.D., said he and Young were supplied earlier in the week with an advance draft of Goldwater's talk, had suggested some changes, but were told the advance text already had been released.

Young and Goldwater have frequently differed over farm legislation.

Goldwater said he supports the Republican farm platform "plank by plank" but — like Humphrey — did not spell out the program in detail.

Humphrey quoted from Goldwater's book, "The Conscience of a Conservative," a passage urging an end to farm price supports.

"This," said the Democratic candidate, "is the death sentence to agriculture."

The Arizona senator said Saturday that farm income should be improved but not with "arbitrary handouts subject to the whim and caprice" of Agriculture Secretary Orville L. Freeman.

Humphrey declared it is not fair for farmers to suffer income losses for producing — for the national benefit — more than can be used domestically.

He added present programs for tobacco, peanuts, rice and sugar seem generally to be working out but that changes are needed for wheat, feed grains, dairy products and cotton.

Goldwater, switching to a world affairs theme, asserted: "We have to undo all the horrible bungling of the last four years that has brought this country to war."

Several times Goldwater has asserted that the fighting in South Viet Nam is a real war.

tic basin is the heartland of the free world," the U.S. three-star admiral said. "It is absolutely essential that the North Atlantic Treaty Organization's maritime forces maintain control in face of a growing maritime threat from the Soviet Union."

"Therefore, we feel the upcoming exercise is very important."

The last major NATO exercise of this type was held in 1960.

The coming maneuvers will involve striking fleet operations, antisubmarine warfare, mining and mine-sweeping operations and convoy escort duty.

First Segment

The first segment will involve maneuvers of the striking fleet in the eastern Atlantic. It will provide mock conventional and nuclear support to the Allied Command, Europe, for six days and also will run antisubmarine warfare drills.

Then the fleet will move into more southern waters of the Atlantic for resupply and head for the English Channel approaches.

The second major segment of the exercise concerns operations in the vicinity of the channel. It will involve mining convoy anchorages and selected ports in the channel and North Sea areas, mine-sweeping and antisubmarine warfare protection of shipping in the approaches to Europe.

Convoy Exercise

The third part, which Hogle called one of the most interesting of the exercise, will deal with convoys.

"For the first time since World War II, a rather extensive test will be made of current capabilities in the convoy field," Hogle said.

To accomplish this test, he said, a sizable amount of money was allocated by NATO to charter 19 merchant vessels for the exercise.

The convoy will be protected by service escorts and patrol planes and will be subjected to mock attack at sea by submarines.

32 Seasick Cadets Make Port With Canadian Vessel

Rough Waters of Lake Erie

CONNEAUT, Ohio (AP) — A crippled 136-foot Canadian vessel, object of a Coast Guard search in rough Lake Erie for more than four hours, churned into this Lake Erie port Saturday night on one engine with 32 teen-age Sea Cadets aboard.

Many of those on the vessel, the Rhea, a converted American minesweeper missing since noon, were seasick. Their white uniforms were smeared with grease from trying to repair clogged-up fuel oil lines.

All were reported safe after drifting for five hours when the boat's two diesel engines failed four hours out of Port Stanley on the Canadian side. The boat left Port Stanley for the 55-mile voyage to Conneaut at 6.

There were five-foot swells and visibility was about eight miles.

Lt. Thomas Raymond, skipper of the Canadian training vessel, said he thought sludge in the fuel oil tanks plugged up the fuel lines after radio communication stopped. Messages could be received but none could be sent.

"The seas were so rough and we had an awful time getting things straightened out," said Raymond, of London, Ont. "We weren't worried but many of the cadets got seasick from the smell of fuel oil while taking turns working with an engineer on the lines."

"The fog was pretty bad, too. But we rolled and tossed a lot and the cadets had to don life jackets."

Three other officers and two adults also were aboard the 325-ton craft. Many of the cadets, ranging in age from 15 to 17, had made the same trip under normal conditions many times.

Khrushchev Offers Arms to Those Who Fight Colonialism

Denounces War in Speech To Red World Youth Forum

MOSCOW (AP) — Premier Khrushchev denounced war as terrible Saturday, but said people fighting colonialism are welcome to Soviet arms.

"We are for peaceful coexistence," Khrushchev told delegates to the pro-Communist World Youth Forum. Then, waving his right arm and clenching his fist, Khrushchev added:

"All people fighting colonialism who need weapons and can possibly take them from the Soviet Union, please take them. Many people who have won victory fought with our weapons. Many newly liberated states have our weapons.

"And for those who need them, we are ready to discuss in a brotherly fashion and give our help."

Public Understanding

Khrushchev asserted, however, that public understanding of a people's fight is much more important than weapons.

In this portion of his 45-minute extemporaneous speech at a Kremlin reception, Khrushchev mentioned South Viet Nam and South Korea, which he said are "occupied by American imperialists."

The fight is on in Viet Nam, he said, because the people are ready for it. In South Korea, "The temperature is not the same because they (the people) are not ready," he said.

Nations most recently on the Soviet list for arms are Indonesia and India. Cyprus has asked for Soviet military aid in fear of a Turkish attack.

A Cypriot Mission

A Cypriot mission is now in Moscow and its chief, Andreas Araouzos, told a newsman after a meeting with Khrushchev that he expects the Russians to give military aid as well as general assistance to the Greek Cypriots.

18 High Schools Have Enrollments Below 100

Post-Crescent Madison Bureau

MADISON—There remain 18 high schools in the state with total enrollment of less than 100 pupils, the state department of public instruction has reported, on the basis of last year's enrollment data.

The department has frequently advised the legislature it is unwise to permit the operation of a high school with fewer than 100 students, for economic and educational reasons.

on the eastern Mediterranean island.

Later, however, the Tass news agency said only that Khrushchev promised to consider the Cypriot request "most attentively."

An Indonesian arms mission was here in July seeking help for Indonesia's campaign to crush the new neighboring federation of Malaysia. The Indonesians charge that the British-backed federation is neo-colonialist.

India got a promise of planes and other equipment. The Indians will add this aid to that already given by the United States during and after India's border clashes with Red Chinese troops.

Heated Speech

Khrushchev appeared most heated in his speech in a new attack on the Red Chinese, although he did not once name China. Referring to ideological differences separating the two Communist giants, he said:

"It is only those who do not believe in the superiority of the Socialist system who criticize our preoccupation with economic problems."

Revolutionary slogans can hold an oppressed man's attention today, tomorrow and the day after, but on the fourth day, the man will tell the person with the slogan "to go to hell," he said.

Khrushchev almost shouted this criticism of the Chinese, whom the Russians accuse of offering slogans rather than bread to the hungry people of the world.

Delegates Applauded

As he spoke and the delegates applauded, a group of Chinese stayed at the buffet and continued eating, in silence.

Once again, Khrushchev denied that he told a visiting Japanese delegation last week that the Soviet Union had a new weapon that could wipe out life on earth. He said that last Monday he visited military scientists and engineers outside Moscow.

"I did not look at hydrogen or atomic bombs, but I saw an assortment of weapons used for infantry, artillery, tanks and rockets," he said. "I saw them and I said, 'See what man has built for man. It's terrible.'"

A member of the Japanese delegation told newsmen after the meeting with Khrushchev that the Soviet leader mentioned a weapon that could wipe out mankind.

The XB70A Supersonic Bomber, finally ready for flight tests after several years of controversy over its worth, drags its slow-down parachutes behind at the end of a taxi test at North American Aviation's Palm-dale, Calif., plant Friday. The 185-foot ship is scheduled to make its first flight Monday. More than $1 billion have been spent on the plane and a sister plane which is not yet finished. (AP Wirephoto)

Death Sentence For Convict in Beloit Slaying

ROCKFORD, Ill. (AP) — A transient convict has been sentenced to die in the electric chair at Statesville Prison in Joliet for the murder of the husband of his former girl friend.

Orville T. Waldron, 41, was sentenced Friday by Judge Albert S. O'Sullivan in the Winnebago County Circuit Court. He set Dec. 9 for the execution.

Waldron, who had served a prison term in Florida for the slaying of an Air Force colonel in 1954, was convicted July 28 of the murder of Claude Fallin, 38, of Chicago in a South Beloit tavern March 15.

Police, acting on a tip, entered the bar as Waldron shot Fallin. A gunbattle ensued and a bystander, Louis Haseman, 32, of South Beloit also was killed.

Waldron was also charged with Haseman's slaying but an autopsy showed he died of a shot fired by a policeman. Police said this charge will be dropped.

During Waldron's trial, witnesses testified that he had lived several months in New Hampshire with Fallin's wife, Nancy.

Policeman and Convict Die In Gun Battle

LUMBERTON, N.C. (AP) — Two escaped convicts and two highway patrolmen shot it out by the lights of a patrol cruiser near here early Saturday. A convict and a patrolman were killed in the gun battle.

The second convict was flushed from woods about four hours later, ending a three-day reign of terror which began when the convicts escaped from a Central Prison work detail in Raleigh.

Officers said during that time they stole a car, obtained arms and ammunition from a National Guard break-in and were linked with the wounding of a defenseless farm couple.

Goldwater and Hayden Try To Get More Arizona Water

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Barry Goldwater and his Arizona colleague, Sen. Carl Hayden, a Democrat, are fighting in Congress to get $1 billion in federal money for a giant irrigation and power project in Arizona.

Is this a contradiction for Goldwater, now the Republican presidential nominee, who is campaigning for less federal government, and is in favor of the break-up of the Tennessee Valley Authority?

Not at all, in the Goldwater view. He sees the Central Arizona Project as essentially a reclamation project, which he considers a valid federal concern.

Difference TVA, he says, began as a reclamation project that would "sell a little power on the side," but has grown to a point that 83 per cent of TVA's investment is in power and it is one of the largest single power systems under one ownership in the country.

The Central Arizona Project, both he and Hayden hold, is based on water conservation, a vital matter to vast areas of the West.

The two senators, while on different sides of the political fence, teamed up on June 4, 1963, to introduce the Central Arizona Project bill in the Senate. This was the day after the Supreme Court upheld Arizona's claim to 2.8-million acre feet of water annually from the Colorado river in an 11-year-old lawsuit against California.

With California water interests still battling to protect the Colorado River water they are now using or to get a substitute supply from elsewhere, the Senate Interior Committee recently approved an amended Hayden-Goldwater bill to incorporate the Central Arizona Project in the first phase of a southwest regional water development plan.

The amended bill, which would authorize projects totaling $1.3 billion in Arizona, New Mexico and Nevada, still has Hayden-Goldwater backing. Aides said Goldwater considers it the single most important piece of legislation he has sponsored in his 12 years in Congress.

The Central Arizona Project, estimated to cost $1.1 billion, is designed to bring 1.2 million acre feet of Colorado River water annually to the Phoenix-Tucson area. An acre-foot is the volume of water needed to cover an acre of ground one foot deep, or about 325,850 gallons.

In central Arizona, underground water is being pumped out at a rate four times its natural recharge. The overdraft is estimated at 2.2 million acre feet annually.

The bill would authorize two more giant dams on the Colorado River between Hoover Dam and the new Glen Canyon Dam on the Arizona-Utah border. Bridge Canyon Dam, 740 feet high, would generate 4.8 billion kilowatt hours of electricity per year. Marble Canyon Dam, 310 feet above stream bed, would generate 2.3 billion kilowatt hours annually.

Water would be taken from the Colorado River near Parker Dam. It would be pumped 969 feet over mountains, then flow by gravity through a 220-mile aqueduct into central Arizona. Additional canals and dams would provide water for Pinal County and Tucson.

Water Prices Two-thirds of the water would be supplied to land already under irrigation from well water. The remainder would go for municipal and industrial use.

Irrigation water would be sold for $10 an acre foot; municipal water for $45 an acre foot — not enough to repay for the project. After supplying energy to operate project pumps, power from the dams would be sold at 6 mills per kilowatt hour to repay in 50 years the cost of the dams and transmission lines, with interest, and to help farmers repay the cost of the irrigation features, without interest. After the payout the power revenues would go into a fund to help pay for other water developments. Lumped into the proposed regional development is the $28-million Hooker Dam irrigation project in New Mexico and a $72-million municipal water supply project for the Las Vegas, Nev., area.

Lacks Support Project costs which the federal treasury would not expect to recover total $96.4 million assigned to such public purposes as recreation, fish and wildlife advancement flood control and area redevelopment.

Although determined by Reclamation Bureau engineers to be economically and engineeringly feasible, the Central Arizona Project has failed to win full-scale Johnson administration endorsement.

'Interesting Eccentric'

Big White Tycoon Seeks Aid for African Blacks

BY STAN SWINTON.
JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — "People merely consider me an interesting eccentric."

But this "interesting eccentric," Harry Frederick Oppenheimer, heads an empire of some 150 companies which produce diamonds, gold, copper and a sizeable portion of Africa's mineral and industrial output.

Oppenheimer, one of the most interesting white men in Africa, is as many-faceted as the diamonds he mines.

He is a tycoon controlling an economic organization worth at least $3 billion. The annual report of his Anglo-American Corp. of South Africa Ltd., takes 78 pages to list its holdings and accomplishments.

Wide Interests

Oppenheimer can discuss art, music, poetry or literature in four or five languages — and do the same about horses or rugby. Behind him is a record of honors at Oxford and distinction in service with the British 8th Army in North Africa.

Most of all, Oppenheimer is a voice of moderation in South Africa, where the aspirations of white and black men seem headed on a collision course.

The political outcome in that crucial nation will weigh heavily in the future of the continent.

With six per cent of Africa's population, South Africa produces about 30 per cent of the continent's industrial goods. Her gold (over 20 per cent of free world production), diamonds (over half of world production) with marketing control of at least 85 per cent of world production, copper and heavy industry can speed African development by decades — or, if isolated from the remainder of the continent, can commensurately slow it.

Apartheid

The crucial South African issue, internally and internationally, is apartheid, the South African government's basic policy of separating the nation's 3,250,300 whites from the 11,645,000 blacks, called Bantus here; 1,648,000 mixed bloods or colored and 522,000 Asians.

Behind a gleaming hardwood table at Anglo-American headquarters, Harry Oppenheimer discussed the problem and offered his solution in an interview.

"The Africans in a material way are better off in South Africa than elsewhere on the continent. But if people are in prison, it doesn't matter how agreeable the prison is."

Economic Goal

Outside South Africa, many people expect a bloody clash between white and non-white ancestry, concur. The primary goal of most black South Africans presently appears economic rather than political. Oppenheimer agrees with this view.

What would Oppenheimer do to bridge this gap between white and non-white in Africa?

"I'd remove the things which themselves have become symbols creating bitterness."

"First, remove the land apartheid act (which seeks to create separate areas for whites, coloreds, Asians and blacks)."

"Second, take more black Africans into the civil service."

"Third, have Africans in Parliament."

"Fourth, couple this with a crash educational program."

Opportunities

He also believes that the black African must be given more economic opportunities, a field in which he practices what he preaches. Oppenheimer persuaded South African unions to open many job categories to blacks. He feels that more must be done.

Further increases in South African production and a more efficient labor force "will be limited unless we can train the labor force, particularly non-Europeans, far better, organize industry to make full use of the skills they acquire. In South Africa, 60 per cent of the workers in industry are classed as unskilled as compared with 15 per cent in the United States of America."

Economically, Harry Oppenheimer is one of the most important men on the African continent. Because of this, and since he is respected and liked personally, his political ideas are heard if not generally followed.

Oppenheimer, the philosopher, believes in reason. That is why Oppenheimer remains optimistic about a peaceful solution in a land where much of the world expects bloodshed.

$1 Million Kenron Plant Being Constructed

A $1 million general offices building and manufacturing plant is being constructed by Kenron Awning & Window Corporation which has a branch office in Appleton, in the Chicago suburb of Niles.

The company, one of the nation's largest manufacturers of awnings, storm windows and doors, and patios, now has its main office and manufacturing plant in Chicago. The branch office here is one of 20 branch offices in major cities in eight states.

Bernard H. Feld, president of Kenron, has informed David Stucker, manager of Kenron's Appleton branch office, that the new plant will include an automated fiberglass producing unit that will enable the company to meet much of its own need for awning fiberglass.

With the acquisition of a fiberglass manufacturing company earlier this year, Kenron became the only company of its kind in the country able to control the manufacture of its product from the raw material stage to the finished article.

Features of the new plant include use of fiberglass instead of glass for windows on two sides of the building, and extensive use in the general offices section of sandwich core fiberglass panels in various colors to provide a striking interior decor. Kenron expects to occupy its new building in November.

15 Million Voters

REA Co-Operators Fear Goldwater

BY OVID A. MARTIN
WASHINGTON (AP) — A grass roots campaign is under way to line up for President Johnson the 15 million or more rural voters supplied by Rural Electrification Administration power and telephone systems.

For the first time since the creation of the REA in 1935, its non-governmental backers are throwing their whole weight in a drive to help defeat a presidential candidate — GOP nominee Barry Goldwater.

The job of doing this is being directed by Clyde T. Ellis, general manager of the National Rural Electric Cooperative Association — NRECA. Ellis, a native of Arkansas, has been a militant battler for the rural power and telephone systems.

Ellis contends that the future of these systems is at stake in the November election. He says Goldwater would do away with them. He cites the GOP candidate's voting record in the Senate on measures relating to REA and the Arizona senator's statements and speeches.

The REA itself is not engaged in the campaign. It is a unit of the Agriculture Department. It makes loans to local farmer cooperatives, public power districts and to local telephone concerns to help finance local power and telephone projects. It exercises a degree of supervision over the borrowers to help protect the government's investments.

Ellis' organization is a private group maintained to help promote the REA program before Congress and the public. Its members are the borrowers of the REA.

The REA administrator, who is a presidential appointee, is not forbidden by law, as are those under him, from making political speeches or engaging in political activity.

Democrats Lean
In all previous presidential campaigns since the REA was created, it had the support and endorsement of both major political parties and of their candidates. However, the program's strongest backers tend to lean more favorably toward the Democrats.

Ellis and his organization had some differences with the Eisenhower administration over the latter's unsuccessful efforts to get Congress to raise interest rates on the government loans from the 2 per cent a year which has prevailed since the program was started to a rate sufficient to cover the government's cost of money.

The REA power and telephone systems have a powerful voting potential. There are 1,000 such power and 816 telephone systems financed by the government loans. They operate in every state and cover a big bulk of the rural counties.

Records Compound
"The election of Goldwater in November would be a catastrophe for rural America," Ellis said in a recent statement. "He has said that the REA has outlived its usefulness. He has said the agency should be dissolved. He has said that the electric co-ops should get out and let the power companies move in. In his 10 years in the U.S. Senate, Senator Goldwater has voted unfavorably on legislation affecting rural electrification 35 times. He has voted with us only three times."

By contrast, Ellis said, both President Johnson and his vice-presidential running mate, Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey of Minnesota, "have long and brilliant records of support of important rural programs."

The GOP national platform pledged "continued support of farmer-owned and operated cooperatives, including rural electric and telephone facilities." But this platform pledge is being discounted by the REA backers. Rather, they are giving weight to past Goldwater statements criticizing the program.

REA Influence
The influence of the REA systems extends into many small communities and towns which depend on them for electrical and telephone service as well as for jobs.

The REA has extended loans totaling $4.5 billion to help build rural power systems and $877 million to set up rural telephone systems. The electric borrowers have made interest and principal payments totaling $2.1 billion and the telephone borrowers have made payments totaling $146 million.

Some Thief Totem Old Pole Away

CHICAGO (AP) — Vivian Lenord's totem pole has been stolen. But it shouldn't be hard to find.

It weighs 150-200 pounds, is eight feet tall and — from top to bottom — has an open-mouthed eagle, a chief and a fish. It's blue, green and white. It's said to be 200 years old.

Mrs. Lenord told police Friday she bought the Alaskan Indian totem pole 22 years ago for $150. She says it's now worth some $4,000.

Mrs. Lenord offered $200 for return of the totem pole.

Kaukauna Ground Attack Crushes New London, 26-0

Promer and Dercks Help Ghosts Rush for Total of 386 Yards

BY TOM VANDERPAS
Post-Crescent Staff Writer

KAUKAUNA — Hopes for a successful Mid-Eastern Conference season mushroomed for Kaukauna's Galloping Ghosts here Saturday afternoon as they unveiled a solid ground attack which clocked for 386 yards and four touchdowns, enroute to a 26-0 trouncing of New London's Bulldogs.

In registering the win in its first league encounter, the Ghosts took some of the sting out of last week's opening debacle, a 34-6 non-conference loss to Neenah.

Coach Harry Wilson's charges completely dominated this one as revealed in the first half statistics which saw Kaukauna roll for 12 first downs and 200 yards rushing, while limiting the Bulldogs to no first downs and a paltry three yards on the ground.

Waste Little Time
The Ghosts wasted little time in denting the scoring column. After receiving the opening kickoff, it took but eight plays from scrimmage to rack up their first touchdown.

Bob Promer and Stan Dercks did all the ball carrying in the drive, with the latter netting 32 yards in three tries and Promer gaining 31 in five attempts, including the final 10 yards for the TD. Mark Nussbaum's successful point-after-kick made it 7-0 for Kaukauna.

New London's ensuing series went for nil and the Ghosts were back in business. It took 12 plays this time but the result was the same, with quarterback Bob Main sneaking the final yard for the tally early in the second quarter. The score stayed 13-0 when Nussbaum got a bad bounce from the goal post on his conversion attempt.

Dercks Scores

New London continued to have managed to hold the Ghosts trouble moving the ball but at bay until about one minute was left in the half, when Dercks crashed into the end zone from two yards out. Nussbaum split the uprights and it was 20-0 at halftime.

On the initial series of the third stanza, the Bulldogs got their only two first downs of the game. Terry Sullivan accounted for both of them on dashes of five and 11 yards, respectively, in moving the ball to Kaukauna's 37-yard line.

Two incomplete passes foiled New London's bid to get on the scoreboard and the Ghosts took over from their own nine after the Bulldogs punted.

Five plays later, Dercks skirted the left side and skinned down the sideline on a 73-yard touchdown jaunt. The conversion try failed and the count stood at 26-0.

The Bulldogs' most serious threat came late in the third stanza when they recovered a fumbled punt on the Ghosts' 23. The best they could do was gain three yards in four plays, ending the TD bid.

Kaukauna recorded 18 first downs to a pair for New London and gained an over-all total of 404 yards, while limiting the Bulldogs to 53.

Individually, Dercks gained 163 yards in 15 attempts and Promer netted 86 yards in 17 carries for Kaukauna.

FVL Scores 14-6 Win Over Gibraltar

Foxes Take Advantage of Early Breaks, Then Hold on Defensively

BY TIM PETERMANN

FISH CREEK — Fox Valley Lutheran High School took advantage of some breaks early in the first half and then held on defensively for a 14-6 victory over a stubborn Gibraltar High School unit here Saturday afternoon.

The Foxes marched 62 yards after the opening kickoff for a touchdown. The drive was aided by a pair of penalties against the Vikings. The touchdown came on a 16-yard pass over the middle from Brian Erickson to halfback Mark Dahlke. Erickson booted the extra point.

Gibraltar fumbled the ensuing kickoff and Fox Lutheran's Bill Neubauer recovered. The Foxes were unable to advance and had to give up the ball in four plays.

Gibraltar failed to advance and punted. The Foxes also had trouble getting yardage and Dave Tiedt stepped back and booted a 66-yard punt that was downed on the Gibraltar nine.

The first play lost three yards and then a bad hike was recovered by FVL's Sheldon Schneidewen on the 5-yard line. On fourth down Gary Busch rammed over from the one-foot line for the score. Erickson converted.

The ball exchanged possession twice before Gibraltar launched its lone touchdown drive from the Viking 44. A 15-yard Murray Sitte to Greg Bell pass, an interference penalty and 10-yard run by Tom Koessl set up the score. Koessl swept the end from two yards out for six points. The PAT attempt failed. FVL held its 14-6 edge at intermission.

The scoreless second half started with Gibraltar moving the ball 55 yards to the FVL 5 before relinquishing possession on downs. FVL failed to mount an offensive attack and Gibraltar took possession only to lose it on an interception by Foxes' Jeff Volkman.

Fox Lutheran was again forced to punt and Gibraltar lost the ball on its first ensuing play when Mark Dahlke intercepted a Sitte aerial at mid-field.

Four exchanges of possession, with the Foxes threatening twice, led to Gibraltar's valiant effort that ended on the Foxes' 14-yard marker as the gun sounded.

South Scores 26-6 Win Over Fond du Lac

Cards Score on Unique Double-Pass; Lauf Gains 176 Yards

SHEBOYGAN — Sheboygan South rolled up its second straight Fox River Valley Conference victory with a 26-6 verdict over Fond du Lac here Saturday.

Dick Lauf scored for the victors twice in the first period on runs of 83 and 4 yards. Lauf finished with 176 yards rushing in 13 trips. Dennis Kaboord converted after the second South score for a 13-0 edge.

The Cardinals hit the scoreboard late in the first period on a unique double-pass play from Larry Borneman to Steve Toshner to Leo Goldapske for 34 yards and six points. Borneman hit Toshner behind the scrimmage line and Toshner rifled a perfect strike to Goldapske downfield, capping a 72-yard march.

South increased the margin to 26-6 at intermission with a second period score on a plunge by Bill Gilmore from three yards out. Kaboord converted.

Quarterback Bill Bensm capped an 81-yard South march in the fourth period for the TD on a one-yard plunge.

Borneman's arm paced the Fond du Lac attack with 11 completions in 23 passing attempts. Fond du Lac's ground game managed eight yards while the passing attack led to 168 yards.

Titles, Distinguished Service Accent Kolf's Lengthy Career

Bob Once Comprised School's Entire Athletic Department

BY DON CASTONIA
Post-Crescent Staff Writer

OSHKOSH — It was 45 years ago that a young man, just returned from naval service in World War I, entered what is now Wisconsin State University-Oshkosh as a freshman student. Except for four breaks, Robert Kolf has been a fixture at WSU-O since — first as an assistant coach, then as head coach and now as athletic director.

This unparalleled service in state college coaching circles was recognized Saturday with a day-long tribute from townspeople, fellow coaches, friends and former athletes who honored him in a "45 Years with Bob Kolf" program.

There was a time when the athletic department at the school consisted of Kolf and Kolf alone. He coached the football, basketball, track, tennis and golf teams and handled the intramural program. He also taught physical education. Needless to say, he was kept busy.

Today, Kolf heads an 8-man athletic department staff and has retained only the golf team as an active coaching duty and devotes the rest of his time to coordinating the multi-sport program as athletic director.

Win Their Share

Despite the handicap of handling all of the sports and working during the era of extreme de-emphasis under President Forest Polk, Kolf's teams won their share of conference championships, including three occasions of back-to-back basketball titles and eight consecutive tennis crowns.

He played on an undefeated football team at the then Oshkosh Normal School in 1920 and then coached the 1924-25 basketball team through an undefeated season. One of the highlights of his career, he admits, was winning three straight conference Southern division basketball titles in 1947-48-49. The first two of those years they swept the overall conference championship.

"Of course, you remember your championship teams the best," the veteran coach said. "But I think what stands out the most in my memory is the outstanding caliber of men who played under me and my association with Coach Howard Hancock and Dr. Burton Kargus."

Hancock was football coach at Oshkosh from 1921 until 1931 when he became coach at Illinois State University at Normal. Kargus has been faculty athletic representative for WSU-O for more than 20 years.

Works in Bank

A native of Minneapolis, Kolf came to Oshkosh as a small boy and attended grade school and high school here, graduating in 1915. He worked in a bank for two years and then entered the navy, serving on a destroyer. In 1919 he enrolled at Oshkosh Normal School.

During that 3-year span (the curriculum was not expanded to four years until 1927) Oshkosh won two divisional and one overall football title and one overall basketball championship. The 1919 and 1921 teams each lost only one football game while the 1920 squad was undefeated. Kolf played halfback and quarterback and captained the 1920 team. The 1920-21 basketball team, of which Kolf was a mainstay, also won the title. High School and coached football and basketball, taking his basketball team to the state tournament. They lost to Appleton by one point in the first game but then went on to win the consolation title.

He returned to Oshkosh Normal in 1923 as head basketball coach and football assistant to Hancock and the school annexed both titles. He repeated his basketball championship the next year with an undefeated team.

In 1926 he went to Ripon College to earn his bachelor's degree and coached their basketball team and promptly won the Midwest Conference crown. Upon his return to Oshkosh the next year he won another cage title.

Named Head Coach

He took another leave in 1930 to earn his masters degree and, with the departure of Hancock, became head coach in all sports in 1931. His 1935 football team produced a championship and he won back-to-back basketball crowns in 1938 and 1939.

From 1944 to 1946 Kolf served as Lt. Commander in the Navy, then returned to Oshkosh and won three more basketball titles. Since then, as the school has grown, Kolf has gradually turned over active coaching duties to new men to devote more time to administration of the department. In 1957 Eric Kitzman became basketball coach and in 1963 Russ Young took over the football team.

In 1923 Kolf married his college sweetheart, Marie Finnegan, of Fond du Lac. They have two children, a daughter, Mrs. Betty Kranz, who lives in California, and a son, Robert Jr. a former athletic great, who now lives in Salt Lake City, Utah.

Iowa State Opens Season With 25-0 Win Over Drake

AMES, Iowa (AP) — Fumbles were more frequent than touchdowns as Iowa State opened its 73rd football season with a 25-0 victory over Drake Saturday.

The Cyclones converted two of Drake's fumbles into scores — one a 32-yard field goal by Steve Balkovec in the second quarter when Iowa State scored 17 points.

The Cyclones, after a sluggish start, marched 85 yards in 14 plays for their first touchdown. Mike Cox scored three plays after Ken Bunte's 16-yard touchdown pass to Dennis Alitz was nullified by a holding penalty.

Ten minutes later another Cox touchdown was called back by a holding penalty. However, Tom Vaughn made up for the error three plays later when he scooted over from three yards out.

End George Maurer set up Iowa State's third touchdown by clocking Manley Sarnowsky's punt in the third quarter. The Cyclones needed five plays to go 3 yards for the score, with sophomore fullback Tony Baker going the last four yards.

Robert M. Kolf, Athletic Director, coach, star athlete and instructor at Wisconsin State University-Oshkosh, was honored on "Bob Kolf Day" for his 45 years of service to the school. (Post-Crescent Photo)

Harry Craft Fired As Colt Manager

Coach Luman Harris Elevated To Top Job by Paul Richards

HOUSTON (AP) — The Houston Colts fired Manager Harry Craft Saturday with only 13 games left to be played. Veteran third base coach Luman Harris was named to succeed him.

The announcement was made by General Manager Paul Richards at a news conference. He said Harris, who has been a coach with the club since its entry into the National League in 1962, signed a two-year contract, for the 1965 and 1966 seasons.

Harris began his new duties by directing the Colts Saturday night against the New York Mets.

Harris is believed to have received a contract calling for just under $30,000 a year. Craft's one-year contract was to have expired at the end of the current season.

Craft, 49, was Houston's last minor league manager as well

Northwestern Records 7-3 Opening Win

Tom Myers Hits On 6 of 7 passes During TD Drive

EVANSTON, Ill. (AP) — Steve Murphy's rushing and one hot hand by passing ace Tom Myers lifted Northwestern to a 7-3 opening football victory over Oregon State Saturday.

Coach Alex Agase's debut was a success as Northwestern drove 95 yards for its touchdown in the second quarter and a hard-charging defense never allowed Oregon State's multiple offense to get into gear.

Murphy, who gained 94 yards in 24 carries, climaxed a Northwestern touchdown drive with a one-yard plunge, after Myers completed six of seven passes in the drive to set up the score.

32-Yard Boot

Oregon State's only score also came in the second quarter, when the Beavers recovered a fumble on the Northwestern 47 and marched to the Northwestern nine, but were thrown for a loss and had to settle for a 32-yard field goal by Steve Clark.

Oregon State was in charge in the first quarter and the Beavers put on a lengthy drive to the Northwestern four, but the Wildcats turned back the charge when Booker Washington failed on a fourth-and-one situation.

Northwestern punted out of immediate danger only to have Dan Espalin's return punt die on the Wildcat five. Myers then passed the Big Ten team to the Beaver 27.

A couple of five-yard penalties and three rushes by Murphy moved the ball to the one from where Murphy hammered over for the score.

Oregon State 0 3 0 0-3
Northwestern 0 7 0 0-7
NU — Murphy 1 plunge (Dickie kick).
OS — FG Clark 32

as its first major league manager.

Houston finished eighth the first year, ninth last year and currently is ninth, 10 games ahead of the last-place Mets.

Richards said the change was being made at this time so Craft will have a chance to negotiate with other teams in the usual season-end baseball job shuffle.

At that time they didn't want to let colored soldiers go to officer's training school. I called up Truman Gibson who was a civilian helper to the Secretary of War, Patterson, I think it was. He came down and we had a meeting with all the non-coms and everything.

Finally I got straightened out and they let 10 or 12 colored boys go to officer's training school. But it wasn't until I called Truman.

A lot of men, when they get to be 50 years old, look around and tell people they wished they had a chance to do things over again. Not me. I have no sour grapes. The only change I would make would be to go to school and stay in school a little longer.

At Least to Fourth

To tell you the truth I don't know how long I went to school. I know I went at least to the fourth grade. But when my mother took me to school down in Alabama I walked right back home behind her. The most time I spent in school was after we moved to Detroit.

Maybe if I had a good education I would have saved more money because a lot of people say that I have good horse sense. Maybe horse sense is better than a good education.

But I think today a kid should have an education to get along in this world because the way the world is today you've got to have a good education to make it.

From a fighter's standpoint and from a business standpoint, I don't know nothing I would change. I think I've been treated very well. I've had the good fortune to meet a lot of wonderful people and make a lot of wonderful friends.

Two Children

I have two children, Jacqueline and Joe Louis, Jr. They live with Marva Trotter, my first wife, in Chicago. Jackie, who is 21, just got out of school and she is working for her mother in a big department store in Chicago. She went to Fisk University and then went out to California for a year of college in Los Angeles.

Joe is going to school. He's 17 and he will be a freshman this year at Boston University. He wants to be a lawyer and he wants to go to Harvard. I think they told him he had to go to Boston University for two years and then they'd look at his grades and move him over if everything was all right.

As for myself, I just bought a house out in Denver for me and my wife, Martha Malone Jefferson. She's a lawyer. We've been married about five years. (Associated Press 1964)

Contradictory Rules Used to Make Emerich Ineligible at Oshkosh

Conference Votes 5-4 Not to Allow Athlete to Compete

BY DON CASTONIA
Post-Crescent Staff Writer

OSHKOSH — The case against Dave Emerich.

Emerich, as most East Central Wisconsin sports fans know, was an All-Mid-eastern Conference halfback at New London High School.

He later attended Wisconsin State University-Stevens Point where he played one season of football and then transferred to Wisconsin State University-Oshkosh at mid-year last year, where his brother, Dick, is an all-conference end.

A week ago the conference faculty representatives declared Dave Emerich ineligible for competition this semester because, in their opinion, he had not fulfilled the conference's one-semester residency transfer rule. The vote was 5-4.

Paid His Fees

Emerich had filled out a schedule and paid fees to attend Stevens Point the spring semester of 1964 but withdrew from school and transferred to Oshkosh within the permissible period and compiled a "B" average for his work last semester.

The five conference members who voted to declare Emerich ineligible (Stevens Point, Platteville, LaCrosse, Whitewater and River Falls) attempted to justify their ruling on the basis of section 3 (A) of the conference eligibility rules.

This section states, in part, "The completion of forms and/or the payment of fees shall constitute an enrollment; thereafter any student shall be considered as having been in attendance during that term or semester."

However, section 2 (A) of the eligibility rules states, in part, that "Enrollment shall mean the payment of fees, the filling out of a program, and regular attendance at classes."

It is obvious Emerich could not attend classes in two places last semester, and he did attend at Oshkosh.

One Semester

Another section of the eligibility rules, specifically referring to transfer students, reads, in part, "no student shall be eligible until he has been in attendance in the school to which he has transferred for at least one semester." Emerich successfully ly completed a full semester's work at Oshkosh before the present semester.

Thus, the conference is in the position of having rules which are completely contradictory.

A precedent considered a poor ruling at that time had been set two years ago with an identical case involving a player who transferred from Platteville to UWM. UWM used the player against Platteville in a basketball game and won. Platteville protested and UWM was forced to forfeit the contest.

There is still a possibility Emerich's case could be appealed to the council of Wisconsin State University Presidents.

'Wega Posts 19-0 Win Over I-S

IOLA — Coach Keith French's Weyauvega Indians posted a 19-0 win over Iola - Scandinavia here Saturday in the Central Wisconsin Conference grid opener for both teams.

"Wega drove 61 yards immediately after faking the opening kickoff with Jack Kapitke crossing the goal from a yard out for a 6-0 lead. I-S toughened, intercepting passes (4) and recovering fumbles (2), as the two teams battled until midway in the third period.

The Indians increased the margin to 13-0 on a 30-yard pass from Greg Hildebrand to Larry Kriesse and Dan Kester's conversion. "Wega added an insurance score in the fourth period on a Nick Wohlt to Larry Kriesse aerial for 25 yards and the 19-0 accounting.

Weyauvega rolled up 138 yards rushing with Dan Wilson leading the way on 87 yards in 11 tries. The passing attack netted 131 yards. Iola - Scandinavia was held to one first down while Wega netted 10.

Women's Lacrosse Team Wins in Wales

CARDIFF, Wales (AP) — A women's lacrosse team from the United States defeated Wales 10-6 Saturday.

Jan Demars of Worcester, Mass., spearheaded the triumph with five goals. Team captain Alison Hersey of Winchester, Mass., scored three and Jackie Pitts of Hockessin, Del., scored two.

Eau Claire Hands Titans 26-7 Defeat

Bluegolds Pull Away in Final Period of Conference Opener

OSHKOSH — Oshkosh State played defending conference champion Eau Claire to a stand-off for three quarters despite giving up two first period touchdowns, but then collapsed in the final period and fell to the Bluegolds, 26-7, here Saturday afternoon.

Mike Devine ran the opening kickoff of the game back 92 yards for a touchdown to give Eau Claire the lead before the crowd had settled in the seats but the Titans hung on until costly errors and a let - down gave Eau Claire the contest.

Coach Russ Young's team trailed only 13-7 going into the final period and had actually dominated the game against the Bluegolds, who are favored to win another State University Conference crown.

The play which probably decided the contest came early in the fourth quarter when Gregg Zastrow punted on third down from his own 31. The punt touched an Oshkosh player and was recovered by Eau Claire on the Titans' 1-yard line. Eau Claire quarterback Jim Van Gorden sneaked for the score to run the count to 19-7.

Four Interceptions

Oshkosh quarterback Jim Jaeger, one of the leading passers in the conference last season, was unable to find the range and completed only 3 of 20 passes and had 4 intercepted, one leading to Eau Claire's final touchdown.

After the opening shocker, the Titans came right back and marched 68 yards in 12 plays to tie the score with the big play being a 33-yard scoring pass to end Floyd Marks on a fourth down situation.

It took Eau Claire only four plays to get the lead back as Dennis Rivers ran the ensuing kick off back to the Oshkosh 49. On second down Devine took a 35-yard pass from Van Gorden to get position and Van Gorden scored from the one.

The Titans missed several scoring opportunities after this point while piling up yardage at midfield. Eau Claire stopped Oshkosh on the 5-yard line midway through the period and the interceptions killed two other drives.

Incomplete Passes

In the third period, a poor

punt gave Oshkosh position on the Eau Claire 31. After picking up a first down on the 14, a fumble and three incomplete passes ended the threat.

The final period was all Eau Claire as the Titans got off only 7 plays from scrimmage and gained a net of eight yards in the quarter. The Bluegolds gained more yards rushing the final period than they had the first three quarters combined.

Jerry Gendron, the 6-5, 260 pound end from Appleton, caught three passes for 30 yards for Eau Claire, two of the receptions coming on key third down situations to keep drives alive.

The game was the first conference contest for both teams and gives both a 1-1 overall mark.

Tell Our Story

Sometimes I wish I had the fire of a Jackie Robinson to speak out and tell our story. I've never been on a picket line or been in jail or anything like that. But I donated money to organizations like the NAACP, CORE, Martin Luther King's group and the Urban League and I have been on benefits to raise money for them.

The way I see it the Black Muslims want to do just what we have been fighting against for 100 years. They want to separate the races—the whites from the colored. That is a big step backwards at a time we are going forward toward integration. The Black Muslims can only hurt, not help.

It's too bad about Cassius. I'm for anyone belonging to whatever religion he wants. But I'm not for any religion or organization that says one people is better than another.

Talked His Way

I had thought Cassius was smart, they way he talked his way to the top in boxing. But he must have been brain washed. He could have been so big for our people—and boxing, too. But I think he messed it up by joining the Black Muslims.

They're spoiling all the good work done by the NAACP, CORE and the Rev. Martin Luther King's Southern Christian Leadership Conference. I am a very good friend of Rev. King. I've been a member of the NAACP since 1935. All of those organizations are doing a good job. Some of them may be a little more radical than others.

I am not for violence in any way. I am against building up hate. Hate causes nothing but trouble and brings in more violence.

I'd like to tell you how I broke the color line for Jackie Robinson in the Army. Jackie is my favorite. I think he is the greatest guy that ever lived. Jackie and I were in the Army together and he spoke his mind there, too. He wanted people to treat him like all the rest of the soldiers. And, of course, he was 100 per cent right.

Last of a Series

Stationed Together

We were stationed together at Fort Riley in Kansas. Down there on the post at that time a colored man couldn't go to the theater. He couldn't play on the baseball team. They wouldn't let Jackie play baseball or football either. It was disgusting.

Finally, I told the general we had an All-America football player at the camp and he wasn't playing. He was quite shocked, and ordered that Jackie could play. We had two colored boys on our squad, one from a colored college and Jackie Robinson from UCLA.

So, finally we broke it down.

NOTES and NOTIONS

Just four years after they helped steer the Fox Cities Foxes to the 3-I League pennant, "Boog" Powell, Pete Ward and Dean Chance are helping decide the destinies of one of the tightest American League races in history. Powell is Baltimore's big power man and ranks second only to Harmon Killebrew as the league's top home run hitter. Ward leads the White Sox in runs batted in and homers and is generally considered the team's most valuable everyday performer. Chance, while not playing with a contender this year, has had quite a bit to say about the race as a Los Angeles Angel. Had the brilliant young hurler not beaten the yankees four time this season — three of them on shutouts — the race would have a different flavor already. And, Chance has several more possible starts against all three contenders in the next two hectic weeks.

What probably causes the Yanks, the Chisox and other AL clubs to shudder is that this select group of outstanding young athletes could all be playing for the Orioles. Wonder how far Baltimore would be out front if they had them all? Chance, of course, went to the Angels in the "be-kind-to-a-new-franchise" move ment of several years ago. The Orioles, of course, didn't have to put Chance on that particular draft list but figured he was more expendable than some of their other young pitchers. Ward went to the White Sox (along with Hoyt Wilhelm, Ron Hansen and Dave Nicholson) in a move that made Chicago a contender. As if the Orioles didn't have enough troubles, Powell was shelved with an injury for a couple of weeks — and the team barely limped along until his return. If it hadn't been for Brooks Robinson's RBI bat, Baltimore might have dropped out of contention completely in that time.

The White Sox, of course, could have gotten off to a faster start in the race if Ward hadn't been shelved by an injury during the early weeks of the season. His bat didn't start booming in familiar style until the second month of the campaign. Manager Al Lopez credits Ward with being a big help, morale-wise, too. Pete has the knack for keeping the team loose and laughing. Considering the nail-biting type 1-0 and 2-1 games the White Sox specialize in, a few chuckles don't hurt a thing. If either the Chisox or the Orioles beat the Yanks to the wire, it will mark the first time a former Foxes player will be in the World Series. Ward is the Sox' only alumnus, but Baltimore has, in addition to Powell, Sam Bowens, Bob Saverine, Dave McNally and Dave Vineyard.

Chance, who finally has stolen the spotlight from his buddy, Bo Belinsky (in on-the-diamond performance, where it counts), should be in line to collect some of that big money he has been telling Fred Haney, Gene Autry and the rest of the world that he deserves. Chance's performance, especially in the last half of the season, has been astounding. In early June, when he notched his third win of the season, Chance said he was shooting for a 20-win season. Of course, not many took him seriously at the time. As of June 12, his record was only 4-2. In the next three months he logged 15 victories — most of them shutouts. His exceptional showing in the All-Star game seemed to give him the confidence he needed, and he went on to greatness. Dean appears to be the "right-handed" Koufax among current pitchers. Most baseball men regard him the best young pitcher to come along in many a year. Certainly none of the Yankees will dissent. They've scored only one run in their last 50 innings against Chance. If Chance doesn't sweep most of the major pitching awards for this season, it will be a shock.

Several days before the Bear-Packer game former Chicago QB great Sid Luckman called Paul Hornung "perhaps the greatest performer football has ever produced... He has more everything, offense and defense, than any football player ever had. He's the make-break player on any team." This is quite a tribute. And, after watching Hornung in action from the Bear sidelines last Sunday, Luckman had little reason to alter his opinion.

When the Bears missed a PAT try against the Packers, it was one of four missed last Sunday in NFL games. That play, apparently, doesn't deserve to be called "automatic" any more.

The Packers are tied for second place in the NFL rookie derby. They have nine on their roster, the same number as Minnesota and New York. Only the Rams have more — with 13 first-year men. In all, 101 rookies survived NFL cuts.

Football isn't normally a woman's game, but Mrs. John (Dorothe) Hammer, former Appletonian, is receiving plaudits for her role in keeping a grade school team in business. The Ashwaubenon Warriors, playing in the Green Bay Recreation Department Parochial League, now have a regulation field, uniforms, equipment and insurance. The ragamuffin squad came out of a vacant lot into the new setting as a result of Mrs. Hammer's 1-woman campaign in contacting town industry and business. Her husband is a Lawrence University graduate.

Stichweh Paces Army's Victory Over Citadel

Quarterback Scores Thrice on Long Runs In 34-0 Decision

WEST POINT, N.Y. (AP) — Carl Stichweh covered almost 200 yards on three scoring plays Saturday to lead Army to a 34-0 football victory over The Citadel.

Stichweh, Army's 190-pound quarterback, scored on a 93-yard run, a run of 28 yards and on a punt return of 73 yards as Army won its fourth game in the series against the military college of South Carolina.

The outcome of the game was obvious from the opening kickoff, although Stichweh's 78-yard kickoff return was nullified by a clipping penalty.

72-Yard Run
On the second play from scrimmage tailback Fred Barofsky reversed over left tackle and scored on a 72-yard run. He shook the last defender with a quick step that was almost a stumble.

Citadel managed to move the ball two yards on three plays on the next series, then Kroghie Andresen punted to Stichweh, who caught the ball at Army's 27. He moved through the Citadel defense untouched and got free on Tom Schwartz' block at The Citadel for a 73-yard touchdown.

Early in the second period Stichweh scored on a beautiful 29-yard rollout. He made his final score early in the fourth period when Army was put back on its seven by Andresen's punt.

On the first play he rolled out, scooted up the left sideline, cut in at midfield and easily outraced The Citadel team.

Delores Christensen Tops Bowling League With a 525 Series

Delores Christensen posted a 525 series to lead the Lucky Strike Bowling League at the 41 Bowl. Her best game was a 190.

Deanna Bauman took singleton honors — with a 192 — and finished with a 512. Morning Glory (6-0) and Fred J. Piette and Sons are tied for the team lead.

In the league's opening session, Lois Grassl took set laurels with a 501. Among her games was a 192. The top line was a 202 by Jerry Schaeffer, and Deanna Bauman had a 198.

Harriet Fulton Fires 518 Pin Aggregate

Harriet Fulton grabbed the spotlight in the 5x8 bowling league at Hahn's Lanes with a 518 series and a 198 singleton. Mabel Sonleitner also posted a 198 solo and Celia Whitman recorded a 190.

KING PIN capers

Another bowling season has arrived and most leagues have gone through their first round of action while some have been on the firing line two or three weeks already.

It's a little difficult to be caught up in the thick of any bowling fever this early in the fall, but once the night's turn colder and the first snow flurries hit the air the enthusiasm will be much higher.

It looks like another banner year for kegling in the Fox Cities area. More leagues than ever have been organized and there is a definite boom in couples circuits.

One of the highlights of the season for many area and state kegglers will probably include a trip to the 1965 ABC tournament which will be held in Minneapolis.

It is not often that a colorful classic like the ABC comes this close and a good many teams and individuals are planning on taking it in.

The ABC reports that the 10,000th sanctioned 300 game will probably be rolled in the near future. Last year a total of 829 were recorded across the nation to make the grand total 9,831 since the records were kept.

A total of 70 boys and girls have signed up for the Appleton YMCA bowling clinic and the second session will be held Wednesday at Sabre Lanes.

There are still some openings in the clinic and grade school youngsters are eligible. Participants must be 'Y' members. Mickey McGuire is in charge of the program.

Ilene Deltgen rolled three games of 127 each in the Five by Eight League at Hahn's Lanes recently. In the same loop Louise Brockman picked up the 4-5-7 split.

Some of the top split cleanups in early action included the 4-7-9-10 by Wally Moore and Roger Koehn in the 41 Bowl Classic league; 6-7-10 by Ruth Stark in Hahn's Navy League; 7-9-10 by Roger Blaese in the Merchant's League at the 41 Bowl and the 4-6-10 by Pauline Pleier in the Kimberly Ladies League at Jerry's Lanes.

Personal Report: With determination I have set out to crack the 600 barrier this season for the first time in my not-so-illustrious bowling career. The first week of bowling cannot be counted, really, because I was still trying to figure out what I was doing wrong all last season. Thursday night I came through with a 530 so maybe things are looking up. If all of you keep

Navy '11' Defeats Penn State, 21-8

Middies Cash In on Fumble, Pair of Pass Interceptions

UNIVERSITY PARK, Pa. (AP) — Navy's hard-charging defense stole the show Saturday by grabbing a Penn State fumble and a pair of interceptions to defeat upstart Penn State 21-8 in their 1964 college football opener.

Navy cashed in on a fumble and two pass interceptions, one a 58-yard touchdown run by Duncan Ingraham in the third quarter, for its three touchdowns.

Meanwhile, Penn State almost stymied Staubach, limiting the 1963 Heisman Trophy winner to only five pass completions in 13 attempts for 44 yards and held him to minus 14 yards on the ground.

Light Drizzle Staubach was partially hampered by a light drizzle which fell during most of the game and a brisk wind.

The turning point came in the final quarter when Penn State's Bill Huber dropped a potential touchdown pass on the Navy two with the Middies leading only 14-8.

The heartbreaking pass from quarterback Gary Wydman bounced off Huber's chest and ended Penn State's final thrust on the Navy 17.

Navy Fred Marlin intercepted a Wydman pass several minutes later on the Penn State 17 and raced to the six to set up the final Middies' score. Halfback Tom Leiser carried over from the five with Marlin adding his third extra point.

Changes in Men's Clothes for Fall Designed to Provide Comfort, Style

Biggest News Is Growing Trend To Lighter, Brighter Colors

Fall fashions for men are expected to be bright, alive practical, comfortable and suited for all occasions, according to leading fashion authorities.

As the articles in this special section will indicate, almost every piece of wearing apparel and accessories sports some change.

And the changes have not been effected simply for the sake of change. Instead, they appear to have been incorporated to make the article of clothing more comfortable and more in line with the modern styling in other aspects of man's daily activities.

Lead Parade

Biggest news in tailored clothing this fall is the growing trend to lighter, brighter colors. Iridescent and compounds which interweave tones for subtle new effects highlight the smooth finish ranges in fall suits.

Fresh-looking shades in traditional patterns spur the revived interest in soft-textured fabrics for country suits and sports coats. Both worsted and woolen types for the new season have definite interest in finish and weave.

Leading the parade are sharkskins, generally quiet in pattern but this fall lively in color. Herringbones, tic-weaves, bird's-eyes and glen plaids are some of the favorite patterns.

As colors change from dark to light, changes in cut are light. The long popular natural shoulder suit model retains its straight-hanging line, but tends to roll to middle button, rather than to the top of its three buttons.

This, according to the fashion experts, probable is indicative of why the two-button style is so popular.

Warmest Outdoors

Warmest for outdoor wear is expected to be a smooth leather coat or parka-length jacket lined in shearling. Many of these are convertible for double duty wear with button-off collars and zip-out linings.

Combining ruggedness and comfort is a leather suburban coat with buttoned-down front, zip-out lining and a pile collar that can be buttoned down over its own leather collar.

For after skiing and skating, a suede leather waist-length Bavarian-type cardigan with knit-trimmed edges and crew collar is reportedly the last word in style.

Trim Silhouette

This model, styled with slightly squared shoulders, is showing more shape in many lines, with body tracing and a hint of waist suppression contributing to a neat, clean and slim silhouette.

In the high-fashion, square-shoulder, closer-cut suit, the coat will be noticeable shorter. A single-button shawl collar (or variations of it) and slanting, doublewelt pockets are a few of the details appearing more frequently in these garments.

Suit trousers on all models, as well as slacks, keep the trim, pleatless and cuffed look. Continental-type slacks, however, continue to dispense with cuffs.

Longer vents, single or double, appear more often in this fall's selection of sportcoats, blazers and country suits.

Blazers Are Staple

Blazers, by the way, continue to be the staple of a man's wardrobe. Navy holds the top position amid a great variety of colors and mixtures making strong bids for popularity. Camel tones and a new light Cambridge gray also are popular.

Textures in blazers range from hopsacks to newer crepes and boucles. Huskier tweeds dominate the sports coat field for all, with black and white herringbones and checks brightening the offerings of the heatertone fabrics.

Olive is still a leading sports color.

Turn to Page 6, Col. 1

This Two-Button Suit features a new kind of waistband which reportedly provides free and easy movement. The coat has semi-natural shoulders, notched collar, in-and-out flap pockets and center vent.

Men to Have Varied Choice in Selecting Suits for Fall Wear

Fitted Models Making Comeback, According to Fashion Authorities

Men with an eye for good fashion again will have a varied choice of styling in the selection of their fall wardrobes, according to the American Institute of Men's and Boys' Wear.

And, the Institute experts say, the fitted suit shows signs of making a real comeback. New fall suits have enough waist definition to take them out of the loose fitting straight-line category, but they do not sacrifice easy fitting comfort.

The "lighter and brighter" look — so popular during the spring and summer — also has been carried into the fall offerings and now are supplemented by a revival of the "tweedy look" in chevrons, shetlands and tweeds.

Direct Contrast

In direct contrast, iridescent are on the way to score further gains in both subtle and flashing varieties. Colors in this group range from browns and bronze tones to blue-greens, tan-olives and some multi-hued shades which are difficult to define but reportedly are easy on the eye.

Sharkskins — both plain and patterned — also are expected to be popular. The fabrics are embellished with both subdued and distinct glen plaids or in striped, herringbone and overplaid designs. Usual tiny step-ladder weaves are accompanied by both "bird's-eye" and "nail-head" sharkskins.

Among other fabrics are stretch fabrics, whipcords, worsted flannels, mill-finished worsteds and many blends of mohair and worsted.

New Lapels

Suit models this fall appear with some new lapels. These include several "no-notch" varieties — some with a down-slope effect and others with a peaked or semi-peaked styling. There also are some "notched-shawl collars" and "peaked shawl collars."

Other styles carry patch-and-flap pockets when tailored of tweeds for country and casual wear. Lapels on suits of a more traditional design are a bit wider on some suits and seem wider on others because they are pressed to roll to the center button rather than the top button.

Two-, three- or four-piece country or weekend suits with closely coordinated jackets, slacks and vests continue on the upswing and reportedly bridge the gap between suits and sports jackets.

Bronze Shades, Blue-Green Tones Are New Colors

Newest among fall suit colors are iridescent blue-greens and bronze shades.

Bronze tones take to complementary shades of both black and brown. However, unless one is really expert in the blending of colors, it is wise to use only black or brown accessories at one time.

Medium to silver grays are again a top suit favorite. True grays, being neutral in character, can take to almost any color combination.

Colored shirts with white collars and cuffs will be worn with greater frequency this fall. They are dressier than others and extremely smart.

Browns are back with a bang this season. Blend them with blues, tans, greens and reds for good looking fall-winter outfits.

Check Coat Buttons

See that jacket buttons on your fall coats are firmly stitched to both the lining and the inside-facing of your jacket. If not, have a tailor sew them on properly. This will avoid stretching or even tearing of the fabric.

FALL FASHIONS

MAN

The latest in Fall wear for men is here, ready for you. Appleton's many fine men's wear stores have everything to help you travel through the season . . . in style.

Men's Fall Fashion Trends are to richer, more colorful tones, according to at least one manufacturer. This suit features natural shoulder styling, patch pockets and center vent, and is teamed with plain-front trousers.

McNamara Says Destroyers Fired On Four Vessels

Statement Gives No Hint That Unidentified Ships Fired Guns

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara announced Saturday that two U.S. destroyers opened fire on four unidentified vessels which approached them Friday in the Gulf of Tonkin.

He thereby officially confirmed nearly 22 hours after first reports reached the Pentagon that there has been a fresh flareup in the waters off war-torn Viet Nam.

McNamara said the unidentified vessels — presumably they were North Vietnamese torpedo boats but he didn't say so — "menaced" the American destroyers. And, he said, the vessels "because of their dispositions, courses and speed, indicated hostile intent."

No indication

But at no point in the secretary's 147-word statement did he indicate that the four vessels fired at the American destroyers.

Hurricane Gladys Poses Threat for U. S. Mainland

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — Hurricane Gladys, up to now an identical twin to Dora, took a northwesterly course toward the U.S. mainland Saturday and posed a threat to the coasts of Georgia and the Carolinas.

Forecasters said that although Gladys was still two days away from land, winds and seas would increase today from Daytona Beach north to Cape Hatteras, N.C.

The latest advisory placed the center of Gladys, the season's fourth hurricane and ninth tropical storm, about 650 miles east of Fort Pierce, Fla., and the same distance southeast of Wilmington, N.C.

Gladys was spinning along at a forward speed of only eight miles per hour and forecasters Arnold Sugg of the Miami Weather Bureau said a slight turn to the northwestward does not mean the big storm will make a quick turn to the north or change its general direction.

"Steering currents are weak and the storm is just dawdling along," Sugg added.

Italians Are Plagued by Art Thefts

ROME (AP) — The Italian government was asked Saturday what it plans to do to stop a recent wave of art thefts described as involving more priceless paintings and sculptures than the Germans took out of Italy in all World War II.

The demand, made in Parliament by Socialist deputy Mario Berlinguer, was touched off by the carefully plotted haul last Monday night of 16 paintings by Italian Renaissance masters from a gallery in a Rome villa of Prince Alessandro Torlonia, perhaps Italy's richest man.

Estimates of the value of the paintings by Raphael, Guido Reni, Ribera, Andrea Mantegna and other masters ranged from $320,000 to a million dollars. Prince Torlonia himself called some of the stolen canvases priceless.

The postwar German government has restored to Italy all or almost all of the art works which had been removed. But a catalogue published by the Italian Department of Antiquities and Fine Arts shows more than 900 valuable paintings and sculptures still missing after thefts in recent years.

Berlinguer said urgent action was needed "because a large part of the stolen art is taken outside Italy, to the inestimable damage of our most precious artistic and cultural patrimony."

Viruses May Act as Trigger for Cancer

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — A Nobel Prize-winning scientist said Saturday there is a growing body of evidence that viruses may act only as the triggers — and not the primary causes — of cancer.

Dr. John F. Enders, world renowned virus expert, said that science will have to answer just what role the viruses have.

If the viruses did prove to be the primary cause, the road toward a vaccine against them might be more simple. But if viruses only trigger and help cancer growth, the answer will be more complex, Enders said.

Common Viruses

He cited more and more viruses — some of them common to human beings — that are known to cause cancers in some experimental animals.

"This rich new harvest lends further weight to the hypothesis that in the etiology — cause — of some forms of human malignancy, a virus may be involved," Enders told a session of the fifth national cancer conference.

He was one of five Nobel Prize winners who spoke at the cancer meeting Saturday after receiving honorary degrees from the University of Pennsylvania Medical School, celebrating its 200th anniversary.

The others are Drs. Wendell M. Stanley, University of California virologist; George Beadle, president of the University of Chicago and outstanding geneticist; Severo Ochoa, New York University biochemist; and Arthur Kornberg, Stanford University biochemist.

Integrate Rapidly

Certain cancer-causing viruses rapidly integrate with host cells in a noninfectious manner, and this could explain why it is so difficult to recover viruses from tumors in human beings, Enders said.

The question of whether viruses are a direct cause of cancer "has perhaps been rendered even more uncertain," Enders said, because more and more scientists have been finding normal appearing cells with great tumor-producing capacity.

He told of using a virus that produces a "silent infection" in monkeys — simian virus 40 — to infect kidney cells from baby hamsters. For three or four weeks, the cells would continue a normal life after infection. Then spots of closely packed, short, stout cells appeared, and ding, drew praise from rescuee clusters of odd cells proceeded to grow rapidly while plained the "fireworks." He said when the transformer failed, it launched electrical arcs high into the sky, sending sparks showering as far as a mile away.

There were no reports of fires, but a number of lines were reported down. One was a high transmission line across the northeast side of Green Bay from the power plant on the west bank of the Fox River.

Another was done on N. Irwin Ave. near Bay Beach Park. Police said it was "burned to white powder."

The area affected extended to Peshtigo, Marinette and Sturgeon Bay in the north and east and Chilton to the south.

Fire department equipment was standing by. Hospitals and police and fire departments were on emergency power.

Austin Straubel Field was among the facilities forced to close down by the power outage.

Flickering Lights

Elsewhere in the northeast corner of the state, residents were concerned because of the loss of television reception, and by "flickering" of their lights.

In Appleton, the city police department and the Outagamie County Sheriff's department reported "hundreds of calls" in a few minutes.

Officials of Wisconsin Michigan Power Co. in Appleton said power was being fed into the

Satellites Spot Error In Survey

WASHINGTON (AP) — Thanks to the artificial earth satellites Echo I and II, it turns out that the Bermuda islands are 220 feet farther north and 105 feet farther west than everyone thought.

This was disclosed Saturday by the Coast and Geodetic Survey after three months of intensive study and 449 years after the islands were discovered.

The passive satellites — they reflect sunlight — were used to pinpoint the islands under a new system of measurements called satellite geodesy. This involves photographing them simultaneously from several points on the earth's surface to get a more accurate determination of distances over water, such as between continents and islands.

Viet Nam Student Defense Is Formed

Saigon Recruitment Brings Fighting Strength to 1,500

SAIGON, South Viet Nam (AP) — Three hundred Saigon high school and college students, holding blazing torches aloft and standing in rigid ranks, were sworn into the fighting arm of the students' political organization Saturday night.

They assembled on one of the capital's main streets in the most impressive display of military discipline by students since they began pressing demands on the South Viet Nam government last month.

The latest demand of the students is for representation on the advisory council being formed to take steps to place the country once more under civilian rule.

Student Leader

Nguyen Trong Nho, a student leader, said the recruits brought to about 1,500 the fighting strength of the "Students Self-defense Group." The recruits included 30 girls.

The students' purpose "is to push the revolution to a conclusion so that Viet Nam can enjoy freedom in the literal sense," Nho told the crowd.

The students made this pledge: "Before the national flag, before the altar representing our nation and before the spirit of those who have died for the nation, we solemnly vow to preserve the unity of the nation and to sacrifice ourselves to this unity."

"Down with communism, neutralism, dictatorship," they shouted. "Long live Viet Nam!"

2 Mississippi Churches Burned

PHILADELPHIA, Miss. (AP) — A Choctaw Indian church, located one mile from where the charred station wagon of three slain civil rights workers was found, and a rural Negro church were razed by pre-dawn fires Saturday.

The Indian church, 13 miles northeast of Philadelphia, was destroyed. The two-year-old concrete block Mennonite church was attended mostly by Indians of the Choctaw Nation.

Will Thompson, an Indian who lives near the church, said he heard a blast about 1 a.m.

Neshoba County Sheriff Lawrence Rainey said the state fire marshal's office has been called into the investigation.

13 Killed When Bus Plunges Off a Cliff

LIMA, Peru (AP) — Thirteen persons perished and 16 were injured Saturday when a bus drove off the edge of the precipice of Colpa, near Huanacayo about 190 miles from here.

Former Warriors Plinska, Carbins Back in School

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Marquette basketball Coach Al McGuire said today that two former Warriors have returned to school and will be available for varsity service in the upcoming cage season. They are Forward Joel Plinska and center Paul Carbins. The 6-foot-5 Plinska, from Milwaukee, played with Marquette for two seasons starting in 1958. He dropped out of school after his junior year, worked two years and then spent two years in service. Carbins, from Chicago, is 6-foot-8. He played in eight games last season before he was dropped from the team with three other players for a curfew violation.

Bays, Vikings to Win, Says AP's Jack Hand

BY JACK HAND

NEW YORK (AP) — The hungry St. Louis Cardinals, underdogs to the Cleveland Browns, can shake up the Eastern Conference of the National Football League Sunday by upsetting Jimmy Brown and Co. After the New York Giants' disastrous opener in Philadelphia, many pro observers look to the Cards and Browns as the top threats in the East. They also will be stealing glances toward Pittsburgh to see if Y. A. Tittle can bounce back for the Giants.

Minnesota, too, can scramble the NFL's Western Conference form by handing the champion Chicago Bears a second straight defeat. The Bears showed little offensive against Green Bay and the Vikings ran Baltimore out of the park with 463 yards gained, 313 on the ground.

Washington could upend the Dallas Cowboys in the Cotton Bowl. The revamped Skins can run and throw. The Cowboys still are having trouble putting the pieces together.

Green Bay figures over Baltimore, surprising Philadelphia over San Francisco. Detroit over tough Los Angeles and New York over Pittsburgh.

Set for Replay The big one in the American League's three-game weekend program is the replay of last year's championship game — Boston at San Diego. The favored Chargers humiliated the Pats last year 51-10.

Despite upsets by Philadelphia, Minnesota and Boston, things ran close to form in the openers last week. In the NFL, we had a 5-2 record and 3-1 in the AFL for a total 8-3.

Taking another stab it looks like this. All games Sunday unless otherwise noted.

NFL

Green Bay 31, Baltimore 20 — If Vikings could run through the Colts' line, Paul Hornung and Jim Taylor should rip it to shreds. Johnny Unitas' arm will keep Colts in ball game.

Minnesota 21, Chicago 17 — Loss of linebacker Larry Morris, possibly for the season, a cruel blow to Bears who must rely on defense with sick offense. Bill Brown and Tom Mason carry the load for Vikings.

Philadelphia 13, Los Angeles 10 —

Saturday night — Battle of two fine defensive units. Rams' front four tough to crack but Lions won't make eight ball-losing errors like Steelers did against L.A. Rams must go again with rookie quarterback Bill Munson.

New York 28, Pittsburgh 14 — Don't be surprised if Giants run a little on Steelers, give Tittle a chance to open with bombs. Giants need bounce back win badly.

St. Louis 17, Cleveland 14 — Two well-balanced offenses but Cards have edge in deep defense. Frank Ryan was intercepted three times last week at Washington.

Philadelphia 24, San Francisco 17 — Joe Kuharich has Eagles on cloud nine. They can't keep it up, but it should last long enough to handle 49ers who will be minus Bob St. Clair. Another good day for Norm Snead and Tim Brown.

Washington 31, Dallas 28 — These clubs play some wild ones. Sonny Jurgensen throwing and Charley Taylor running against vulnerable Cowboy defense. Meredith must have big day to make favorite role stand up.

AFL

Oakland 28, Houston 24, Saturday night — Oilers won't blitz Raiders like Boston did last week. Al Davis beat Houston twice last year and again in an exhibition game 34-20. Why not again?

Buffalo 27, Denver 20 — Improved Bills should handle Broncos although Jack Lee always a threat to leaky Buffalo secondary.

San Diego 21, Boston 13 — These two clubs played two close-to-the-vest games last year before title game rout. Sid Gillman has outside threat to counter Pats' blitzing tactics.

Winneconne, Omro Tie, 6-6

Wet Conditions Lead to Fumbles By Both Squads

OMRO — Omro and Winneconne battled to a 6-6 tie in a Little Nine Conference game Friday night. Played on a rain-drenched field, the game produced several fumbles that ended scoring threats.

Omro scored early in the game to take a 6-0 lead. Winneconne fumbled the opening kick-off on their own 18, and Omro recovered to take it in for the score. Halfback Russ Rilling scooted in for the touchdown from 12 yards out. The extra point attempt was wide.

The half ended 6-0, but Winneconne scored midway through the third period to tie the count. The score came on an exciting 45-yard flare pass from Mike Schroll to Tom Baitinger. Omro's most serious threat occurred in the second quarter, as they marched inside Winneconne's 10 yard line only to lose the ball via a fumble.

Winneconne likewise lost two scoring opportunities in the fourth period. Each time they fumbled inside Omro's 20 in the steady rain.

Most of Omro's yardage was gained on the ground. Rilling picked up 59 yards, while Dave Tripp collected 46. Winneconne netted their yardage mainly on passes to Baitinger.

Wulterkens' 567 Tops 'Continental'

Bob Wulterkens rolled a 567 series for the only honor score in the Continental league at Jerry's Lanes, Kimberly. Versteegen (8-1) holds a 1-game edge over Sumnich in team standings.

Jim Van Hoof's 555 set was the top effort in the Businessmen's league at Gene's Lanes, Freedom. Bob Greiner made the honor list with a 550 set. Bowers Construction (5-1) leads the league by one game.

Favor Emerson, Stolle Over American Team Of Ralston, McKinley

Davis Cup Play Stated for Next Weekend

BY WILL GRIMSLEY

CLEVELAND (AP) — The United States hardly gets the Davis Cup unpacked before the big tennis bowl is on its way back to Australia.

That appears to be the case again here next weekend when the American team of Chuck McKinley and Dennis Ralston attempts to beat back the challenge of Roy Emerson, the world's No. 1 amateur, and his greatly improved mate, Fred Stolle.

The Aussies, directed by the wily Harry Hopman, are overwhelmingly favored. They are confident to the point of cockiness. The Yanks are unsure, hopeful but determined.

Much Better
"Our team is much better than last year," says Hopman, who as captain has directed Australia to 11 Cup victories in the last 14 years. "The big difference is Stolle — we can count on him in both singles and doubles."

"On the record, the Australians have to be favored," acknowledges Vic Seixas, the perennially youthful Philadelphia who is the U.S. captain. "But you can throw form out the window in Davis Cup play. It is something different. Players don't react the same under the pressure of representing their country before a big crowd."

The challenge round matches are scheduled Friday, Saturday and Sunday on the composition clay courts of a new $100,000 steel stadium in the swank Eastern suburbs of Cleveland. The stands hold 7,000 and they are a sellout.

First Time
This marks the first time in 32 years that the challenge round hasn't been played on the traditional surface — grass — and this is calculated as a possible hope of the Americans.

The Australians, with strong services and killing volleys, are superb grass court players. The clay, with its slow surface, should take some of the sting out of their big games.

However, the Americans can't count too heavily on this even if workers spend three nights watering down the courts — as some have suggested.

CLEVELAND —1st add Davis Cup ssb80 x x suggested.

"Emerson is just as good on clay as he is on grass," says McKinley, the top-ranked U.S. player from San Antonio, Tex. "Stolle isn't. Perhaps we'll have a better chance against him."

Tournament performances have given the Americans little room for encouragement.

Three of Big Four

Emerson won the Australian, Wimbledon and U.S. championships — three of the big four, missing only the French — and the runner-up in two of them, Australian and Wimbledon, was the tall, smooth-stroking Stolle. Stolle beat Ralston, the Bak-ersfield, Calif., youngster who has had the best season of all Americans, in the recent national tournament at Forest Hills, but had to go five sets. Emerson smashed McKinley in three.

McKinley and Ralston won the trophy last year at Adelaide but did it against a team weakened by the loss of Rod Laver to pro ranks. John Newcombe, a 19-year-old rookie, played one of the window in Davis Cup play. It is something different. Players don't react the same under the pressure of representing their country before a big crowd."

The challenge round matches are scheduled Friday, Saturday and Sunday on the composition clay courts of a new $100,000 steel stadium in the swank Eastern suburbs of Cleveland. The stands hold 7,000 and they are a sellout.

Two other times since 1950 the Americans won the Cup — Seixas and Tony Trabert pulled an upset in 1954 and Alex Olmedo staged a surprising one-man coup in 1958. Each time the Australians won back the cup the next year.

McKinley and Ralston will play both singles and doubles for the United States. Emerson and Stolle will carry the full load for Australia.

Breaks Knuckle in Exhibition Fight

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A broken knuckle knocked heavy-weight Buster Mathis of Grand Rapids, Mich. off the U.S. Olympic boxing team, the squad manager reported Saturday.

The 293 pounder, injured his right hand in a Thursday night match at nearby Hamilton Air Force Base. Team manager Al Sandell said the hand would be in a cast until Oct. 10, a day before Olympic boxing competition starts in Tokyo.

Sandell said Joe Frazier of Philadelphia, runner-up to Mathis, will fill the heavyweight spot. Mathis was boxing Frazier when he hurt his thumb.

Unitas Dumped 5 Times

Packers, Colts Even in Yards Lost Trying to Pass

GREEN BAY — Statistical comparison The Packers were more successful than the Colts last Sunday, but they were tied in at least one department — yards lost attempting to pass.

This proves, among other things, that John Unitas and Bart Starr, opposing pitchers in City Stadium today, aren't afraid to eat the football when necessary.

Each passer was dumped for 39 yards lost attempting to throw.

Unitas was thrown five times and Starr bit the dust three times on slugs of 15, 14 and 10 yards.

The Packers threw Bill Wade and Rudy Bukich back a total of 33 yards attempting to pass while the Colts threw Fran Tarkenton 25 yards trying to pass.

Wade was thrown once; Bukich three times.

One Colt statistic looks a little unusual: Fullback Jerry Hill, the leading Baltimore pass receiver — with a minus yardage. Leaders are based on number caught and Hill had three but they were "stretched" out to nine yards the wrong way.

This business indicates that Unitas used Hill considerably as a safety valve against the Vikings, meaning that he threw short to the fullback when downfield receivers were blanked. The Vikings apparently had Hill covered, too.

Three of Unitas' completions went for a total of 157 yards — an average of 51 per. He pitched two to Jimmy Orr for 37 yards and one to Lenny Moore for 70.

Fall Sweaters Can be Used For Indoor or Outdoor Wear

Sweaters for fall are in shirt weights and heavy weights, and some are suited for both indoor and outdoor wear.

Beginning a year ago with the wearing of a turtleneck knit under a V-neck sweater, the "layered look" now is offered in single sweaters that have a turtleneck set into a V-neck body.

Leather trims and leather fronts, thick rug-like textures, knits of thick and thin wools, boiled wools, appliqued patterns on clear knits and brushed patterns are some of the features in the sweater selection. Ivory and canary are two new colors.

Shirt Collars

Some of the shirt-weight sweaters are made with shirt collars and are good for indoors. Pulling them on over a turtleneck makes them useful for the outdoors.

Blends of mohair with man-made fibers are worn oversized to hang loosely. A new brushed finish adds to their bulky look.

Knit-plus-suede reportedly is the "in" look this fall. Some feature just small touches of suede trim; others have large areas of suede with knit sleeves.

Men's Hats Revitalized For This Fall

New Models Come
In Array of Furs,
Leathers, Fabrics

New hats for fall are charged with revitalized appeal for men in an array of leathers, fabrics and furs.

The LBJ hat, a modified Western-type felt, is returning supplemented by darker "big city" colors and in an assortment of brim widths. This represents which could be an important turning point in hat styles.

In the first place, it is the first time in many years a new model has been accepted in larger dimensions. Secondly, it is the first time since the beginning of World War II an "off-the-face hat" has met with other than very limited acceptance.

Casual hats are geared to sportswear. Sueded leathers are keyed to the suede look in outerwear and sweater trims in both textures and colors. Cotton suedes also are used in hats and caps.

Fabric hats and caps utilize all the popular sportswear

In leather hats, suedes, pigskins, sheepskin, pony, steer, snake and alligator in smooth, rough, dull or shiny finishes are all keyed to sportswear and outerwear garments.

Stripes' Popularity Grows

Fashion Sources See Colorful Season Ahead For Fall Shirts, Ties

It is expected to be a colorful season as far as shirts and ties are concerned, fashion authorities report.

Copper, an appropriate color for the autumn season, bows in as an addition to other shades

Striped Shirt, Tie Lovers Need Not Fear Using Them Together

For those who like striped ties and striped shirts but are apprehensive about wearing the two together: fear not.

Fashion authorities say it is not essential to wear a solid colored tie with striped shirts. The shirts combine well with striped and figured ties, they say.

It may take a moment or two more to put together a pleasing combination of patterns, but the result is well worth the effort, it is said.

keyed to fall suits. It is featured in both solid colors and in stripes on white and other shades in the popular oxford shirts as well as in the rapidly climbing smooth broadcloths and madras.

Popularity of stripes is expected to be greater than ever. Experts say stripes will be wanted at the rate of two or three-to-one over solid shades. There are multi-color stripes, twill stripes, wider and wider set stripes, group stripes and white stripes on colored grounds. Another new look in stripes will be the use of navy blue in stripes on both white and colored grounds.

Mostly OxforDs
Six out of every ten shirts bought this fall will be made of varieties of oxford. There is, however, a decided trend to the "flat" fabrics — the smooth broadcloths, end-and-end madras and chambrays.

This trend applies to shirts worn by men who prefer contemporary as well as those who favor traditional models.

Button-down collars still are popular favorites. However, there is great acceptance and notable gains for the "buttonless-buttondowns" that are worn pinned, snap-tabs, tabless-tabs (also worn pinned) and a new pin-tab in a shorter 2½-inch length.

Also available is a wider selection of shirts with French cuffs, cross-stripes, planned stripes and iridescent colors to complement black mohair suits.

The story in men's ties this fall definitely will be bright. Men's clothing will show a very heavy preponderance of iridescent colors which are actually Striped Shirts Are Expected to be very much in style this fall, and wearing paisley and striped ties with them is considered very correct. shades of one color highlighting shades of another.

Rich blues will be complemented with golds, olives and browns, giving a mellowness to colors which reflect one of the other, giving a pleasant degrees of iridescence.

Stripes Strong

Beyond the blue-contrasting blends, there is also a new development with brown mirror-reflecting various shades of olive, bronze and blue.

Stripes are very strong with the trend to wider spaced stripes in brighter colors. These wider-spaced stripes go well with the striped shirt and round out the striped shirt trend with the iridescent suits.

Under-knots or positioned motifs will be shown in deep tones, and these make interesting focal points in men's attire.

There is a slight trend toward prints. A sprinkling of prints are being offered in various lines, and these are starting to arouse some interest.

Jacquards and rougher fabrics also are playing a role.

Ingenuity of Makers

Rainwear for fall and winter features fashion plus warmth, and the array of both liners and linings proves the ingenuity and resourcefulness of manufacturers.

Liners come in man-made fibers, man-made fibers combined with natural fibers and plain and patterned wool styles in various weights. Even quilted liners are available.

However, despite the importance of the inside, it is the shell of the coats — the cut, the fabric and fabric content — which sets the fashion pace.

Trench Coat Comeback

It is no longer news most raincoats are much shorter these days, many reaching only to the knee; but it is news that trench coats, trimmed with all the furbelows, the epaulettes, the storm flaps, the bell rings and the caped backs, in the same short lengths have made a big comeback.

Some of the new trench coats are in poplins, others in gabardines and some in Bedford cords. The colors are mostly in the medium to light range and quite a few are iridescent.

Other models — the long-time favorites that continue to lead in acceptance — are the split-raglans, the slimmed-down full raglans for natural-shoulder fans and some with set-in sleeves combined with either notched lapels or bal collars.

Acceptance
Coming into acceptance are styles which feature distinct checks, plaids, herringbones, self-stripes and some sharkskin weaves in both natural fibers and blends of man-made fibers. There also are many pure

A Detachable Pile lining is available with this cotton raincoat. Also featured are flapped hocking pockets, raglan sleeves, sleeve tabs, button-through front and back vent.

Put Tie on Shirt, Then Put the Shirt on You

To keep from disarranging the collar of a freshly laundered shirt, fit the tie in the collar fold before donning the shirt. This avoids having to fold down the collar after the tie is knotted.

In the case of a buttoned-down collar, slide the tie through the fastened collar points before putting on the shirt.

Shirts Feature Stripes

Shirts for fall feature stripes—multi-colored, wide, narrow, pin, club grouped in every conceivable arrangement. While not a runaway best-seller, the colored shirt with an attached white collar and cuffs is gaining.

KOBUSSEN CLOTHING

301 W. COLLEGE AVE.

The breast - pocket of a suit or sport jacket embellished with a pen and pencil or an eyeglass case will foul up the best planned outfit, but the increased popularity of silk pocket squares indicates many men appreciate this fact.

As in most other categories of men's wear, the silk pocket squares have styles that appeal to men with contemporary as well as traditional tastes. The avant-garde group goes for abstract prints, geometrically segmented color areas and solid shades. The classicists go for neat foulards, paisleys and neat polka dots.

It is estimated more than 96 per cent of all linen, cotton, lawn and voile handkerchiefs for men are wanted in pristine white.

Avoid Loose Articles
Travel Tip: The fewer loose items there are, the easier your packing job will be. Use tissue paper or plastic bags to hold together small items like underwear, socks and handkerchiefs.

But There Are Problems
Being a "king size" man creates a number of problems in the selection of a wardrobe, but it does have other compensations.

Being Large Has Its Compensations

So says the big man in question — he's 6 feet 5½ inches tall and weighs 350 pounds — has found it costs him 15 to 25 per cent more to dress. That's one of the problems.

As for compensations: "When people meet you once they don't forget you. And nobody picks a fight."

Concerning the difficulty of securing clothing, such big men still get a bargain in clothing — even at a 15 to 25 per cent premium. For example, a Chicago manufacturer made the man a suit recently and even though it required 45 per cent more fabric (for a total of 5 yards 8 inches) than the average suit and a great deal of special craftsmanship, the company charged only 25 per cent above its regular price.

Room For Three

The suit was a 66 extra long and was more than ample for three average (size 40 regular) men. It was the largest garment the company had made in its history. (Since that order, however, the firm has tailored an even larger suit — a size 68 stout.)

The 66 extra long man — who, though he is not sensitive about his size, still prefers anonymity in this story — has had clothing problems from birth when he weighed 12½ pounds.

At 10, he was 150 pounds and wore men's clothing. Now 350 pounds, he has a waist measurement of 60½ inches, wears a shirt with a 22-inch collar and 38-inch arms. Shirts cost him from $12 to $15 but can run as high as $27 for a pleated tuxedo model.

"When you're my size," he says, "you have to plan your wardrobe ahead of time." You don't decide to "go formal" one day and select the appropriate wardrobe the next.

"King Size"

Such large men have nearly everything custom made except such things as handkerchiefs, belts and underwear. If they're lucky, they can get shoes out of stock from companies that cater to "king size" customers.

Ties have been a problem in the past because there just wasn't enough material to go around a 22-inch neck and still solved that problem. "Lighter shades make you stand out more than you already stand out," he said.

This Size 66 extra long can accommodate three men of average size (40 regular) and then some. "King size" men who require such large garments have built-in problems and compensations, says the man for whom this suit was made.

Jewelry for Men Accented By Tradition

Traditional shapes — with the quality jeweler's touch — highlight this fall's cuff links, tie bars and tie tacs.

The newest look is the brilliant "diamond cut" for metals on textured or plain grounds. Simple shapes gain added interest via deep dimensions, domed shapes and a revival of "double - ends" — some with stones embellishing the backs — that can be worn with either end showing.

Simplest of all are the bars, sometimes in engraved metal, in chain - wrapped versions and in separate stones. There are stone-on-stone settings and stones that match enameled bases. Handsome channel settings, stones set in fine filigree mountings and the elegant prong settings also are available.

Florentine textured finishes, employed in all - metal links, are used with colored stones and often as a base for stone settings.

"Illusion settings" that give the links the effect of "floating" on the cuffs have been revived and tie bars and tie tacs show up in myriad variations, however.

Adjust Shoe Strings To Save Wear, Tear

Fabric shoe laces wear thin, and break at inopportune moments, from friction at the point where the laces rub the eyelets.

Remember to move the laces a fraction of an inch forward or backward every month or so, and they'll wear longer.

If you have shoes with two eyelets on each side, instead of a greater number, put your laces through twice and they'll hold more firmly.

Minimize Maximum

Men with big feet should avoid plain-toe shoes, for an unbroken expanse of leather tends to exaggerate the size. Perforated or wing-tip designs minimize, however.

Leather May be Popular

Variety of Patterns, Fabrics Offer Choice in Sportswear

Men can have their choice in sportswear this fall, for a variety of fabrics, colors, patterns and models are being considered "in" on the fashion scene. Expected to be one of the most popular — as well as more practical — of the offerings are models in leather and leather combinations.

New leather jackets and coats in soft suedes, smooth cabrettas and leather and knit combinations bring about a look of "casual distinction," according to fashion authorities. Many Lengths However, plaids, tweeds and solid colors in more traditional fabrics are expected to be popular and comfortable for casual wear.

This fall's suede and smooth leather jackets come in many lengths and styles. Self-covered buttons or a zippered closing may be featured; pocket treatments take many forms; knitted insets may or may not be used. The range of color is rich and varied. Whatever the style, a lightweight leather jacket offers warmth without weight against fall breezes.

If a more formal look is desired, there is a suede leather jacket in deep brown, tailored along conventional sports jacket lines. Practicality For those who prefer practicality to formality, a beige suede leather jacket is available that can be tossed into the automatic washer.

The self-patterned or modestly patterned new tweeds, shetlands and lamb's wools in subdued tones have a new clean, crisp coloring achieved in the spinning of the yarns. Tiny impractical vents give way to deep man-sized vents that give a fellow access to his pants pockets and prevent his jacket from crumpling or riding-up when he is seated.

The current selection of slacks places heavy emphasis on press-retaining worsted flannels, basket-weave hopsacks, all-wool and wool-blend whipcords and bedford cords, as well as a sprinkling of checks, plaids and self-weaves with which to complement the unpatterned jackets.

Extra Comfort Slack models include the unpleated belt-loop and self-supporting styles as well as some single-pleat treatments. While those models retain the trim, slim look, they are designed for extra comfort and freedom of movement. Except for some "skinny slacks" aimed principally at teen-agers there are fewer tricky pockets, too.

Among the season's newest sport jacket colors are some medium-to-light shades in blue-green blends, new warm browns called "earth tones," tan shades including camels and "dirty camels," warm grays and grayish-tans in the oatmeal family.

Browns are on the increase as are bronze and copper shades. Olive tones are now highly seasoned with either blue or tan blends; while some definite greens, also tempered with blues and tans, score.

Reds are well represented, too. Ranging from some real scarlets in the blazers to burgundies, bricks and maroons, used either as solid colors or as integral parts of plaids, checks and overplaids, reds are in warmer, heavier fabrics and long sleeves.

The button-down collar sport shirt has become a fashion basic. The relatively new "no-button-down" also is slated for success.

Regular-collar sport shirts also are seen in traditional patterns and fabrics along with many fly-fronts and contrast center panels.

Light Touch The "light touch" predominates in plaids, block checks and stripes that all show more ground color. There also are twills, iridescent and deep-tone oxfords and end-and-end fabrics in patterns. Fabric choices include suit-weight homespun weaves and revivals of flannels woven of cotton and blends of wool-and-cotton. Corduroys in beefy weights and wider wales show up in many of the winter shirt-jacs, too.

The ascot has achieved great popular acceptance, especially for wear under the open sport shirt collar. In a wide selection of patterns and solid shades, the small neck scarf has provided the perfect answer to the problem of dressing-up the sport shirt, doing away with the unfinished look of a buttoned, tie-up in many of the winter shirt-jacs, too. Authentic Scottish tartans, criss-crossing regimental stripes that create plaids, muted bar stripes, typical "table cloth" checks also are available.

Shoes Boast Heavy Appearance, But Really Are Light in Weight

New Leathers Allow Lean Look In Traditional Brogue Styles

Masculine demand for light-weight brogues with a traditional heavy appearance has been met this fall by newly developed leathers.

As a result, the new crop of leather brogues strikes a fashion balance between solid masculine looks and zephyr - light leathers, reports Shoe Fashion Service of Leather Industries of America.

Lean but well-muscled, the new trimmer leather brogue achieves its beefy appearance with larger perforations and wing-tips, pinkings and heavier grains.

Unbroken Line

Accommodating the continued popularity of high-riding trousers, the shoe fore-front has been heightened to effect an unbroken line between shoe and pants leg.

Medium-weight leather soles carry through the hefty look while providing a firm but flexible walking base, and light-weight leather uppers offer additional foot comfort. Smooth leather linings assure freedom from friction.

Heavy single-stitching or fine double and triple stitch effects, are novel trims used on brogue versions.

Colors of the leather brogue remain conservative. Black and cordovan are top favorites. However, antiqued lighter browns may gain popularity.

In line with the "more shoe" look of the brogue, the conventional leather oxford and slip-on are seen around town and country sporting higher toplines, and in some cases, brogue-inspired detailing.

Surface treatments vary and include smooth cordovan, fine-grained and heavy-grained leathers. One of the new leather textures is a high-polished light grain almost fine enough to be considered smooth.

In general, the lighter shoes are the better they fall into this season's dress category. The high front, formed on what is known as the "high cone" last, gives a shoe a long, elegant look that is good for dress, or there might be medallion perforations for a shortening effect.

The burgeoning boot boom has brought a barrelful of style innovations. On both dress and casual chukkas, elasticized insets are wider and deeper than ever and often are placed in front of the boot rather than at the sides.

Western Influence

The Western influence, spurred by a President from Texas, is evidenced by handtooling and touches of color on calf-high boots.

This fall, boots will come in all colors, all shapes and all heights, making a boot wardrobe ultimately sensible now.

Warmly-lined styles could go on a hunting trip in the backwoods or be used for shoveling snow in a suburban driveway.

There are also high, strapped gauchito boots, lower slip-on boots with a curved Wellington top-line, sturdy chukka boots in water-repellent leathers and moccasin toe boots that lace on the sides.

The boot look is not confined to the "Beate Set," either. In addition to the sport and casual models, there are now business styled providing both comfort and good looks. They are conservative enough to appeal to the most reserved tastes.

The latest oxfords and slippers also reflect the lean look. Not only smooth and grained textures, but cordovan, brushed, stitched variations are available.

A Shoe Wardrobe should include both dress and casual styles. Clockwise, from lower left, are a Scotch grain moccasin, a moc toe style, a cordovan and black saddle, a semi-dress tassel moc, a plain-toe blucher, a dark wing-tip blucher, a Scotch grain blucher and a smooth grain moccasin.

Best to Use Shoehorn

Even though you can slip your shoes on without a shoehorn, it's important to use one. Otherwise, you may break down the counter (back) and shorten the life of the shoe.

Mufflers for Fall Coordinated With Styling of Gloves

When it comes time to pull on the gloves, it's time to think about coordinated scarves and mufflers.

Mufflers, as the gloves and outfits with which they are worn, come in both dressy and casual styles and can add comfort, color and practicality to fall and winter wardrobes.

In addition to the obvious warmth and protection offered by the good looking wools and silks, they do a lot to prevent shirt collars from being soiled by topcoats, overcoats and raincoats.

In mufflers, as in most other accessories, there are styles aimed at the tastes and preferences of both the tailored contemporary man and the natural-shoulder traditionalist and, of course, there are some "middle ground" classics that are admired equally by both groups.

In the contemporary mood, there are opulent jacquards, abstract prints and fancy woven effects. Traditionals include neat foulards, paisleys, wool challis and tartans. Both go for the solid shades, the polka dots, stripes and the reversibles that switch

Menasha Corp. Asks for Bids On New Plant

Proposals Due on Town of Neenah
Facility by Oct. 1

MENASHA — Invitations to contractors to bid on construction of a new Menasha Corp. container plant to replace a four-story structure destroyed by fire here earlier this year have been sent out, according to Mowry Smith Jr., vice president.

Bids are scheduled to be returned and tabulated Oct. 1, with ground breaking sometime in October.

A 180,000 square foot building is planned to replace the burned facility.

The firm purchased 30 acres of land from Bergstrom Paper Co. in August in the Town of Neenah along U. S. 41.

Space Added

At that time a 160,000 square foot plant was planned. An additional 20,000 feet of floor space has been added in new specifications. The proposed plant will be a one-story building next to the Bergstrom main office and finishing plant. It will house a corrugated container plant and corporate offices.

John E. Somerville, Green Bay architect who designed the firm's Anaheim, Calif., corrugated container plant, is architect for the proposed Town of Neenah facility.

Fire driven by wind in a violent storm destroyed the corporation's converter building July 17 in what was described as the largest fire in Twin City history. Damage was estimated at well over $1 million. No exact figure on loss has been announced.

Kaukauna's Grignon Home Registers 1,500 Visitors

Historic Showplace Completes First Year of City Operation

KAUKAUNA — The historic Grignon Home, built in 1836, was operated through the city for the first time this year and the registration book bears more than 1,500 names indicating interest in history.

The signatories probably are far below the true attendance. Many pages bear only the name of a Boy or Girl Scout troop, school class or other group.

Names of visitors from foreign nations are included in the book including persons from Liverpool, England, the Netherlands, Caledonia, Columbia, Germany and three Canadian provinces.

Visitors were noted from 28 states. One signature was followed with the notation, "and the Beatles." This is doubtful.

Menasha Woman Found Dead In Family Auto

MENASHA — Evelyn M. Resch, 49, wife of Robert A. Resch, 770 Pleasant Lane, owner of Bob's Beer and Liquor Store and former Winnebago County patrolman, was found dead in a garage at the residence shortly after noon Saturday.

Cause of death has not been determined, according to Winnebago County Coroner Arthur Miller. Mrs. Resch was found in the front seat of the family auto. A toxicology test will be conducted Monday, the coroner said.

Mrs. Resch was found by her husband, who last saw her at 9 a.m. Saturday when she drove him to work. He arrived home shortly after 1 p.m.

Menasha police and Neenah fire department ambulance were called. Mrs. Resch was pronounced dead at The Clark Memorial Hospital.

Peace Corps Volunteer Explains Why He Decided to Take on Work

David Huhn, Appleton, Leaving to Prepare For Two-Year Stint in South America

BY MYRNA COLLINS
Post-Crescent Staff Writer

"Let's face it. I'm not going to become a tycoon on $75 a month, but I am going to get to know a lot about people."

Getting to know people was one of the main reasons David Huhn, 1117 W. Bell Ave., decided to volunteer for a two-year stint in the Peace Corps.

"I will be going to Ecuador to build schools," he said. "And, I guess I'll be moving all around the country. We will be working with the people while we are there, not for them."

David, a June graduate of the University of Wisconsin, will be leaving Tuesday to start a 12-week training course at the University of New Mexico.

"About all they have told us about the training so far is that we will have lots and lots of Spanish and that we should bring plenty of warm clothes because it gets cold in Albuquerque in the winter," he said.

In three months, a Peace Corps trainee gets the equivalent of more than four years of language lessons in college, with heavy emphasis on conversation. Those in courses are called trainees until they graduate and officially become Peace Corps Volunteers.

In addition to getting to know the people of Ecuador, David said he wanted to become a volunteer so he would get a chance to help people while he was traveling.

"This summer my buddy and I hitchhiked through 39 states just so we could see the country," he explained. "I think this will come in handy when the South Americans ask me about some place in the United States. At least I will know something from first hand experience."

Candid Opinions

"Hitchhiking is a good way to get candid opinions from people all over the country. We found out almost all of them are in favor of the Peace Corps, regardless of their politics. They feel the same as I do, that a hand shake goes farther than a dollar bill in making friends."

David said he had a very personal reason for wanting this chance to travel. "I want to find out just how much I know about things in general after four years in college," he explained.

"I was an economics major," home the committee set about cleaning, painting and restoring the home. Items in the home were studied and those not adding significance to it historically were stored or removed. Duplication of broken pottery, arrow heads and other items was eliminated.

Guides Hired

An effort was made to label items in the home, giving the approximate year they represent. Guides were hired and instructed in features of the home which could be explained to visitors. The citizen committee, working in conjunction with the recreation department, currently is attempting to have council funds appropriated to supply the home with heat.

FVL Student Newspaper Earns National Rating

A first class honor rating was awarded the Carrousel, Fox Valley Lutheran High School newspaper for the second straight semester by the American Newspaper Critical Service of the National Scholastic Press Association.

More than 1,000 student newspapers from high schools all over the nation are judged by NSPA in groups divided by enrollment, frequency of publication and method of printing.

An All-American rating represents superior accomplishment and is reserved for top publications. A first class honor rating means the newspaper is excellent.

Computers Take Over Tedious Task Of Record Keeping at Valley Schools

Machines Praised by Educators For Their Speed and Efficiency

BY JACQUELINE FIX
Post-Crescent Staff Writer

Computers are starting to figure out Johnny's class schedule, make out his report card and pay his teachers.

Not alone, of course. They can't do anything their human being supervisors don't tell them how to do, their users are quick to point out. But they do provide a means of getting more information faster and more accurately than by time-consuming manual operations.

Their rapid and sometimes astonishing work is being utilized by several school systems in the Fox Valley, and others are investigating the possibility.

Appleton Vocational and Adult School this summer converted its student records and book-keeping systems to make use of the more than $100,000 in data processing equipment installed last spring for the associate of arts degree program.

The computer moved smoothly into harness with the start of the school year this month, and enthusiastic school officials and officer workers are looking forward to its help with end-of-the-year reports and other major tasks.

Lawrence University and Wisconsin State University-Oshkosh began using their own computers last year for student records as well as for teaching and research purposes.

$4.5 Billion Value Set on Land, Buildings in District

14-County Fond du Lac Region Appraisal Includes Winnebago, Outagamie, Calumet Counties

BY ALLAN ERVALL
Post-Crescent Staff Writer

FOND DU LAC — Land and buildings in the 14-county area in east central Wisconsin are worth $4.5 billion. These counties parallel the Fox River and stretch along the Lake Michigan shoreline.

This amounts to 22 per cent of the entire property value of the State.

During the coming two weeks, these counties will be appraised of this equalized valuation and also of the property value ratio of each city village and town in a county to the county's property value total.

Ninety-two different uses are made of these equalized valuation figures, Donald J. Sherman, supervisor of assessments for the Fond du Lac district, which handles the work of the 14 counties, pointed out.

One use is to establish the bonding limit for any city, town, village or school district. Another establishes the percentage of state and county taxes each tax unit within a county is to pay. Determining the tax shares of each area in a joint school district is a third use.

$140 Million New
Sherman said new construction this year in the 14 counties comes close to $140 million which equals the combined total valuation of Waushara and Kewaunee counties.

In most of the counties, agricultural lands were given a higher valuation on the basis of sales recorded for farm land in those counties. These counties include Winnebago, Outagamie, Calumet and Fond du Lac.

In two counties—Green Lake and Sheboygan — land values were raised considerably as the result of a mass physical appraisal made this year in those two counties.

For example, Sherman mentioned, in Green Lake County, Lake shore lots were found to be selling for $200 a front foot for just the land. A lot with 60-foot frontage was selling for $12,000.

One of his staff members met Thursday with Green Lake County Board members and said the real estate value in that county this year increased 24.76 per cent to a total this year of $101.2 million. The land value increase was more than $20 million.

Only $1.5 million of that increase was because of new buildings erected during the last

Appleton Tax Rate Could Increase $3 Because of Debts

Residents Expected to Feel Impact Of Various Capital Improvements

BY WILLIAM C. CAREY
Post-Crescent Staff Writer

Appleton's 1965 tax rate could go up at least $3 per $1,000 assessed valuation, based on prepared indebtedness and future obligations resulting from construction of a new high school.

This would mean a home assessed at $10,000 would cost the owner an additional $30 in tax.

It is evident 1965 will be the year in which taxpayers feel the major impact of the city's buying on credit (bonding) for major improvements in recent years.

The rate increase appears inevitable even before the 1965 departmental budget requests are compiled and reviewed by the council's finance committee.

Prepared Report

Earlier in the year, Finance Director Donald E. Hassler prepared an extensive report for the council which projected tax rates and showed the biggest boost would come in 1965.

With the prospect of a rate increase already apparent, city officials expect heavy pressure on department heads, commissions and boards to limit budget requests.

Hassler has estimated the city's debt service will be past the $11.5 million mark by next year, and the municipality's share of the schools' indebtedness will range from $9.2 to $9.8 million.

$4 Million Bond

In the coming year the city will be called upon to float a bond issue of more than $4 million for the proposed new senior high school. This year the council bonded for $2.8 million to cover the cost of the Einstein Junior High.

In addition, 1965 will see the city undertaking the construction of a new city garage, along with making major street improvements such as the Franklin - Washington extension and taking the jog out of Meade Street at its junction with Wisconsin Avenue.

Unless the operational requests are "bare bones" budgets in the coming year, the tax rate could increase as much as $5 to $6. Hassler will be in a better position to tell after requests are in.

More Expenses

However, with the opening of every new school comes additional instructional and operational expense which pushes the overall public school budget upward.

A sizeable rate increase, barring unforeseen developments, comes as no surprise to the city administration which has been able to hold the rate at the same figure for the past two years.

The city will be able to regulate the tax hikes and does not need a "crash" program that might cost millions of dollars. A considerable number of capital improvement projects have been carried out in recent years, including installation of new underground utilities in several parts of the city to alleviate flooding.

Estimated Value

It had been estimated Appleton's assessed valuation this year would reach $153,520,162, based on the annual average increase of 5.2 per cent for the 10-year period, 1954-1963. However, the valuation fell short of the projected total and is $150,308,600.

Hassler predicts rates will taper off from 1968 to 1970. He predicates his estimates on the city's long-range capital improvement program, anticipated operational budgets and revenues.

Any fluctuation in the state tax credit refund, which is applied to the real estate tax bill of the property owner, cannot be anticipated but appears likely.

In 1962 the credit refund was $3.50 per $1,000 assessed valuation, and this past year it was $4.15.

Automatic Apple 'Tree' At Neenah

NEENAH—Who can tell a

Winesap from a Wealthy? We are speaking, of course, of the boys and girls at Neenah High School who will any day now be depositing a dime in a vending machine and receive in return a bright red apple—Door County variety.

It's for a worthy cause, alright, profits go to the NHS Student Council to carry on its activities, but it sure takes the fun out of apple fitching.

How can questions be avoided like, "What would Johnny Appleseed think about this?" "What if one likes green apples better than red apples?" "Will there be a built-in apple polisher?" and "Will the availability of apples affect the medical profession?"

The core of the matter is this—it's mighty cheap health insurance for 10 cents. Another question, how does a worm turn, confined in a machine?

Boxes of IBM Cards at Appleton Vocational School to be used for school records this year are checked by Milton P. Ness and Mary Ann Kleman. Conversion of student records and bookkeeping systems was accomplished this summer to make use of more than $100,000 in data processing equipment installed last spring

Trio of Fox Cities Musicians Boast 40 Years Of Playing in Appleton Civic Concerts, Parades

BY W. R. DOBERSTEIN

Post-Crescent Staff Writer

A trio of Fox Cities musicians participating with the Appleton City Band has quite a medley of civic concert and parade marching notes behind it—about 40 years worth.

It was 1924 when George Klein, 1516 W. Franklin St., Appleton, first became affiliated with the 120th Field Artillery Band, forerunner of what is known as a city band today. And it wasn't much later when a Kaukauna trumpet player and a trombonist from Menasha became fellow artists.

A 1926 Post-Crescent news story reported a well-received concert by the 120th Field Artillery Band, containing an historical background and membership roster then current, included John Brouchek, 355 Taylor St., Kaukauna, and Arnold Schmalz, 326 Elm St., Menasha.

With Klein in the clarinet section, these three men have an almost unbroken association in band groups identified with Appleton. And there have been memory highlights.

For most of the years since 1917 when a military band was first organized in Appleton as the Ninth Infantry Band, and later bore several military identities, the members took dual roles in that they also were generally a part of the Appleton Elks Band.

It was 1929 when the Appleton unit competed with 46 other Elks bands at the national convention in Los Angeles and brought home first prize.

Just 10 years later at another national Elks convention in St. Louis, the Appleton band won second place in competition.

But the band's greatest community roles were in the 20's and 30's when the Fox Cities musicians shared in the regular programs of community concerts as well as the marching music for traditional city parades. The Pierce Park bandstand and the Lawrence Chapel were summer and winter concert strongholds as they still are. The big difference is in frequency, with band concerts having so much competition for popularity in recent years.

Basically the Appleton organization was the 120th Field Artillery Band until World War I. Active military service reduced the membership to 13 "old timers," Klein recalls. And in 1941, the remnant reorganized as the Appleton City Band.

When the service veterans came home, they joined the new organization. It was in the post-war years that Peter Heid, who now has about 30 years since he first became a member, was director for the group. Earlier directors these four veterans recall are Edward Mumm, O. J. Thompson and Clint Reed. Heid was succeeded as director by Gerald Jensen and the current leader is Frank Comella.

Scrapbook collections of news clippings and photos of the band's activities yield the names of many more Fox Cities musicians, some of men with as many as 25 years or so of participation. But Brouchek, Klein and Schmalz are the standouts in length of total service, and strong testimony of the saying "music hath charm."

Finance Director Has Come Long Way With Appleton Money Task

BY WILLIAM C. CAREY

Post-Crescent Staff Writer

Pencil - pushing Donald E. Hassler has come a long way since he walked into city hall about a year ago and waded through an avalanche of financial paper-work.

Today, the soft-spoken 44-year-old appointee is the No. 1 authority on Appleton municipal finances.

As the city's first finance director, Hassler during the last 50 weeks has improved and streamlined municipal bookkeeping and budget procedures.

While the nature of his work falls in the category of the non-spectacular, the record shows much has been accomplished. At the top of the list is the new budget-preparation format which went into effect Sept. 1.

Performance Budget

Hassler hopes to eventually have a performance-type budget for the city. This year's innovation is the first step in that direction. It is the type of modern budget setup being embraced by several cities around the country, including Milwaukee just two years ago.

Performance budgeting provides a better "checks and balances" valve for municipal spending and makes it mandatory that only money be spent on items actually budgeted.

It eliminates some department heads, boards and commissions putting a "cushion" in the budget.

Under the new procedure, the board of education will continue to remain a separate entity except when it comes time to go to the council for cash.

Hassler's chore in updating during his first year has been a monumental one.

With the cooperation of department heads, he has streamlined the city's bookkeeping procedure and made changes which provides the city administration with up-to-the-minute

Hassler hopes to eventually have a performance-type budget for the city. This year's innovation is the first step in that direction. It is the type of modern budget setup being embraced by several cities around the country, including Milwaukee just two years ago.

Performance budgeting provides a better "checks and balances" valve for municipal spending and makes it mandatory that only money be spent on items actually budgeted.

It eliminates some department heads, boards and commissions putting a "cushion" in the budget.

Under the new procedure, the board of education will continue to remain a separate entity except when it comes time to go to the council for cash.

Hassler's chore in updating during his first year has been a monumental one.

With the cooperation of department heads, he has streamlined the city's bookkeeping procedure and made changes which provides the city administration with up-to-the-minute

Finance Director Has Come Long Way With Appleton Money Task

BY WILLIAM C. CAREY

Post-Crescent Staff Writer

Pencil - pushing Donald E. Hassler has come a long way since he walked into city hall about a year ago and waded through an avalanche of financial paper-work.

Today, the soft-spoken 44-year-old appointee is the No. 1 authority on Appleton municipal finances.

As the city's first finance director, Hassler during the last 50 weeks has improved and streamlined municipal bookkeeping and budget procedures.

While the nature of his work falls in the category of the non-spectacular, the record shows much has been accomplished. At the top of the list is the new budget-preparation format which went into effect Sept. 1.

Performance Budget

Hassler hopes to eventually have a performance-type budget for the city. This year's innovation is the first step in that direction. It is the type of modern budget setup being embraced by several cities around the country, including Milwaukee just two years ago.

Sherwood Priest Will Note Silver Jubilee

Rev. M. J. Drexler, Sacred Heart Pastor, To Be Honored at Anniversary Programs

SHERWOOD—The Rev. Michael J. Drexler, pastor of Sacred Heart Church, will celebrate the silver jubilee of his ordination to the priesthood, with a solemn high mass of thanksgiving at 11:30 a.m. Sept. 27.

The Rev. James Meham, Brookfield, and the Rev. Lawrence Waleske, Plymouth, former classmates will be deacon and sub-deacon.

The Rt. Rev. Monsignor Orville Griese, Brillion, dean of Calumet County Deanery, will preach the sermon.

Master of ceremonies also will be a former classmate, the Rev. Raymond Parr, Milwaukee. The men's choir of Sacred Heart Church, Oshkosh, Father Drexler's home parish will sing.

A dinner for about 400 guests, relatives and parishioners will be served by the women of the parish in the school hall. An open house for the entire parish will take place in the evening.

On Friday afternoon the parish school children will present a program especially for the pastor. The occasion also marks his birthday and names day anniversary.

Father Drexler was born in Oshkosh, Sept. 28, 1912, son of the late Mr. and Mrs. John Drexler. He attended Sacred Heart School in that city, St. Lawrence College, Mount Calvary; St. John's University, Collegeville, Minn., and St. Francis Seminary, Milwaukee.

He was ordained by the Most Rev. John Rhode, bishop of Green Bay, Aug. 12, 1939 at St. Joseph Church, West De Pere.

His first appointment was to St. Mary Catholic Church, Kaukauna, where he served from September 1939 to Feb. 9, 1945, when he became assistant at St. John, Antigo.

On Sept. 22, 1952, he was appointed to St. Joseph, Marinette. He served four months before being moved to Annunciation Church, Green Bay. He was made pastor of St. Philomena, Birmahwood in June, 1953 with missions at Eland and Wittenberg. He came to Sacred Heart Sherwood, March 8, 1960.

During his tenure here, he has directed complete refurbishing of the church, excavating of the church basement and the building of new side entrances in 1961. In 1963 the parish convent was remodeled, the parish

Scolding Locks Fumes to Receive Airing by State

An Appleton man's campaign against industrial fumes will lead to a State Board of Health review of a city investigation.

Louis Porath, 1615 W. Rogers Ave., was informed of the developments in a letter from Sen. William Proxmire Saturday.

Porath has been leading a fight against what he termed "offensive and disagreeable" odors from Scolding Locks Corp.

Up to now he had made little headway. He appeared before the city council July 15 asking that the council take action against the firm under its public nuisance ordinance.

The council refused, acting instead on a recommendation of City Atty. Frederick Froehlich that the firm apparently was not in violation of the city ordinance. The council, at the time, also adopted a report of the city board of health which held that the fumes were not a hazard to health.

Porath then sought state level help in his campaign. A letter from the state board of health stated that it did not have a report on the local unit's findings but that it would get one for evaluation.

Representatives of the state board also promised to meet with Porath and the industry soon to evaluate conditions and recommend to the local officials responsible whatever actions it deems necessary.

Police Alerted to Coin Changer Thefts

Appleton police patrolling near coin-operated laundries are being alerted to thefts of coins from changers. Three reports of coins being taken from laundries have been turned in to police this week.

Investigation shows the changers are not forced open or damaged. The thefts are discovered by laundry owners who inspect the machines daily and fill them with coins.

Personal Advantage

Another personal advantage David sees to serving in the Peace Corps is that after you get out you are pretty desirable as an employee. After all, you know the people, their language and their culture. You know what they want and need and how to approach them," he said.

A marked improvement in the home as a historical attraction was noted in the first summer of operation under the hands of the citizen committee as evidenced by the upswing in visitors.

The committee has formed a corporation, applied for admission to the State Historical Society, and has secured money from the common council to have the home listed on a state map showing historical, educational and recreational highlights of Wisconsin. The State Historical Society has agreed to assist in acquiring articles for the home used by families of the Grignon era.

Construction plans for the original home are filed in Washington D. C. An effort is being made to secure the plans to permit restoration. The Chamber of Commerce has done much to assist the citizen committee and will work with that group on future projects. Signs have been erected throughout the city guiding visitors to the home.

Papers Filed

Future plans call for the installation of a water wheel in the small canal directly across from the home. The wheel will be in memory of Louis Nelson, a long time resident, former mayor and one who did considerable work on the Grignon Home.

Incorporation papers have been filed with the state for the "Grignon Home Historical Group."

Directors are Mrs. Gen Anderson, Gilbert Anderson, James Bamberg, Joseph Bayor, D. J. Bordini, John Corcoran, Mary Margaret DeClercq, John Elsen, James Gertz, Carl Hansen, Lester Forde, George Greenwood,

David graduated from St. Therese Grade School and Menasha St. Mary High School. He said he was probably assigned to a construction unit because "ever since I was 12 years old I have spent my summers doing one sort of construction or another. Everything from road building to grave digging."

Menasha Youth Hurt In Football Game

MENASHA — James Van Gompel, 12, 712 Grove St., Menasha, son of Mr. and Mrs. Clement M. Van Gompel, was rushed to Theda Clark Memorial Hospital for emergency treatment shortly after 7 p.m. Saturday with cuts on his face suffered in a neighborhood football game.

Police said James apparently was at the bottom of a pile-up in the game held near Clovis Grove Elementary school.

Computers Aid Valley Schools Keep Records

Instructional Program

The school could not afford the equipment if it were not being used for the instructional program, Bertram said. Its record keeping uses are an added benefit, "but it is a substantial benefit, and we believe we will continue to discover added uses," he said.

The equipment is saving days and sometimes weeks for the school's office workers. The computer calculates the typical monthly payroll in about 10 minutes, handles the bills in about three to four weeks later as in the past, because of the computer's help in compiling information. Making out these class rolls formerly took a week and a half full time.

Evening school students will start enrolling this week on data processing course cards on which all course information in code, will be punched later from a master card. A second punched card will be returned to the student as his receipt.

650 Cards Per Minute

It doesn't matter how mixed up the cards become — they can be sorted at a rate of 650 per minute by the automatic sorter. The cards can be dropped into the computer, which reads 250 cards per minute and types out class roll sheets, room and teaching schedules, summaries for annual reports and other categories of information. The machine types these on a master which can be run through the duplicating machine to provide as many copies as needed.

For day school courses, the computer provides student and class records in much the same way. It also compiles students' grades and attendance records each semester, which are pasted on the permanent record sheet, and rapidly computes grade averages and honor rolls.

In the bookkeeping department, all budget accounts, bills, checks and employees are coded and numbered, and the information is punched on data cards, which are run through the computer to obtain bill lists, payroll computations and other business records. The monthly board report, which formerly took three days to complete, now can be done in minutes, and the machine stores the information from the previous month, so that annual summary reports can be obtained simply by pushing the right buttons.

Calculates Taxes

For the payroll, the machine automatically calculates and keeps a cumulative total of federal, state and social security taxes and retirement deductions for each employee, without individual posting and balancing. The school also plans to use the computer for its inventory records.

The advantages of using the computer, Bertram says, are that it gives more information than could be obtained by any other means, it does in a short period of time things that would take a great deal of time, it is more accurate, it gives information in a more usable form and it enables the school to obtain almost any information in the record system in a matter of hours.

The biggest advantage is that it makes information available so promptly, he said.

Xavier officials also are enthusiastic about their system, in which student grade cards for each course are punched by the Milwaukee firm, graded by teachers with a special pencil and used for compiling report cards, cumulative permanent records, class ranks, grade averages, honor rolls, lists of failures, grade distributions by teachers and other statistical breakdowns called "very interesting from the viewpoint of school administration."

$2 Per Student

This system costs about $2 per student per year, according to Sister Peter, principal of the girls' department. It is not used now to handle scheduling because of expense, but can be. The school's financial records are handled by a different firm in Minneapolis.

The advantages of the system, Brother Josephus said, are its systematized, "professional" method of recordkeeping and the increased amount of valuable statistical information it makes available. The main disadvantage, he said, is the "time lag." Records are sent to Milwaukee on Monday mornings and it usually takes about four days to process them.

The value of the statistics, Sister Peter explained, is that they help the administrator see problems that need adjusting. For example, if an instructor has a group of top level students and is giving a high percentage of D grades, this may be grouped properly or some other problem has arisen, she said.

Another advantage, she said, is that the system "saves the faculty so much time. They are not clerks, they are teachers."

Lawrence University uses its computer and auxiliary equipment primarily for teaching and research purposes, but also plans to "phase in" a great number of administrative routines which will not require much machine time once the mechanics are worked out, according to Marwin Wrostad, business manager. Using it for recordkeeping is "not because of economy, but because of efficiency and better information," he said.

Miss Dorothy Draheim, Lawrence registrar, explained the computer is used for the student directory, students' cumulative records, class lists, processing of grades at the end of each term, compilation of academic averages for individuals and for any group (such as men, women, sororities, sophomores), and ranks students in whatever groups are designated. It was used experimentally for the third term last year and is in full use this year.

The computer is not yet used for assigning classroom space or evaluating use of available hours for scheduling, but this may be done in the future, she said. John Church III is director of the computer center.

Wisconsin State University-Oshkosh acquired its computer last winter, and uses it for processing of student records, registration data, grade reports, directories, and different classifications of students, as well as for professor's research problems. Don Haerter is supervisor of the IBM room, and Don Costello is the faculty member in charge of the computer center.

Public Nurses Try to Aid Health of Migrant Workers

State Hires Two to Assist in Allaying Conditions for Families

BY CHARLES HOUSE
Post-Crescent Staff Writer

The State of Wisconsin keeps tabs on its part-time citizens, the 11,000 migrant workers who invade our state annually to bring in the harvest. Wisconsin's concern is not entirely altruistic. It is based partly on humanitarian concern, and partly on a need to keep careful watch for the outbreak of communicable diseases.

The migrant farm workers, most of them Spanish-speaking American citizens, are ill equipped to care for their health problems. Many of them must live in ramshackle hogans, sometimes five in a bed, in conditions where contagious diseases could spread quickly. It is into such living conditions that the state of Wisconsin takes long, careful looks.

The migrant workers, almost all of them Texas Mexicans, live on marginal incomes and earn, at best, a general average of a scant $6 per day. They roam from state to state to follow the harvest and lose working days to travel time as they do to bad weather. They have no roots and their problems of health and of finance are so great as to be seemingly insurmountable.

Expectant mothers among the migrants frequently fail to visit physicians during their prenatal days. Some give birth to their children in the working fields and, all too soon, go back to work.

In Wisconsin most of the migrant workers camps are contained in the counties of Waukegan, Door, Green Lake, Marquette, Portage, Adams and Washington. The living quarters are periodically inspected by the State Board of Health and "certified" or "not certified". But crowded conditions and, in some cases, unhealthful living quarters, enhance the spread of such ailments as impetigo, a contagious skin disease. Entire camps can be and sometimes are demoralized by such difficulties.

To assist the Mexican visitors in Wisconsin, public health nurses visit such camp areas as well as to supplement the nursing service to Wisconsin citizens of the regions.

To educate the Mexican visitors in matters of personal hygiene and health, and to supplement the nursing service to the Wisconsin citizens of the area, two extra nurses are employed annually from June to September. They are Miss Cecilia Giesing and Miss Mary Elizabeth (Beth) Lewis, both of whom serve under the banner of the Bureau of Public Health Nursing. They function under the direction of the State Board of Health and in cooperation with various public health committees such as that of Waukegan County.

"Our principal job," said Miss Lewis, "is to teach these people to take measures toward better personal health, and to stop communicable diseases before they get a start."

Approved Policies

Miss Lewis and Miss Giesing operate under policies approved by regional physicians. They visit the various migrant workers' camps periodically or as the need arises. They tend to keep a careful watch over possibilities of a breakout of diseases as well as for more personal ailments such as pediculosis (lice infestation).

Though there are no state

funds specifically marked for migrant aid, the public health nurses are equipped for first aid or for emergency assistance in case of accidents.

Much of the attention of the public health nurses are bestowed upon ill-advised young women who pay scant attention to prenatal care.

"Some of these young people never see a doctor," said Miss Lewis. "They take their chances with their own health and safety, and with that of their babies. Perhaps this is because they believe they cannot afford the cost of a physician or because they are inadequately informed," she said.

On one recent journey to some Waukegan County camps, Miss Lewis transported there an incubator for a premature baby who was ill; and a layette for an impoverished family. In the latter case, the young mother was expecting the child almost momentarily and yet had managed to obtain only three diapers.

Miss Lewis made the presentation gently because the Mexican people are shy and proud.

"This," said Miss Lewis, "is a layette. It is a complete set of clothing and equipment for your baby."

The dark-eyed Mexican girl was shy. She stared at the floor but managed to whisper a soft "thank you."

Her young husband bared his white teeth in a wide smile.

"This is real nice," he said with a Spanish accent.

Miss Lewis returned his grin.

"You won't use these for towels, now will you?" she asked.

"Oh, no, ma'am!"

"Good. Now tell me, have you had your wife go to a doctor? The baby could be born even today."

"Yes, Ma'am," he said. "I'll take her today."

Miss Lewis and the mother-to-be exchanged woman-talk for a time.

"Don't forget, now," Miss Lewis called as she departed. "She really should see a doctor."

Miss Lewis then delivered the incubator to the mother of the premature baby.

"Now," she said, "I borrowed this for you. I know you will take very good care of it so that we can loan it to other mothers when they need it."

The young mother promised to take care of it. She was instructed in its use and in temperatures; and she, too, was urged to take the infant to a physician. She would, she promised.

Later, Miss Lewis was asked if the layette and the incubator was from the state of Wisconsin.

Emergency Help

"Oh, no," she said. "A public health nurse is always grateful to know where needed resources can be found when they're needed in emergencies like this."

The articles were, in fact, "scrounged" or "liberated" as soldiers say; and Miss Lewis declined to identify the charitable person or group which provided the needed articles.

An Incubator Arrives

An initial part of the duties of Miss Lewis and Miss Giesing is to become accepted by the shy Mexicans and to merit their confidence.

"Like any shy persons, these people tend to be secretive about their problems," Miss Lewis said; "and we would find ourselves unable to help or advise them, or refer them to a doctor when they need one."

Thus it is imperative to meet the migrant workers on an equal basis and with a friendly heart. Even so, there is a tendency among the migratory workers to be secretive about social diseases and even such illness as tuberculosis.

Occasionally when a worker is suspected of suffering from a tubercular disease, he is carefully checked and cleared (or not cleared) for his travels from state to state.

Though the complicated problems of the migrant workers have been the cause of some study and some effort, too, to relieve their plight which is considerable, Wisconsin's moves to help are only vestigial, according to some sociologists.

Execrable living conditions which are said to be "as good as they have at home" is a serious problem nevertheless. Provided by the farmers in each case whose crops are being harvested or prepared, there is some reason for inadequate housing, improper heating, and poor cooking and washing facilities. To many such farmers, a better housing facility would be exorbitant in cost; the migrants are here only about five weeks of the year.

Legislation has sought, but has failed, to provide adequately for these sufferers of want amidst plenty. Other problems are legion.

One commendable effort has been instituted for children of the migrant workers. Those who are too young to remain in the fields with their working mothers are provided with Day Care centers under the Division of Children and Youth, a part of the Department of Public Welfare.

Class Work

Established at Plainfield, Red Granite, Hancock and Wautoma, the Day Care Centers serve more than one purpose.

Migrant mothers can work to supplement the family income while their children (under the age of 12 years) may attend the Day Care Center four days each week for six weeks at a cost of $1 per week.

The children of the migratory workers learn to read and write English under the tutelage of regular teachers.

At Tri-County Area Schools, Wautoma, the Mexican visitors attend with area children who have been found to be slow at reading skills.

Allen Barnes, high school physical education teacher in charge of the program at Wautoma, said the attendance varies from about 45 to 55 pupils daily. Attendance is not compulsory but most of the young children of the migratory workers are pupils there.

"It relieves the mother of baby-sitting and permits her to help earn the family wages," he said. "The children are happy here. They enjoy learning and they enjoy the recreation provided for them. And its good for them to mingle. They get along wonderfully well."

The children attend the Center from 8:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. and are served a good lunch. One of the aims of the program is to improve the educational opportunities for the children, most of whom miss weeks of school due to the seasonal work of their parents.

A similar day Care Center was established in Endeavor in 1956 at "La Casa de Nuestra Senora de Guadalupe," Our Lady of Guadalupe House. Remedial reading courses are taught by Dominican Sisters assisted by high school girls. A similar parochial project is to be commenced next year at Cambria, Colombia County.

Though the problems of the substrata migrant farm workers have been a burden on Wisconsin's conscience for some years, living as they do in poverty amid plenty, there has been no hard and fast solution—either social or legal—which has benefited them substantially. Two public nurses for approximately 5,000 workers in this area seems little enough for the poverty-stricken people who come so far to earn so little.

Religious Instruction

Combined Locks Nuns Start Ambitious Project

COMBINED LOCKS — The nuns is to teach religion to most extensive Confraternity of children from grades one through 12. Religion classes for the Catholic Diocese of Green Bay is being set up in St. Paul parish through cooperation of the Holy Cross and the Rev. Bernard Timmer, parish pastor.

Three nuns from the motherhouse at Bay Settlement, near Green Bay, arrived last week to begin setting up the program for youngsters and adults. The nuns expressed amazement and pleasure with the cooperation of village residents.

The nuns, Sister Roseanne, who serves as superior, Sister Ernestine and Sister Paula Marie, formerly taught school, but underwent special training and instruction to qualify for the project they hope to establish.

Classes for high school students are offered three evenings per week from 6:30 to 7:30 p.m. Special 9 to 10 a.m. classes are held Saturdays for students in grades one through six. Lay teachers assist nuns in conducting the Saturday sessions.

The nuns work with lay teachers, helping them to help themselves in instruction procedures, but always ready to advise or assist if desired. Being set up under the CCD program are discussion clubs, helper groups, Fishers, Apostles of Good Will, teachers and parent educators.

Other Activities The nuns will set up subordinate branches, designed to appeal to various age groups, and work with committee heads and leaders to assure success of the program. The program is designed to permit all age groups to participate in parish activity in some capacity.

Purpose of the program is to make all in the parish feel they can contribute something to the improvement and advancement of the parish.

Each afternoon the nuns make visits to homes in the community to discuss with parents activities of the CCD, progress of children or to assist or advise parents, if requested, on moral training for children of all age levels.

The nuns are using the old rectory of the old church as living quarters.

Meetings Conducted

Meetings were conducted last week with committees from Brown, Green Lake, and Washington counties. Scheduled for Thursday of this week are meetings with either complete boards or board committees from Winnebago, Dodge, Calumet, Manitowoc, Waushara and Marquette counties. Outagamie County board members will sit as a committee of the whole Friday to learn the equalized valuation of that county.

Fond du Lac County's meeting has been set for Monday, Sept. 28. Meetings with Kewaunee and Door County representatives will be in October.

In reviewing the new construction this year of $139,883,300, Sherman pointed out that industrial and mercantile construction has been staying up while new home construction has taken a drop for the last several years.

New construction is up this year over the $114 million recorded for both last year and 1962, but is down from the $187 million listed for 1961 and the $178 million in 1960.

State law requires each county to be reappraised for its equalized value on a personal inspection basis about once every six or seven years. We have been able to visit each county only once every 10 years, Sherman continued. On his staff are nine assessment supervisors, including himself, four secretaries and two clerk-typists.

Scheduled for mass physical reappraisals for next year are a completion of Manitowoc County which was begun this year, Fond du Lac county and a start on Winnebago County which will be completed in 1966. Outagamie and Calumet counties are planned for appraisals in the 1966-67 period.

Full values must be set each year, Sherman said, in 10 categories of real estate and 13 classes of personal property. No other state in the country has equalized values as detailed and as fine as Wisconsin, he noted.

Each real estate transfer in a county is recorded and questionnaires sent to the buyer and seller, asking the price and if there is any relationship between the buyer and seller. This is done to get a true market value for the property. Sales between relatives or to governmental units are not used to establish these values.

These sales figures for three or four years are spotted on a map and then are visited in person by the assessment supervisor when he makes a mass appraisal of that county. By knowing the price trends and land values, the state assessment supervisors are able to peg the land price for each individual unit in the county. Local assessors furnish them with the new construction during the year.

Personal property is handled as a separate listing each year because of the changes in manufacturing or merchants stock as to number on hand and the value of such stock. Income tax returns are used to help set these values.

Manufacturing plants are per-

Religion Classes

One of the primary duties of sonally inspected during the mass physical appraisals since machinery is figured as a part of the building's value.

As for livestock values, the staff members attend livestock auctions and talk with dealers so as to get an idea of the price of livestock as of May 1 of each year. The number of cattle, swine, sheep and other farm animals or poultry on a farm are supplied by the local assessors each year.

After all this data is collected and the values worked out for each town, city and village in a county, these figures then are submitted to the county boards for their approval. County boards have rarely rejected these equalized value estimates and have adopted them as the basis for county tax levy apportionment.

Seek Shelter In Oshkosh For Students

October Meeting Draws Councils From High Schools

OSHKOSH—Housing for close to 400 students is sought by Oshkosh High School officials for the weekend of Oct. 7 to 9 when the school plays host to the 30th anniversary convention of the Wisconsin Association of Student Councils.

Persons with housing available for Thursday and Friday night of that week may obtain housing forms from the high school guidance office.

"Thirty years of progress—future unlimited!" has been chosen as the theme for this year's convention of high school student councils from throughout Wisconsin.

The convention opens Friday, Oct. 9. Many students are expected to arrive on Thursday night, Oct. 8.

Gerald Van Poole of Washington, D. C., will be keynote speaker. He is with the National Association of Secondary School Principals at Washington and was the executive secretary of the State Student Council group when it last met here in 1946.

Speaker at the convention banquet on Friday, Oct. 9, will be Assemblyman William Steiger of Oshkosh.

Discussion topics chosen include the role of the student council in controlling teen-age drinking and vandalism and membership standards and characteristics of student council members and officers.

Man on Probation for Disorderly Conduct

Clayton Newhouse, 46, 209½ W. Pacific St., pleaded guilty Friday in Outagamie County Court Branch 2 to a charge of disorderly conduct and was placed on probation one year.

Newhouse was charged Sept. 13 by Appleton police who said the man tried to cut his wrists with a kitchen knife.

Teen-Age GOP To Stage Mock Session

Delegates to Caucus, Present Candidates For Elected Offices

Outagamie County Teen-age Republicans are expected to generate much of the excitement and "politicizing" of a national political convention when they meet at 7:30 p.m. Monday, in the Lake Michigan Room of Hotel Conway for a mock nominating convention.

After Keith Gibson, temporary chairman for Outagamie County TARS, calls the convention to order, delegations, seated by schools, will caucus to discuss candidates for the high offices of the group. (Filibustering, apparently, will not be allowed, for within 15 minutes, each group must have agreed on a slate.)

Nomination speeches, accompanied, most probably, by demonstrations of great loyalty, will follow. Then balloting and acceptance speeches will bring forth the duly elected officers of the newly organized Outagamie County TARS.

Resolutions will then be offered, but it has not yet been decided whether or not minority reports will be accepted.

Charles Plopper, Marion Garage Owner, Dies

MARION — Charles Plopper, 64, operator of Marion Motor Co. for many years, died at 4:30 a.m. Saturday at his home.

He was born March 1, 1900, at Clintonville, and lived at Marion for the past 40 years. Plopper was past commander of the American Legion post, a member of the Clintonville Blue Lodge 197, of the Clintonville Royal Arch Chapter 103, a past commander of the Clintonville Knights of Templar Commandery 44, the Rotary Club and Marion Advancement Association.

Funeral services will be at 11 a.m. Monday at Clintonville Methodist Church with the Rev. W. H. Wiese, Appleton, and the Rev. Marvin Baker, Duncan, Palls, Ohio, officiating. Burial will be in Graceland Cemetery, Marion.

Friends may call at the U-tomark Funeral Home, Marion, after noon Sunday and from 10 a.m. until services Monday.

Survivors include the widow, two daughters, one son and four grandchildren, a brother and two sisters.

Ruffed Grouse Season to Open Statewide Saturday

Sunday, September 20, 1964

Small Game Legal in Some Areas

BY JIM HARP
There's a rustling in the underbrush, but it's too thick for you to make out what it is. Then suddenly the ruffed grouse explodes from cover heading skyward, twisting and darting through the trees.
Your heart has already skipped one beat and although the bird is rapidly getting out of range you touch off a quick shot just so your companions don't think you were caught off guard.
All the while you're chuckling to yourself because you know the first bird of the season has taken you by surprise and you vow to be ready next time.

SINGLE SHOT

A trio of Appleton hunters took part in a bear hunt with hounds in the northern part of the state last weekend and reported back with considerable success as two bear were bagged in a party of 12 hunters.
Don Kemps, 501 S. Pierce street; Richard Treiber, 1125 W. Lawrence street and Richard Binsfeld, 302 N. Outagamie street, hunted out of Glidden with a group of nine other hunters and eight hounds.
This was the first time on a bear hunt for the three and they said it was a thoroughly enjoyable time. The bear that were bagged were taken on Saturday, one weighing in at 490 pounds and the other at 255.
The smaller of the bears was freed by the hounds while the larger one was brought around to the gunners.

Several calls have come in regarding the opening of the woodcock season in Wisconsin. As of this writing we still have no word on it.

The woodcock season comes under federal control since it is a migratory bird. We suspect that the opening will coincide with the opening of the statewide ruffed grouse season this coming Saturday but so far the official word is not out.

Many people probably have not noticed it, but there has been a sharp decline in the number of seagulls circling lakes and rivers in Wisconsin.

Seagulls have been dying off by the hundreds along the shore of Lake Michigan and fishery officials are becoming worried about it.

As Richard Harris, head of the fishery headquarters at Oshkosh, put it the other day: "We sure hate to see anything happen to the seagull. It's a wonderful bird and does a good job of keeping shores clean."

How would you like a quiet, peaceful afternoon where you can sit and watch summer slip away, soak up some sunshine and forget about the world, business or your everyday working routine? Impossible? Not at all, and it's within everyone's reach.

A week ago yesterday Single Shot and two of the youngsters stopped at a quiet spot where a bridge crosses the Little Wolf River just outside Royalton. It looked like a good spot to soak a worm in the backwaters from the swift current and I had heard earlier in the week that the smallmouth bass had been hitting.

The morning started out cool with the temperature in the low 40's and the heavy sweatshirt felt good. It was near lunchtime when we pulled off the road and walked down to the stream and the warm rays of the sun took the chill out of the air.

By the time I had the poles rigged up and a pair of hoppers were bouncing in the current the kids had finished the lunch and were ready to do some fishing.

The fish didn't cooperate for us or for a pair of old-timers who came along with the idea of getting some smallmouths. In a short time the kids lost interest in the fishing idea and set out to "explore" along the river bank. I settled back against the warm grass and watched the waves dancing downstream and thought about fall, its color and the upcoming hunting season.

Summer seemed to dance right on downstream with the waves and whether the fish bit or not didn't make a difference.

It wasn't an exciting day filled with a catch of big fish, but it was a day that probably will be remembered for a long time.

TIPS FROM THE TACKLE BOX

by B. F. GLADDING

Toggling The Tackle Box
A READY-FOR-BUSINESS tackle box should hold a good assortment of lures, but it should also contain a variety of other items. Here are a few suggestions.
A bottle of metal cleaner and a pad of fine steel wool. Give metal lures a quick shine before using and they'll pull more strikes.
A baiting needle. File a slot in the eye of a large darning needle; use it to draw hook snags through bait fish when rigging up for trolling.
A can of light oil. Oil reels every hour or so for longer life and smoother operation.
A bottle of prepared pork rind strips. Add a fluttering tail to your spoons and plugs when fish need stirring up.
A watchmaker's file is just the ticket for sharpening dull hooks, and no tackle box should be without pliers and wire cutters. Ditto for a sharp knife; keep it in the tackle box permanently.
This is only a beginning. You'll probably want to add a spring scale for weighing lunkers, a snap stringer, a disgorger, insect repellent, a bottle of iodine for treating cuts—and the list goes on and on.

Construction Work Has Started on the 3-acre lake which will be formed at the Outagamie County Conservation Club grounds north of Appleton. Abe Miller, left, chairman of the lake project and Clem McHugh, club president, are shown watching the operations. When the lake is completed fish will be planted in it and it will serve as a water supply for game in the area. (Post-Crescent Photo)

Dedicate New Headquarters

Structure at Spooner Honors William J. P. Aberg

MADISON—The Conservation Department's new $125,000 Northwest Area Headquarters Building at Spooner will be officially dedicated in honor of former Commissioner William J. P. Aberg in ceremonies at 2:30 p.m. on Thursday.
The Conservation Commission will conduct its regular monthly meeting in the new structure on Friday.

Aberg, who served as a commissioner for 12 years, was one of the authors of the Conservation Act of 1927 which established the 6-man unpaid rule and policy-making body that still manages Wisconsin's natural resources. He also drafted the original bill which led to enactment of the Forest Crop Law and was instrumental in restoration of Horicon marsh and in obtaining national forests for Wisconsin.

The new masonry-brick building measures 152 x 32 feet and is of contemporary design. It provides office facilities for 32 department employees in nine different divisions.

Speakers during the ceremony will be Conservation Commissioner Chairman Guido Rahr, Manitowish, who will talk on "Conservation in Northwest Wisconsin"; Edward E. Omerik, former mayor of Spooner, whose speech is entitled "Conservation in the Community"; and Commissioner Charles F. Smith, Wausau, who will pay tribute to Aberg. Others participating will be Commissioner Paul J. Olson, Madison; Department Director L. P. Voigt; and Assistant Director George E. Sprecher.

Golden Retriever Trial and Show Set at Horicon

HORICON—The Golden Retriever Club of America will hold its 25th anniversary National Specialty field trial, obedience trial and show at Horicon Sept. 25-27. The events are open to golden retrievers only.

Entries will come from all over the U.S. The trial puts on display some of the best among the nation's Golden Retrievers whether it be for work in the hunting field, performance in the obedience ring or conformation to the standard which says what a good golden retriever should look like.

The field trial portion of the annual event, which was held here two years ago, starts at 1 p.m. Friday on Horicon marsh. The show and obedience events will be on Sunday in the park pavilion in Horicon.

Opening Time
A scene such as this will probably be repeated frequently during the Wisconsin ruffed grouse season which gets underway Saturday morning statewide. Official opening time for ruffed grouse will be 5:48 a.m. and, as it happens on the game calendar, the closing time on the first day turns out to be 5:48 p.m.

While ruffed grouse will be the primary target of most hunters who will be out, the season also opens on a number of other species.

Sharp-tailed grouse will be legal targets in a special northern zone, approximately the upper one-third section of the state, also starting Saturday. Whereas the season on ruffed grouse runs from Sept. 26 to Nov. 17 in the north, the season on sharp-tails is relatively short, extending from Saturday through Oct. 11.

There will be no open season in the state on quail or prairie chicken this fall and pheasants and Hungarian partridge do not become legal game until Oct. 17 at noon.

In certain sections of the state a number of varieties of small game also will be the target of hunters come Saturday. Squirrels, racoon and rabbits can be taken, but hunters should consult the pamphlet they received with their hunting license to check the highway boundary lines for the open zones. In some areas these small game animals do not become legal until the Oct. 17 date.

Such is the case in Outagamie County where ruffed grouse become legal targets Saturday while the opening for pheasant, rabbit, squirrel and Hungarian partridge is not until Oct. 17. By contrast, parts of Waupaca, Wausau and Shawano counties will be open for grouse along with the rabbits and squirrels next weekend.

Little Change
In the line of bag limits there is very little, if any, change from last season. The limit on ruffed grouse is three per day with a possession limit of six. The same holds true for sharp-tailed grouse and Hungarian partridge.

Hunters are allowed five squirrels with a possession limit of 10. Three rabbits will be allowed — either cottontails or jackrabbits, while there is no limit on snowshoe hare in the northern zone. The season on snowshoes also extends the year-round. There is no bag limit on racoon.

When the pheasant season opens the bag limit will be the same as during the 1963 season. Shooting will be at cocks only with one per hunter allowed the first weekend and two per hunter after that.

Fishing Activity Has Been picking up with the arrival of cooler weather and some nice northern pike have been taken in the area. At the left O. C. Hood, Kirksville, Mo. displays the 11-pound 14-ounce northern he took while fishing in the Cary Mill Pond near

Similar in Actions, Performance

Duck Hunter or Grid Fan—Much Alike

BY DAVE DUFFEY
Post-Crescent News Service
Along with a willingness to huddle in an exposed place through the weather changes of wind, rain, sun, snow and sleet, duck hunters and football fans have a lot in common.

At least the duck blinds and the stadium seats are populated with individuals who show a marked degree of similarity to each other in their actions and performance.

First of all, you have the late comer. He comes put-put-putting out to the duck blind 15 minutes after opening time just when the birds are flying and kicks them too high in the air for good shooting. He just had to have a little more sleep in the morning.

His counterpart in the stands at Green Bay's city stadium manages to time his entrance into a crowded tier with the opening kick-off, blotting out the view of those who arrived on time but were unfortunate enough to be seated behind him. He had "plenty of time" for "just one more drink" before leaving for the game.

Can't Find Seat
This type often combines his late arrival habit with an inability to find his hunting spot or his seat in the stadium. He's prone to stand and argue with whomever happens to be occupying the spot he thinks he ought to have, with the result that the only flight of ducks coming into the decoys all day is flared off or some spectators miss the game's first touchdown.

A second kind of pest is the jumper-upper. He can't sit still in a blind or in a stadium seat. He stands up for a look just as the ducks turn and head your way. You watch them bank around and head out. At the football game, just when you've got the binoculars focused on a passer receiver and a defensive back going up after the ball, he stands up and blots out the picture.

There's another kind of kook too. He's a sort of compulsive eater. Something about duck blinds and stadium seats makes him hungry. He always has a cup of coffee in his hand or is mooching or offering a sandwich when the shooting opportunities arrive. But he's no problem compared to the football game eater, who applauds with a box full of popcorn, showing his seatmates, or dumps some steaming coffee on the man in front of him.

Ready Made Excuse
Of course, there's the guy who really isn't interested in either duck hunting or football. He considers it good form to get out on a "he-man" outing once in a while. This means all the beer and booze he can stow away in the shortest space of time possible, with the ready made excuse each time he takes a schluck or a snort that "a man needs something to keep him warm."

The duck blinds and the stadium stands both have their self-anointed experts, who don't know one duck or one play from another, but keep a running commentary going, explaining to everyone within hearing that the sea gull was a snow goose or a screen pass was a trap play.

There's also the hunter or the spectator, who because he drank too much coffee, didn't wear enough clothes, or for some other reason is uncomfortable, has to get up and leave frequently. Whether duck hunting or at a football game, this compelling urge always strikes him at a crucial moment and the man who is there to hunt ducks or watch football misses the action.

No Way Confined
These pests are in no way confined to the male gender. And as females are inclined to do, they manage to compound the irritation. In most instances, they seem more interested in their personal appearance than either the ducks or the football. So they shudder when a retriever shakes mud and water on another, but keep a running er when sheath dresses and silk stockings don't provide adequate protection from the cold winds that whip around county stadium.

But the least enervating characters are the females who go along hunting or attend a football game either because they think it's "the thing to do" or because they don't want their spouses out of their sight for a few hours. They either stare with every expression of boredom at the distant horizon, or critically examine their fellow spectators at the game, alleviating the monotony by re-doing their faces or fumbling through their purses.

And finally, there's the early leaver. He doesn't care that the ducks are usually working around closing time. He's had enough shooting or he's got another engagement and he wants to get his decoys in before dark. He's out picking up just when the last good bundle comes wheeling in, only to spook off his skiff.

Beat Traffic

His image at the football game is the guy who, when the Packers are leading by two touchdowns and there's two minutes left, is going to beat the stadium traffic rush. So he slides and bumps past the still interested fans who enjoy every play until the final gun sounds. Or the fan misses the performance of a particular lineman he's been watching when the early leaver dawdles for a time to pass the time of day with a chance acquaintance.

It seems a shame that so much hunting space and so many stadium seats are taken up by time killers and spoil sports, when there must be hundreds of more appreciative aficionados who are shut out. But the world takes all kinds, everybody gets his or her kicks in a different manner, and the died-in-the-wool duck hunter and the don't-want-to-miss-a-minute football fan will have to cloak their exasperation and grumble to themselves.

Regatta Today Ends, Outboard Race Season

KAUKAUNA—The Wisconsin Stock Utility Outboard Racing Association will conclude its summer schedule with a regatta here this afternoon. Competition is scheduled in all stock hydro and utility classes, with the first race slated for 1 p.m.

BY DALE MOREY AND AL VANDERBLOEMEN
Conservation Wardens
The early season for hunting deer with bow and arrow only this fall is Sept. 26 through Nov. 17.

The late season is Dec. 5-31. Both seasons are state-wide. Bear also may be hunted with bow and arrow on the same dates. Hunting hours for both deer and bear are from 1/2 hour before sunrise to sunset.

Again this year, it is unlawful to transport any deer or on any vehicle from the time it is killed to the time it is registered unless the deer is carried openly exposed and in such a manner so that the deer tag attached to the deer can not be handled or manipulated by any occupant of the vehicle. This regulation affects both gun and bow and arrow hunting.

The regulation prohibiting the possession of a firearm while hunting during the bow and arrow season has been repealed. However, the regulation on possession of a deer showing evidence that it was shot with a firearm is still in effect and has been clarified. Any deer showing any evidence of having been shot with a firearm is an illegal deer and it is illegal to possess it.

It is quite easy to determine if a deer has been killed or wounded by a firearm. Wardens have now had many years experience with this, and have developed many techniques to aid in making this determination. With the use of a mine detector even small fragments of lead can be found.

Over the years, most arrests concerning bow and arrow hunters have been for:

1. Carrying a bow and arrow in or on a vehicle not unstrung or enclosed within a carrying case.
 2. Having in possession or under control, a bow and arrow in a vehicle while shining wild animals.
 3. Hunting after hours.
- We continue to get questions on using a pistol to finish off a bear after it has been wounded with a bow and arrow. The answer is definitely no. The season is open for hunting bear and deer with a bow and arrow only from Sept. 26 through Nov. 17.

While the regulation has been changed and now allows the possession of a firearm while hunting during the bow and arrow only season, it does not allow the using in any manner of such a firearm to shoot any deer or bear.

The Enchantment of a well-designed Early American home is recaptured in this 1½ story, four-bedroom house, with a lot of modern extras for comfort

House of the Week

Home-Grown Ease in Early American

BY ANDY LANG

There's a quiet, home-grown comfort about Early American design. Its traditional exterior features never go out of style. Many persons who set out to select one of the architectural creations developed in the 20th century find themselves choosing Early American because it so nearly expresses their ideas of what homes should look like.

An authentic representation of this ever-popular style has been designed by architect Rudolph A. Materi in the latest House of the Week. Even the "built-on" appearance of so many Early American homes has been reproduced in Design H-49.

Note the center, stone-faced portion of the house. This parallels the basic living quarters which would have been built first. As the family and its requirements expanded, so did the home with the left and right wings. Here, of course, the entire house is put together at one time.

The high-pitched roof, indispensable in the colonial days because of severe weather conditions, provides sufficient space here for two large bedrooms and plenty of closet and storage never even imagined when this style of architecture first made its appearance. Note the attractive bay window and Dutch door leading to the rear porch.

Central Interest

H-49 Statistics

Design H-49 has four bedrooms, three bathrooms and a lavatory, a living room, dining room, kitchen with a separate all breakfast area, laundry, rear porch and two-car garage. There are 1,505 square feet of living space on the first floor, 595 feet on the second floor. The overall length is 78 feet 6 inches, with an over-all depth of 30 feet 9 inches, including the garage, which has a rear service entrance as well as indoor - outdoor storage cabinets.

located, is also typical of the Early American hearth. This once was the only source of heat and the central location aided, to a minor degree, the heating plan shows. Not included in this footage is a two-car garage, the fireplace in the living room is a focal point of interest.

The living room has a large bow window looking out on the rear, as well as double Dutch doors providing access to a porch. Add the 25-foot length of this room to the 12-foot length of the dining room and you have a 27-foot sweep. Sliding glass doors in the dining room provide another entrance to the porch.

A large kitchen has an efficiency U-shaped area for food preparation and a separate breakfast section. Adjacent to the kitchen are a laundry and a lavatory, with a front service porch that is out of sight but convenient.

Bedroom Wing The two-bedroom wing on the first floor, giving the family four bedrooms in all, is buffered from the living area by two well-sized bathrooms. One of the bedrooms is entered from the hall leading to the other bedroom.

The 1505 square feet of habitable area on this first floor contains an abundance of closet space, as a glance at the floor plan shows. Not included in this footage is a two-car garage, which has indoor-outdoor storage cabinets, accessible from the garage or the rear porch.

State Gets Help From Stranger

OLYMPIA, Wash. (AP) — The State metaphorically patted an unexpected helper on the back Friday and thanked it for possibly canceling an expensive moth control program.

The new arrival is a virus that has been decimating tussock moths in eastern Washington fir trees.

As with all clear finishes, varnish is the subject of some slight differences of opinion, even among professionals, on the proper manner of application. But there is no argument on one point: the big enemy of varnish is dust. Not after it has hardened, but before and during the applying and drying stages. It is imperative not only that every bit of dust be removed from the surface to be covered, but that the project be undertaken only

Seymour Opens Lighting Bids

SEYMOUR — Eight bids on street lighting equipment were opened by the city council Tuesday night and referred to Earl Gosse, director of the public works department.

Gosse is expected to tabulate and analyze the bids and present them at a future council meeting. Delivery will take 40 to 60 days.

The Seymour Commerce of Business has gone on record favoring a change in the present business section lighting along Main Street.

in a reasonably dust-free room. This is not always possible; if it isn't you're going to have a very difficult job getting a good result. Don't varnish in any room or place where any one will be walking until the final coat has thoroughly dried. And if you work in a place which has a concrete floor, such as a basement or garage, wet down the floor completely to prevent dust from arising.

Remove Dust

Generally, it is recommended that dust be removed from the wood prior to varnishing with a clean, lintless rag dampened with turpentine. An even better way is to use a vacuum cleaner or one of its attachments.

Remember that varnish, like any clear finish, will darken the wood slightly.

The varnishing should be done in a room or area where the temperature is at least 70 degrees Fahrenheit.

Don't shake or stir the varnish, as this will cause bubbles that will show up when the finish is applied. Use flowing brush strokes in the direction of the grain. Finish off by "tipping," which consists of stroking lightly with the tips of the bristles. For this third stroking, the brush should be almost dry.

Glossy varnishes give the toughest surface. Professionals often use the glossy-type varnish, then rub it down to a smooth satin finish. It is possible to buy varnish which gives a rubbed effect without the rubbing. Two or three coats are necessary, sanding lightly between coats and allowing at least 16 hours for each coat to dry before the sanding.

House to Get City Sewers

2 Homes Subject Of Council Action On Health Report

Two Appleton residences were the targets of a common council order Wednesday night.

They are located at 1519 N. Wayne St. and 425 W. Seymour St.

Acting on a recommendation of the board of health, the council directed immediate action be taken to have the Wayne Street home hooked up to city sewers.

Ordered connected were bath tubs, septic tanks, water closets, lavatories, sinks and urinals.

With regard to the Seymour Street building, the council ordered it condemned.

Other council action included:

— Scheduling of an informal hearing Oct. 5 at 9 a.m. on a request to rezone from single to multiple family several lots between West Bell and West Hawes avenues, east of Mason Street.

— Awarding a contract to a Minneapolis firm to seal approximately 75 sewer joints at a cost of about $7,500.

— Directing the razing of the Simon O'Connell property on the northeast corner of N. Richmond and W. Franklin Streets in connection with a street extension project.

NEW BUILDING PROGRESS REPORT

- 1. During the past week, we have moved into our New Safe Deposit Department, which combines elegant decor with impressive solidity and security. Come by and see it!
- 2. New sidewalks have been poured, and next week the Green Barricade will come down. Auto and pedestrian traffic conditions on College Avenue will improve.
- 3. Work is starting on the mural which will be just inside the glass facade at the front of the building so that the finished mural will have the maximum impact (we are sure you'll find it exciting!) The glass facade has been curtained while work is in progress.
- 4. Painting and plumbing, plastering and electrical work — everything proceeds on schedule and we expect to be able to show you the very finest banking quarters in the area before the snow flies!

Double the Work- But Double the Fun

Ambrose Mongins of Kimberly Have House Full of Twins

BY JEAN OTTO
Post-Crescent Women's Editor

Virginia Mongin says she never manages to answer the door without an apron on or a diaper in her hand. It's easy to understand why. Until a few weeks ago there were five Mongin youngsters in diapers. Now there are four. Martin, 3, has decided he's too grown up for them.

Mr. and Mrs. Ambrose Mongin, 140 Darboy Road, Kimberly, find their lives completely home-centered. Since their marriage five years ago they have had three sets of twins and a single child. Laura and Clara are 4; Martin will be 3 Sept. 24; Edward and Elinor will be 2 in November, and Ralph and George are two months. Since the couple's marriage Mr. Mongin has adopted his wife's son, Peter. He's the only one in school. Every day of the week there are seven little ones clamoring for attention, asserting their personalities, crying their needs and keeping the house lively.

Everyone's an individual at the Mongin house. And each is treated that way. After Pete had gone to school one morning this week, the family was occupied at a number of tasks. Mrs.

Mongin was getting twins Ralph and George organized for the day, giving them fresh diapers and breakfast. Laura was doing dishes, with an occasional assist from Martin and Elinor. Clara was keeping the 'waiting-to-be-fed' baby happy with hugs and kisses, and Ambrose was doing his best to make an unhappy Eddie stop crying.

Virginia says that when she was told to expect twins the first time, she was pleased. Son Peter prayed every night for twin sisters. The second time she suspected twins Virginia says she rebelled. She told her doctor that if it was two, she didn't want to know. She couldn't face the prospect of managing double again, and was so determined not to admit the possibility, that when she bought the baby's going-home-from-the-hospital outfit, she purposefully bought only for one.

During her convalescence in the hospital, Virginia says she cried the entire week, certain she could never manage two-year-old Clara and Laura, year-old Martin and the new babies. When she got home, however, she

Mr. and Mrs. Ambrose Mongin, Kimberly, have had seven children in their five years of marriage. Three of the four births were twins. Mrs. Mongin's eight-year-old son Peter has been adopted by Mr. Mongin. Above, in a family portrait, are, seated on the floor, Peter and twins, Elinor and Eddie, 1½. Behind them are Martin, almost 3; Clara and Laura, 4; Mrs. Mongin holding Ralph, and Mr. Mongin holding George. The babies were born July 1. A year and a half ago the family moved to its present large home with a big yard and plenty of play room. The move made family life more relaxed, as there is space for the children to grow.

Twins. Mrs. Mongin says, are not as much work as everyone seems to think. They learn to take care of each other and are not as demanding of a mother's time. Laura and Clara have a newly acquired taste for house-keeping and help with dishes and straightening. Above, Laura does dishes with the aid of Martin. Below, Clara keeps George happy while Ralph has his breakfast. At right, a process that is repeated many times a day takes place on the living room sofa. When Mrs. Mongin came home from the hospital with Ralph and George, the family had five children in diapers.

Working shifts enables Ambrose Mongin to be at home with his family during daytime hours. This has been a real help, his wife says, as it gives him and the children a chance to know each other and helps him understand the problems of caring for seven pre-school children at one time. Mr. Mongin has become quite proficient at the intricacies of child care, his wife asserts. He also finds time to teach Peter to ride his new bicycle. At left, he comforts a crying Eddie and tries to stave off the sympathy tears of Ellie.

Earth-Bound Men to Benefit From Space Studies

BY RALPH DIGHTON

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Dennis has a boy-size wheelchair. He can make it go — but not everywhere.

He can't get up curbs by himself. He can't navigate across a sandlot, where he likes to watch other children play, or across a beach, where he likes to sit watching the surf and the seagulls.

Someday things will be different. There'll be a new kind of mobile chair for Dennis and thousands like him — a mechanical walker that can go just about anywhere but upstairs.

Moon Gear
The walker was developed to carry scientific instruments around on the surface of the moon. It has batteries and a motor that makes its three pairs of legs scurry around at a 3 mile-an-hour clip like a huge insect.

Dennis Butler, 6, a patient at Children's Hospital, doesn't expect he'll ever ride the walker on the moon. He can see, though, that the walker's scientific payload could be replaced with a seat and Dennis could drive it many places now beyond his reach.

The walker is just one of thousands of by-products of the space age, one drop in a cloud-burst of technical fallout too bountiful for industry to absorb all at once.

Spillover
The National Aeronautics and Space Administration, in an effort to store some of this spillover against a time missiles and spacecraft take less of the public budget, has set up a technological utilization office in all its research centers. It was this branch of the space agency which spotted the lunar walker's potential for paraplegics

A Lunar Walker, Developed for moon research but applicable to earth use, is examined by Dennis Butler, 6, a wheelchair patient at Children's Hospital in Los Angeles. Designed to carry scientific instruments on the moon, the walker is considered a possible model for a motorized, versatile wheelchair. Industry and government are seeking ways to channel the wealth of technical fallout of the Space Age into consumer development channels. (AP Newsfeatures Photo) and reported it to public health authorities for development.

Individual aerospace firms have similar groups, and numerous independent firms have turned their talents to suggesting applications of new concepts to fee-paying clients.

But Dr. Werner Hirsch, University of California at Los Angeles sociologist and consultant to NASA, says the job is too big to be done with currently available tools.

Inventive Bank
Hirsch envisions an "invention bank," where new ideas would be stored in computers and spewed out on demand to all who need new products to manufacture or new ways to solve old problems.

To be most useful, the right idea has to reach the right man at the right time.

This leads Hirsch to predict the evolution of a brand new industry, which he calls "knowledge transformation." New research is vital, he says, but it is perhaps equally important for industry to make full use of ic systems for spacecraft is expected to double or triple the life of commercial sets, tapes and batteries.

New food preserving techniques have come from research in how to store food for astronauts for months and even years without refrigeration. The key to this is complete sterilization, destruction of decay-producing bacteria without damage to the nutrient material.

New Customer
Microminiaturization of electronic circuits — reducing wires and tubes to mere specks imbedded in layers of plastic — has revolutionized many branches of medicine. Already developed: wireless monitoring of heart patients around the clock, developed from special sensors which relay the heart beat and other body functions of distant astronauts.

Lists of new discoveries are virtually endless.

That's why economists and sociologists are thinking of computers and whole new industries to enlarge man's ability to utilize discoveries.

Hirsch says the notion that the transfer process would be simple, natural and automatic is "naïve and rapidly being replaced by more realistic thinking."

Time Circuits
Spurring the change is concern about the economic impact of cutbacks in defense contracts, which already have caused mass layoffs in several areas.

When the space agency's $20-billion moon budget is spent, many aerospace firms may have to turn to another customer: the American consumer.

Cutbacks after World War II caught most of them unprepared and they learned a hard lesson: diversification.

The energy and money now being spent to find new uses for technical advances indicates industry does not plan to be surprised again.

Firemen Fight Fire Aboard a Fireboat

Three fire trucks and another fire boat rushed Friday night to put out a fire aboard the fireboat Deluge. A half hour later, firemen reported the blaze confined to the engine room and under control.

Appleton Girl Flying High In New Career as Stewardess

BY SENA GRAY

Post-Crescent Staff Writer

In that flash of silver winging its way across the horizon, a trim, young stewardess reigns. While she 'has charge', she is the airline company's public relations official, hostess, baby-sitter, first aid expert, waitress and tour guide. Almost every young girl dreams of the glamour of such a job. But once the job becomes reality, the so-called glamour just doesn't exist, says Miss Mary Hauert, 213 S. Walden Ave., a member of the latest group of stewardesses to join the corps at North Central Airlines. "I knew a girl who did this type of work and realized it wouldn't be a glamorous job. It's a job, like anything else, but I really enjoy it," Mary comments.

Change of Scene

The trim brunette says she wanted to be with people, do a variety of things and get away from a typical office job. So she took to the air. A graduate of Xavier High School in 1962, Miss Hauert worked as a clerk-typist at Fox River Paper Co. for two years. This gave her the necessary two years of business experience to meet the airline's qualification. A girl must be 20 years old to apply for a job as stewardess and have two years of college, nurses' training or business experience. The company also points out that the girl must have poise, tact, good grooming and the desire to work with people.

"You must be between 5'1" and 5'8" tall, too," the stewardess notes. The girls' weights must not exceed a certain measure which is determined by their height. "We are weighed periodically," Mary notes, "and every so often someone is put on a diet."

Fashionably Dressed The airline makes sure its representatives in the air are well dressed. Miss Hauert describes their summer suits and hats—Beige worn with a white blouse and brown and white spectator pumps. Their winter gear is composed of a brown suit, egg shell blouse and brown leather pumps.

Mary says she enjoys the opportunity for travel her job offers her. In her short two months on the job, she has toured historical spots in northern Michigan, shopped in South Dakota and had dinner in Omaha, Neb. She feels the future holds even more exciting places and things to do.

"We also get sizable discounts when we travel on other airlines," Miss Hauert says. "Any girl wishing to be a stewardess should like to deal with people. Even in the terminal people will stop and ask me for the correct ticket booth or the flight to take. So a stewardess is a representative of the company even when she's not working."

After an interested girl's application for a job is approved she is interviewed at the main office. A general knowledge test is given and her height and weight recorded. A complete physical examination is also given. "A stewardess is not allowed to wear glasses, so I wear contact lenses," Mary notes.

In Mary's opinion, airline hostess schools are often a waste of time and money. Each airline trains or re-trains all stewardesses. "If I were to work for another airline, I would be retrained by that company," Mary explains. "And the only place that can assure one of a job is the company, not a school."

At North Central Airlines there is not a definite age requirement for retiring as there is at many other companies. Miss Hauert notes that not many stewardesses stay beyond their 35th birthday though.

"The life of a stewardess is truly exciting and challenging for one who loves travel and people," Mary smiles with the satisfaction of one having found the work she loves.

Sealed Storage Best For Wedding Gown

BY JUDITH STELLWAGEN

County Home Economics Agent

Have you ever purchased a product and been surprised at what was inside when you opened it? Just recently a woman wanted to know where she could have some sirup tested. Those who sold it to her claimed it was pure maple sirup. It was a good buy — but Miss Stellwagen just one taste and she realized she had been taken. Events such as this are not new.

Deceiving the consumer began centuries ago. History tells us in 1202 people were adding ground beans and peas to bread in England. When our country was young food adulteration practices were alarming. Josephine Hemphill has written about these in her book "Fruitcake and Arsenic". We now have laws to protect us. Our protection agency, the Food and Drug administration, governs these laws.

Label States Contents One of the most important rules the FDA governs is the labeling act. Yet seldom do people take time to study labels. They tell us much about what's inside a package. If you saw two labels one which read "Tuna and noodles" and another reading "noodles and tuna" which would you buy? According to the law, the ingredients should be listed in order of their predominance in the food. Buying noodles and tuna would undoubtedly be disappointing.

It shouldn't be necessary to bring a flash light and magnifying glass on shopping excursions as everything should be plainly and truthfully labeled.

Labels Must Tell Truth Fortunately we don't have to watch the spelling on the labels as the law states it must be correct. For example: Cotton seed oil may not wear a label "OLIV" to trick consumers into believing they are getting olive oil.

Imitations must be prominent-

UCT Auxiliary Plans Salad Bar Luncheon

The Auxiliary of the United Commercial Travelers will sponsor a salad bar luncheon and card party at the Masonic Temple Oct. 8. The luncheon, featuring a variety of salads, home made rolls and cookies, will be served from 11:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. Cards will be played in the afternoon.

Mrs. Oscar Dorn is chairman of the luncheon. Co-chairman is Mrs. Wilbur Brost and ticket chairman, Mrs. Dale Brost. Mrs. Paul Stiebs is senior counselor of the group.

Serving on the committee for the affair are Mrs. Lawrence Ostertag, Mrs. Harold Podzillini, Mrs. Royal Gooding, Mrs. Luther Clausen, Mrs. John Scherer, Mrs. John Van Groll, Mrs. Clarence Boyle, Mrs. James Hauert, Mrs. James Kranszuch, Mrs. Herbert Kesler, Mrs. John Lorenz, Mrs. Roland Schulz, Mrs. Karen Richmond and Mrs. Roy Stroessenreuther.

Fur Lined Coats Fur-trimmed coats and suits are a major fashion influence that gain distinction through new semi-fitted shaping and the use of long-haired furs introduced as linings.

Fur trims on coats have not been as important in years as they are for this Fall. Not only for dress-up wear, fur-trimmed styles appear for all occasions, furred street dresses and furred raincoats, to name two.

Town, Gown Club Tells Programs

Mrs. Donald Herring will serve as president of the Town and Gown Club for the 1964-65 season. Assisting her will be Mrs. Andrew Berry, vice president, and Mrs. Howard Gardner, secretary-treasurer.

The program committee is composed of Mrs. William Borsum, chairman, assisted by Mrs. Dexter Wolfe and Mrs. Marshall Hubert. Serving as reserve reviewers are Mrs. David Gallagher, Mrs. Thomas Wenzlau, Mrs. Edwin Olson and Mrs. Carl Wilke.

Mrs. Chris Larsen, 1031 E. Pershing St., will entertain the group at a luncheon Sept. 23. Co-hostesses will be Mrs. Elbert Norton, Mrs. Gardner and Mrs. Bruce Cronmiller. Mrs. David Mayer will give a resume of Christopher Marlow's life and work in observance of his 400th anniversary.

Pebble Patterns for Pretty Mosaic Panels

BY REBA & BONNIE CHURCH-HILL

Agreed! A rolling stone gathers no moss, but artistically placed ones do snowball into interesting designs. The added texture and dimension of such "pebble patterns" are so colorful and eye-appealing as a painted canvas.

The results are particularly effective as mosaic panels, which these examples, presented by art director-designer Frank Asbury illustrate. The purity of line and color coordination of the stone scenes are noteworthy.

Actually, much of the work in creating such panels occurs long before a drop of adhesive or a handful of pebbles are used. Researching and perfecting patterns that coordinate and complement each other is a skill in itself.

Sketch Design
Once an appropriate design is selected, the scene is sketched on paper, then transferred to wood. First, the central figure is completed, afterwards the background. The latter is frequently covered with light colored pebbles to assure striking contrast to the dominant theme. The wood is glue-coated, then stones are sprinkled into position. Sometimes the rocks are placed flat, othertimes strategically tilted. Often as many as 20 different hues and types are used to gain the desired effect.

Although both natural and colored rock is utilized, the original dull finish is left intact, for this subtle softness blends with most decors — whether displayed as a single picture or as a correlated series.

When the panel is completed, it is ready for framing. In this instance, a rich walnut border was the choice, since it offered the proper balance between the dramatic contrast of the figure and the background.

Dramatic Accessories
Still other accessories, following the textured route, are ceramic pieces, whose shiny, ink-colored glaze is accented with a pebbly "topping." Such decorative furnishings, which range from ashtrays to decanters to vases, invite "touch-me" inspection and "show-me" exhibition.

A Figure Begins to take shape when colorful pebbles are sprinkled into glued areas that have been outlined on a wooden panel. The result is a very attractive mosaic panel.

Family Lives a Twin Existence

found it all worked into a routine, somehow.

During her last pregnancy, Mrs. Mongin said she again suspected twins, and told the doctor so. This time, she says, her whole attitude had changed. She looked forward to two babies, as if this were the accepted and usual way to increase one's family. When Ralph and George were born July 1, there were only tears of joy. The babies weighed eight pounds and seven ounces, seven ounces, respectively.

All the sets of twins have weighed between 15 and 16 pounds, Mother Mongin says, and have been off to a good start right away.

The couple manages its family with ease and quiet nerves. Mr. Mongin says he always wanted a family, but admits that when they came two at a time, it grows pretty fast. He works shifts at the Kimberly Mill of Kimberly-Clark Corp. Both he and his wife feel that his being home during the day-time is a big lift in caring for the children.

"He never comes home and asks me what I did all day,"

Virginia says with a wry smile. "He knows what I've done. He understands the problems."

Mrs. Mongin says she doesn't expect her husband to do the housework, but he does help a great deal with the children. He's as proficient as she at cuddling a crying child or applying clean diapers. There's always someone ready to crawl on a lap, and a lap, as any twin knows, was made for sharing.

Sharing is a way of life in the Mongin home. There's little use of the word 'mine,' as clothing is passed from one child to another, coloring books are everyone's to use, and toys take their turns from hand to hand.

Each Gets Attention
Mrs. Mongin says she does stress that each child has things that are his alone. She doesn't feel that any one should have to give up his individuality because he's part of a group. The couple tries to give each one separate attention each day. All get special loving at bedtime, when prayers are heard and each child receives a treat. There used to be a single bedtime for all the Mongin youngsters.

Now they are tucked away individually or in twos. It works out better both for the parents and the children.

Bath time is also special for the Mongin children. Then their parents take time to play and make them laugh.

During the last two weeks Clara and Laura have taken an interest in housekeeping. Doing dishes is a new and thrilling endeavor for them. They also help keep the living room straightened. Laura says that when she grows up she wants to be a mother. Clara, she says in a positive tone, will be a teacher, because "she told me".

Full Time Job
Keeping seven youngsters organized and happy is a full time occupation. The family has diaper service for the twins, but even so Virginia is washing diapers every day. It's as much a part of the routine as getting up in the morning. Most of the early hours of the day are taken up with dressing and bathing and breakfast.

The Mongins try to have a night out together once a month or so. But they agree that they are past the time when they need to go out to have a good time. They didn't marry young and their family is what they enjoy. They are content to stay home and take care of it.

'Wonderful Friends'
The couple feels it could not have made the bad times without the help of their neighbors. After Ralph and George were born, Mrs. Mongin had to go back to bed for a week at home. Two neighbors took the twins and kept them for three weeks until she was back on her feet. Others come in and pick up the ironing or bring in a casserole or a cake.

Mrs. Mongin admits that there are times she feels tied down and tired. But then she looks at her children, and though she says she may be prejudiced, she believes they're so beautiful and so nice that she feels God has been very good to them.

As their children grow up, there'll be some difficulties, the couple is sure. The children may not be able to have everything they want. But they will have all the love and time and care their parents can give them.

They'll have the things that really matter.

Mr. and Mrs. Ambrose Mongin manage to give each of their children the individual attention they need. And none is ever at a loss for playmates. The family's home has a big yard and an old cook house that serves as a perfect play spot for the children. Above, watching Ralph get his breakfast, are Eddie, Laura and Clara. At left, Dad gives the boys a little early instruction to the masculine art of repair. Watching as he works are Peter, Martin and Eddie. (Post-Crescent Photos)

Auxiliary Readies Thrift Sale Items

Autumn is here. Closets have been cleaned of clothing that no longer is of use; cupboards have been straightened and scrubbed, and seldom used dishes discarded and with new furnishings delivered and in their proper places, the old are seeking new homes.

Members of the Appleton Memorial Hospital Auxiliary have garnered together all the rummage items they and their friends can no longer use for their annual Thrift Sale, scheduled Wednesday and Thursday at KP Hall. The hours are from 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. both days.

Mrs. Henry Jahnke and Mrs. Fred Wichman are chairmen of the sale, which will include clothing, household items and furniture. Members who wish to contribute items to the sale may contact Miss Ruth Dawes, pick-up chairman, if unable to deliver the items to the hall Monday or Tuesday.

Scouts Plan 'Thank You' to Community

Fifth Avenue's Still Rates 'First'

Applauding a model at a fashion show of children's fall clothes, above, are Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Goodman of Bergdorf Goodman, northernmost of the big specialty shops which give New York's Fifth Avenue its fashion prestige. Seven stories above Fifth Avenue, right, seamstresses work in Bergdorf Goodman's custom department for well-heeled women. Clothes are fitted on dress forms made to individual customers' measurements. BY JEANE SPRAIN WILSON
NEW YORK (AP) — A barrel-chested fellow in a polo shirt idly examines a suit once worn by John Barrymore and now drooping mournfully from its hanger in a Lexington Avenue gentlemen's resale shop.

In a dark, dank shop along Second Avenue a well-dressed couple hopefully pick through a juxtaposition of attic refuse in search of an antique find disguised by a century of crime and abuse.

In a refined atmosphere of Renaissance paintings, Oriental tapestries and highly polished showcases a bow-tied auctioneer encourages bids on a magnificent silver tea set.

On the Lower East Side a men's store still strides briskly alongside a half-annoyed, half-amused passerby imploring him to pause just a minute. And a few doors down plump women in cotton housedresses churn up a streetside bin of pink rayon underwear.

Buying-Selling Town
All of New York is an ardent buying and a persuasive selling town.

And its most celebrated shopping street is Fifth Avenue.

Ironically, this sumptuous symbol of American surfeit sprang from a paupers' burying grounds. The site of the Arch of Washington Square at its south end was swampland bought in 1797 for the victims of a yellow fever epidemic.

Mink, otter and muskrat haunted the tangled wilderness that stretched northward 150 years ago. Today the wide street, visited by crowned heads and presidents, grows tonier by the block until its shopping area ends abruptly at the Plaza Hotel at 59th Street.

Avenue of Chic
The Fifth Avenue Association — the group of Fifth Avenue retailers — doggedly police each other to preserve the street's reputation as the avenue of chic.

Fifth Avenue always has had a special fascination for women. Mary Todd Lincoln made regular pilgrimages to Arnold Constables for gowns to be worn at the White House. Hardly a president's wife since has not spent money at Tiffany's. Bergdorf Goodman's Saks Fifth Avenue, or one of the posh beauty salons where a single day of treatments can cost $150. And more theatrical celebrities populate the opulent street than Hollywood and Vine.

The theatrical crowd, as well as the international set and Old Guard society, clamor to buy tickets for shows on the St. Regis Hotel roof featuring fashions from De Pinna's, B. Altman's and Lord and Taylor's. Or they visit Sophie, wife of Adam Gimbel, owner of Saks, to write out checks for more than $1,000 for the gowns she creates for them.

A salesman at Tiffany's reaches for the famous 128.51 carat Tiffany Diamond, said to be the world's largest canary-colored diamond and valued at $1 million. The mounting adds another $12,000. Tiffany has become a synonym for luxury on Fifth Avenue in New York. Here one can also purchase an $8 pen and other items under $25.

The famed Easter Parade be-jeweled Constable was selling real estate as a holiday trek to the little lace for $1,000 a yard, parasols for $500, and camel's hair shawls for $1,500. Imported handmade stockings with insets of real lace cost $500 a pair at Peck & Peck in the early 1900s.

Sportswear Too
Later on in fashion history Peck & Peck became ladies' sportswear specialists after a woman customer insisted upon purchasing a man's cashmere sweater for her own use. Saks introduced wedgie shoes, and ballyhooped slacks for women.

Many of the smart uptown stores, such as Bergdorf Goodman's, began at the south end of the street in their brownstone

Meeting Notes

The Green Bay Diocesan Council of Catholic Nurses will convene at 8 p.m. Oct. 8 at the New London Community Hospital for a business session. Nurses from Antigo, Manitowoc, New London, Green Bay and Fox Cities area have been invited to attend.

Projects for the coming year will be discussed at the EMBA Auxiliary meeting at 7:30 p.m. Thursday at the Wisconsin Michigan Power Co. club rooms.

Lyle Leatherman is instructor and caller for a beginning square dance class sponsored by the Romeos and Calicos Square Dance Club. The class will be held at 7 p.m. Sunday at the VFW Hall, 501 N. Richmond St.

STEPHENSVILLE—Mrs. Erwin Widdin, route 2, Black Creek, will entertain the Order of Martha Mission Society, Thursday evening.

GREENVILLE—Paul Porter will serve as installing officer for the South Greenville Grange Friday evening when new officers accept their duties for the year.

HORTONVILLE — The Homemakers Homemakers Club will meet at 8 p.m. Monday at the home of Mrs. Leonard Timm. Mrs. Lyle Wickman will present the program and a report on the fall council meeting will be given. The committee is composed of Mrs. Edwin Lueck, Mrs. Hattie Ebben and Mrs. Francis Jamison.

homes, then shifted northward with prosperity. Before forming a partnership with Herman Bergdorf, Edwin Goodman, a tailor, sold "the modern woman of the new century" a choice of two tailored suits at $50.

Today, seven stories up in this elegant retail establishment, women still bend over sewing machines to custom-make garments which will bear fantastic price tags.

Probably the most independent of the swank shops is Tiffany's, creator of famous crystal-ware and owner of the world's largest — 128.51 carats — canary-colored diamond.

Here you can buy a token for under $25, or a $600-gold vermeil sunflower pod which, as Walter Hoving, board chairman, says, "was designed by the Lord himself." Or by ascending a private elevator to small white cells on the second floor, you may have Jean Schlumberger design a necklace of exquisite gems.

All in all, they add up to an image of a Fifth Avenue that grows more lustrous with each year.

The Women of All Saints Church worked through the summer to complete arrangements for their 16th lecture series, scheduled to begin Oct. 1 at the Parish Center. Addressing envelopes to those who have attended the series in the past are Mrs. James

Episcopal Women Tell Dates, Speakers for Lecture Series

For the 16th year the Women of All Saints Episcopal Church will present their fall lecture series. Speakers from Lawrence University and the Institute of Paper Chemistry will give the programs, scheduled to begin at 9:30 a.m. on six successive Thursday mornings, beginning Oct. 1.

All Saints Parish Center will be the setting for the programs. The first and last of the series will precede informal coffee hours. To accommodate the mothers of preschool children, a free sifter service will provide care and entertainment for the youngsters during the lectures.

The first speaker will be James W. Ming, professor of Music at Lawrence University, whose topic will be "The World of Igor Stravinsky." "Paper or Fish" is the Oct. 8 subject chosen by Willis M. Van Horn, senior research associate at the Institute of Paper Chemistry.

Speakers Noted
Kenneth R. W. Sager, associate professor of Education at Lawrence will speak on "Education with Imagination" at the Oct. 15 program. "Ethics of Human Rights" will be discussed by Carl P. Wellman, associate professor of philosophy at Lawrence, Oct. 22. Miss Anne P. Jones, professor of French at Lawrence will discuss "How France Sees Herself" Oct. 29. The final meeting will feature William M. Schutte, professor of English at Lawrence, speaking on "King Lear: The Measure of Man".

As in their previous lecture series, this year's speakers are outstanding in their respective fields. Mr. Ming earned his B.A. and M.A. degrees from Eastman School of Music. Since coming to Lawrence in 1944 he has done graduate study in composition at the National University of Mexico and at the American School of Fine Arts at Fontainebleau and in Paris. He has taught summer sessions at Montana State University, the University of Idaho and Washington State University. He was invited to Cornell University as a visiting professor in 1955-56. His compositions have been played in France and the United States.

Heads Department
Mr. Van Horn earned his B. A. degrees at Milton College and his Ph.D. at the University of Wisconsin. He joined the Institute staff in 1942 and is senior research associate and chairman of the Biology Department.

Miss Jones, Bergstrom Professor of French at Lawrence received degrees from the University of Illinois and has done further graduate work at Columbia University, the Sorbonne and the University of Munich. She studied French literature in Paris on a Ford Foundation grant in 1953-54 and has spent several summers in Paris doing research and study. She is co-author of a book of French readings for classroom use and has written a textbook anthology of the fiction and non-fiction of Andre Malraux. Miss Jones is chairman of the Freshman Studies program at Lawrence.

Studied in England
Mr. Wellman received his Ph. D. from Harvard University and has studied at Cambridge University in England as a Sheldon Traveling Fellow. He was a teaching fellow at Harvard before coming to Lawrence in 1953. His book, "The Language of Ethics" was published by the Harvard University Press. He has also contributed to philosophical journals.

Mr. Sager came to Lawrence in 1963 from Appleton High School where he taught social science and was department chairman. A Lawrence graduate, he received his M. A. from the University of Wisconsin. He has done further study at Harvard University and has edited state social science publications and a history of Outagamie County. He is a member of the Wolf River Historical Editorial Board. Mr. Sager serves as a member of the Appleton Board of Education and director of choral music at Zion Lutheran Church.

Before coming to Lawrence

the lectures may obtain tickets for all or single lectures from the All Saints Church office or Belling Pharmacy.

Members of the lecture series committee are Mrs. T. A. Howells, Mrs. William Llewellyn, Mrs. Chandler Rowe, Mrs. James Cowan, Mrs. J. M. Stringham, Mrs. H. F. Hackworthy, Mrs. Talbot Peterson, Mrs. Donald Purdy, Mrs. Lois Meade, Mrs. Bruce Purdy, Mrs. Averill Wiley, Mrs. Eugene Pierce and Mrs. Kenneth Ligare.

Doting Children Envelop Grandma in Sunday Ritual

BY ANN LANDERS

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Our daughter and our daughter-in-law are the most wonderful girls in the world. We love them. We know they love us because they make the weekly pilgrimage — with their families — every Sunday for dinner.

We have not been in their homes for months. Why should they invite us? They are here every week.

Sunday is the only day dad doesn't have to go to work. It would be heaven if we could take a nap after church, have a sandwich by ourselves and just loaf. But we can't. The ritual has been established and everyone comes here for Sunday dinner.

I wonder how many married children realize what this means in terms of work. If they must see their parents every seven days why don't they come during the week and let us close the cafe on Sunday?

Please print my letter, Ann. It could be the salvation of thousands of gnarled hands and tired feet. — The Old Grey Mare Ain't What She Used to Be

Dear Mare: Here's your letter. It doesn't help I suggest The Old Grey Mare simply announce that she is shucking the harness on Sunday! Then do it!

DEAR ANN LANDERS: What's with this kissing routine? Two years ago I moved to Los Angeles from New England and I've never seen so much kissing in all my life.

I was reared in a family where a kiss meant something. We loved one another but we didn't slobber. Am I mistaken or is Los Angeles the kissingest city in the world? I have visited Detroit, Chicago, Cleveland and Miami, but nowhere have seen so much kissing as in Los Angeles. Yes or no? — Don't Kiss Me Kate

Dear Kate: According to a recent issue of the New Yorker magazine Los Angeles is not the kissingest city. It's New York.

The article pointed out that in New York men kiss women, women kiss men, women kiss women — nearly everybody kisses nearly everybody else — in the doors of restaurants, in subway stations, in taxis, whenever a parting or a greeting can be staged. "This is not true of Boston or Philadelphia," the writer said.

And I think the New York writer couldn't be right.

DEAR ANN: I am in trouble because I tried to help a friend. This is what happened: I applied for and succeeded in getting a job I wanted badly. The personnel director asked if I knew of a person who might qualify for another job with the same company — one which required totally different skills. I recommended my friend, Mrs. Z.

Unfortunately Mrs. Z did not get the job. She now insists the job I have is the one I encouraged her to apply for. I offered to have the personnel director write a letter explaining the facts, but she says it would not change her thinking. Her mind is made up.

She has told everyone I am a liar and a double-dealer. I would do anything to square matters. What do you advise? — Dismayed Down Easter

Dear Down East: Well, you could kill yourself, but I don't think it would help.

Why waste time and energy on an individual whose "mind is made up"? Your former friend probably needs someone to be mad at this month and you're elected.

Parents are people — they can be right and they can be wrong. To help understand their viewpoint and to promote harmony at home, write for Ann Landers' booklet, "How to Live With Your Parents," enclosing with your request 20 cents in coin and a long, self-addressed stamped envelope.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope. (Copyright 1964)

Meeting Notes

KAUKAUNA — Speakers at the Tuesday evening meeting of St. Mary Christian Mothers Altar Society will be William Rogers, assemblyman, and Lawrence Beck, candidate of the assembly post. The group will meet after Perpetual Help devotions. Miss Celi Hoolihan is program chairman. Mrs. Alfred Schmidt will give a sick call demonstration. Mrs. George Greenwood has charge of refreshments.

Fidelity Chapter 94 Order of the Eastern Star will meet at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday at the Masonic Temple. The refreshment committee is composed of Mrs. Gordon Schulze and Mrs. Alex Pierre. The Grand Chapter session will meet in the Milwaukee Auditorium Sept. 29 through Oct. 1. Delegates are Mrs. Harry Filz, worthy matron, Mrs. Schulze, worthy patron, and Mrs. Florian Heinrich, associate matron.

Bergstrom Exhibit Reveals Greatness Of Pablo Picasso

Spanish Master Makes Few Lines Speak Volumes at Graphics Show

NEENAH — The current exhibit at the John Nelson Bergstrom Art Center provides a close-up view of some of the reasons why Pablo Picasso is considered one of the greatest artists of our time.

The exhibit is a collection of graphics (etchings, dry-point, gravure and black and white and color lithographs) by the great Spanish master and the drawings are relatively new, most from the 1950s and many done during the last four years. Gallery goers will be able to view the masterworks through Oct. 11, and in the light of the reputation of the artist and the prices placed on many of the works by de Cinq Gallery of Philadelphia from whom the exhibit has been borrowed, it is quite likely that a good many of the graphics will remain in the Fox Cities. The crass consideration of pricing seems to follow the dictum that, despite the excellence of the work, its value depends on the artist's autograph.

Hallmark

Whether signed or not, the work of Picasso is easily recognized. His intrinsic hallmark is the efficiency of his line. A half dozen slashes by Picasso's dry point produces a portrait of Carmen with all of her rebellion shining forth. Spots of un-supported color fall into a whimsical and recognizable pattern.

What most artists would take a graphic print to say, the master says in a crisp sentence — and eloquently at that.

Rare Print

One rare print of the 1914-1915 period provides the rest of the show in perspective. It is a tiny, precise and detailed cubist fragmentation of "A Man with a Hat." The strip-to-the-essentials style of his more current works is a far cry from the analytical cubism in which he worked with Braque during the first two decades of the century.

Historically, Picasso came out of his experience with Braque with the drive to recapture the grandeur of the classics where the human figure reigned supreme — even if Picasso eased out of his cubism with certain distortions. After the so-called Classic period, Picasso took up his hand at Surrealism and continued these experiments in expression until 1936 when the Spanish Civil War broke out and moved Picasso into the biting satirical graphics of which one, "The Dreams and Lies of Franco," is included in the current exhibit.

During World War II, Picasso worked at his home near Cannes, France, in the expressionistic mood which developed his latter day trademark of the "two-faced" women.

New Turn

The Bergstrom show tends to lead one to believe that Picasso may be turning once more. The rare 1914-1915 print has little echo in the other graphics on display and there is as little of the surrealist or extreme expressionism past.

Although lacking in the details of the period, some of the drawings and colored lithographs tend to remind the viewer of Picasso's great Rose and Blue periods with all of the sensitivity prevalent during those periods. Certainly the show reveals a return to respect for the human form not seen in the World War experiments. In addition the subject matter of the circus and other carnivals echoes the concern he felt in the Rose period.

At 83, Picasso remains one of the art world's giants and a master whom younger artists can study with profit. In our loquacious age it is good to meet with terse eloquence.

"Faune et Chevre" is one of the gravure on linoleum by Pablo Picasso in the master's exhibit currently at the Bergstrom Art Center, Neenah.

Design, Efficiency and Whimsy mark the greatness of Picasso as the current Bergstrom show reveals a turning away from the "two-face expressionism of his recent past. This drypoint is called "Profile et Nude Figure" and was made in 1953.

Registration Scheduled For Neenah Dance Classes

NEENAH — Registration for baton twirling corps, the group dance lessons sponsored by the Neenah Park and Recreation Department will be taken from 10 to 11:30 a.m. and from 2:30 to 6:30 p.m., Wednesday, at the recreation building.

Instruction in tap, acrobatic and ballet dancing for children will start on Sept. 30 and be held each Wednesday through Jan. 14.

Mrs. Margaret Dorschner and her daughter, Miss Mary Dorschner, instructors, have fine backgrounds of training and accomplishment," says a spokesman. "The talent show award at the Fond du Lac County Fair has frequently gone to Mary-ettes" performed by Mrs. Dorschner and Mary's Mary-ette.

Since early childhood Mary studied dance with her mother and as an eighth grader began to assist her mother with instruction. She is well-versed in all of the dance disciplines and has concentrated a great deal of effort in baton work. Many County Fair has frequently gone to Mary-ettes" performed by Mrs. Dorschner and Mary's Mary-ette.

A Matter of Family Tradition

Mathematics Key to Art Works by Appleton Artist at Kolb Gallery

Mathematics, something of a family trait, is apparent in the works of Mrs. LeRoy Lebbin (Grace) Lebbin, 114 S. Durkee St., that are on display currently at the Kolb Galleries of E. Pacific Street.

Mrs. Lebbin's husband is a mathematics instructor at Lawrence University. Her sister holds a master's degree in mathematics from the University of Illinois where Mrs. Lebbin's brother-in-law is completing his doctorate in mathematics. Her brother is a junior majoring in mathematics at Hope College, Holland, Mich., and her younger sister is still in high school, presumably doing very well in mathematics.

The art of Euclid is most prominently visible in Mrs. Lebbin's strong designs and the serigraphs she has devised by directly through the strings. Because the strings retain different amounts of the paint at each swipe of the squeegee, each of her prints is unique.

Holland Native

In oils, Mrs. Lebbin works with the palette knife. When she is not wholly concerned with geometry, her works are strongly figurative. She uses color along with texture to give her works added meaning.

Her sculpture, of which there are three at the galleries, can be described as impressionistic with a strongly geometrical overtone. At the galleries are a plaster head and wooden and wire figures.

Although she has participated in shows in Holland, Mich., and other student shows, including last season's Lawrence student show, the solo exhibit at the Kolb Galleries is her first non-student show. The display will remain on view through Oct. 10.

A Mathematics Project during her high school days in Holland, Mich., has stayed with Mrs. LeRoy Lebbin and creating designs out of string has become a major part of her efforts as an artist.

Happy Figures

Howard's Work Scores Hit in Museum Show

OSHKOSH — If there needs to be any further proof — which seems unnecessary — that Betty Howard is one of the finest clay of her works at the Oshkosh Public Museum should provide a glimpse of her work today in the current exhibit in abundance.

Betty Howard Reshapes History

The mother of two who teaches first grade at Roosevelt School and Wednesday evening ceramic classes for adults at the museum also finds time to follow an energetic course in pursuit of the artistic muses — and with commendable success.

The current exhibit is a series of terra cotta figures, squat, humorous and roughly textured, that "Reshape History." The series stretches from two tomahawk carrying braves to a World War II Joe. It includes a duster wrapped couple apparently enjoying an early automobile and a flirtatious flapper among other representative figures from the American pageant.

Happy View

Personally, Mrs. Howard barely keeps her sparkling sense of humor and joie vivre in check and her sculpture reveals this happiness. The results demand a smile from the viewer, but the superb craftsmanship prevents her works from being dismissed lightly even though they lack monumental moment.

The major galleries at the museum have been turned over to a conglomerate exhibit of the work of Cathy Kluge, a Milwaukee free-lance artist whose parents are Mr. and Mrs. Adolph Kluge of Windermere Lane, Oshkosh.

John Kuony, museum director, observes, "Judging from the variety of the work shown, which includes the traditional trio of painting, prints and drawings and then ranges through a whole gamut of crafts, the artist has experimented with many different media and has achieved mastery of a number of them."

Craft Achievement

It appears that Miss Kluge's greatest "mastery" is in the crafts, especially weaving and the Southeast Asian art of batik. Her collages and many of her pen and ink drawings border on the precious and a muddy palette deadens the bold composition of her oils.

Her penchant for crude, flat primitiveness, however, is well employed in the waxed and dyed hangings and her color sense is best revealed in her woven hangings, the wool of which, it is said, she dyes herself.

New UW Center Art Director Brings European View to Job

William King Recently Returned After 8 Years in Germany, Italy

Two Lawrence Alumni in News Picture

Pianist Named Dean At Drake, Folksinger Hailed in Europe

Two alumni of the Lawrence Conservatory of Music have been in the news this summer — Paul Jackson, '49, was named dean of the college of fine arts at Drake University, while Dorothy Ruddy Millar, '45, has received extensive news mention for her folk singing throughout Europe.

Jackson has had wide experience as a professional accompanist, as a teacher and as assistant to the general manager of the famed Central City opera and drama festival in Colorado.

While at Lawrence, Jackson studied piano with James Ming. He holds the master's degree from the University of Michigan, studied at the Vienna Academy of Music, and is now a doctoral candidate in musicology at Stanford University, writing his dissertation on the operas of 18th century composer David Perez.

Piano Tours

The pianist has toured for several seasons throughout the United States as accompanist to such artists as Theodor Uppman, George London, Irene Dalis, Polina Stoska, Rosalind Davis, Lorenzo Alvary and David Lloyd. At Central City, singers are selected principally from the Metropolitan Opera Company and the New York Opera Company. While pursuing his graduate work, Jackson also has been assistant to the musical director of Stanford University's opera productions.

Jackson taught piano while a student at Lawrence, and has been on the faculty of William Woods College in Fulton, Mo.

Folk Singer

Dorothy Ruddy Millar, originally of Aurora, Ill., went to Vienna 10 years ago as a Fulbright student to the Academy of Music. Although she has been receiving training in opera, Mrs. Millar has toured widely as a folk singer of American songs through the auspices of the United States Information Service. She has done almost 200 concerts a year, from the Greek islands to the German heartland.

During the summer she appeared on Austrian television in Thornton Wilder's "Our Town" and took part in the Vienna English Theater production of the "Spoon River Anthology", a musical adaptation of Edgar Lee Masters' poetic pageantry. It ran this summer in the Archduke Karl Palace in the heart of Vienna.

Before making her home in Europe, Mrs. Millar studied at an opera workshop in St. Louis, and sang with the Oakland Light Opera and the Berkeley Opera in California. She was a pupil of the late Carl J. Waterman at Lawrence, and a member of Delta Gamma and Sigma Alpha Iota.

MENASHA — An artist, expatriated for the last eight years, heads the art department at the Fox Valley University of Wisconsin Center this year. He is William King, who has recently returned to the United States after spending eight years in Europe.

King called his European tour of duty as a civilian employee of the U.S. Army "a great adventure," but he decried the idea that Europeans can teach Americans how to live.

The center of art has been transferred from Paris to New York, he said, and the United States is now the leader of the art world.

Provincial

The reason for this observation, King pointed out, is the provincial character he found in European artists. He believes the Europeans know they are no longer doing the best work in the world and they are afraid to become involved in the happenings of the time. In America, he said, everyone feels he is involved in world events and that the awareness of these happenings show up in the freshness of our paintings and the excitement of our improvisations.

Art in America, King finds, is becoming much more figurative while Europe is still struggling with "old hat expressionism" and clinging to the passive action painting.

The realization of the switch in the art world capital, he said, also is luring Europe's finest talents to the United States.

However, King is grateful for his opportunity to work and live in Europe where, he said, he had a chance to become anonymous and find himself in art.

Great Masters

While the current European scene fails to measure up to present day art, King pointed out, it is the only place to view the truly great masters of the past. Because of the tight national attachment to the great masters, their works are considered national monuments and are jealously guarded by European governments. However, the late 19th century and turn of the century artists achieved greater circulation and most of the best Impressionists and the like can be found in the United States.

King's European stay developed out of his becoming a recreation specialist for the Army. From 1956 to 1959 he worked in the Giessen area of Germany. From 1959 to 1961 he was in Stuttgart, Germany, and his last assignment was in the military district of Livorno, Italy.

He was able to mount nine solo shows while in Europe and was well received by the critics.

Critical Acclaim

Of his show at the Free Academy at Amsterdam a critic said, "By a mastered composition and a minimum of manipulation King reaches an expression on a high level."

Of his Frankfurt, Germany, show a critic wrote, "Though he paints originally and freshly sometimes even coarsely — as it seems — without tradition or programs, it still is to be thought that the reason for this spontaneity is a theory about the congruity of psychic vibrations and formal composition that exceeds by far the formula of Corot of landscape being a carrier of mood or even that of the Klee-Cannon."

Some 75 oils and many drawings and woodcut prints produced in the last eight years are en route to Appleton, but Army red tape and Italian bureaucracy being as they are, King does not expect them to arrive in the near future which postpones the appearance of his chance for Fox Cities gallery goers to see his work.

Wide Variety

In his European assignment King had administrative supervision of facilities and staffs that assisted GIs in a wide range of arts and crafts which even included, at one time, automobile repair. Although, King said, no great flowering of talent emerged from these recreational facilities, his staff was made up by very competent artists and he singled out the ceramic sculptor William Schultz, now teaching in Montana, as a name to be watched.

Mr. and Mrs. King took three children with them to Europe and brought five back with them to their new home on N. Drew Street in Appleton. They have a daughter, 16, a son, 15, a son, 13, a daughter, 6, and a son, 5.

"When I realized that my daughter had spent half of her life out of the United States," King relates, "I decided it was time to come home."

He said the cultural atmosphere of Europe was slow in catching up to his children. Early trips to points of interest evoked the same kind of comic book reading response a similar trip in America does. However, before the Kings left Europe, their children began to take an active interest in their surroundings.

At the Fox Valley Center, King will teach two days a week and is planning an evening adult class. He also will have assignments at the Green Bay Center.

Opposing Politicos Give Views Before Same Farm Crowd

BY DON REEDER
BUFFALO, N.D. (AP) — Thousands stood in a chill rain Saturday to hear Sens. Barry Goldwater and Hubert H. Humphrey attack each other's farm program as "bureaucratic meddling" and "a death sentence to agriculture."

The Republican presidential candidate and the Democratic nominee for vice president spoke to crowds estimated at over 50,000 on the site of the National Plowing Contest in eastern North Dakota.

Goldwater, although his prepared remarks concentrated mainly on world affairs, pledged to the farmers: "I will stop this bureaucratic meddling in your private affairs."

Quoting Goldwater

Humphrey, responding to a chant of "We want Hubert," recited part of Goldwater's

farm voting record and drew his loudest ovation of a 30-minute talk by asking: "With a record like that, is Sen. Goldwater the man you want to trust with the destiny of American agriculture?"

A roar of "no" rose from many in the audience, comprised largely of North Dakotans whose state has not been carried by a Democratic presidential candidate since Franklin D. Roosevelt did it in 1936.

"The nation would be a lot better off if our interim president would quit trying to run your farms and instead clean out his own stables," declared Goldwater in a speech about two hours after Humphrey had left the ground.

The two candidates did not meet.

Seven Navies Are Taking Part in Convoing Test

WASHINGTON (AP) — The biggest NATO fleet maneuvers in four years will open off Europe on Monday, featuring the first extensive test of convoying merchant ships since World War II.

Vice Adm. Reynold D. Hogle, chief of staff of the Allied Command, Atlantic, said Sunday the exercises will involve about 125 ships, 170 planes and 30,000 officers and men. They will run from Sept. 21 to Oct. 2.

Navies taking part are the Belgian, Danish, French, Dutch, Norwegian, British and American.

"The facts are that the Atlantic is a very busy highway," Hogle said.

Train Loaded With Bombs Jumps Rails

CHILLICOTHE, Ohio (AP) — U.S. naval personnel observed railroad crews working to clear 24 derailed freight cars five miles west of here Saturday night. One of the cars contained 150 unfused 500-pound bombs, the Navy said.

The Baltimore & Ohio Railroad freight was on its way from Cincinnati for Earle, N.J., when the accident happened. No injuries were reported.

The naval personnel were from the Crane Navy Arsenal in Indiana. They said there was not much danger but that they were to stay at the scene until the train was ready to move on.

The cars, part of a 68-car freight, left the tracks shortly after dawn Saturday. A burned-out bearing was blamed for the derailment.

The accident occurred in an isolated area. The nearest house was approximately a half a mile away.

Traffic was detoured on a parallel track, a carrier spokesman said. He said the tracks probably would be cleared by 9 a.m. Sunday.

France Suffers Trade Deficit

PARIS (AP) — France suffered a deficit in trade and commercial operations for August for the third straight month, the Finance Ministry disclosed Saturday.

The deficit for August was about $78 million as compared with a deficit of about $58 million in July.

The seven Senate conferees voted 5-2 against the health amendment when it was adopted 49-44 in their branch. But they are understood to have given assurances they will stand behind the provision at least long enough to see if the House group will take it.

Fox Cities Only Have TV Outage

GREEN BAY — A massive power failure preceded by a spectacular fireworks display thrust the city and almost all of northeastern Wisconsin into darkness about 9:35 p.m. Saturday.

Early reports said a main transformer "blew out."

Shortly before the power went off, lights throughout the city dimmed.

In the northeast portion of the city, in the area of the paper mills, witnesses said there was a "tremendous flash, intensely bright," and splattered with oranges, reds and greens.

The flash appeared to be "high in the sky," and continued for a period of a few minutes. It extended to the east for a mile or a mile and one-half, appearing to follow a main power transmission line.

TV Screens Black

Every light within the city went out.

All three of the city's television stations went off the air, leaving TV screens black throughout northeastern Wisconsin.

One of the stations, WFRV, Channel 5, was able to come back on the air for brief periods through power generated on its own facilities.

By 10:30 p.m. some of the lights had come back on in the downtown area.

The Green Bay Press-Gazette was 90 minutes from press time for its Sunday edition when the failure occurred. Until power was restored, candles provided the only light in the city room.

Health Care Decision Is Expected This Week

WASHINGTON (AP) — The key decision this year on starting a health care program under Social Security is expected to be reached at a Senate-House conference Wednesday or Thursday.

Chances for adoption of the program appear slim. But some of its supporters among the 12 conferees have cautioned newsmen not to write it off completely.

President Johnson reportedly has been urging that some form of Social Security health provision be included in the final bill.

The key figure among the 12 on the bitterly controversial health care issue is Rep. Wilbur D. Mills, D-Ark., chairman of the conference and head of the five-member House group.

The four other House conferees are split evenly on the issue. If Mills, voted with the two other Democrats, the House conferees would agree to accept the Senate health care plan or some version of it.

However, the close-mouthed Mills has been against such a program tied to Social Security for years, and his opposition seems to have hardened recently.

The conferees held three sessions last week on the Social Security bill to which the health proposal was added as a Senate amendment.

Mills has steadfastly declined to make any announcements on the sessions.

However, it was learned that at the third meeting last Thursday afternoon there was a lengthy discussion of how the Senate plan would operate but some conferees said they could detect no hint of Mills' stand from his questions and comments.

The seven Senate conferees voted 5-2 against the health amendment when it was adopted 49-44 in their branch. But they are understood to have given assurances they will stand behind the provision at least long enough to see if the House group will take it.

Fifteen Men Rescued From Sunken Ship

Seamen Kept Alive Several Hours by Air Inside Hull

BRISBANE, Australia (AP) — Police and civilian skindivers, working 35 feet below the surface, cut through the bottom of the hull of a capsized dredger in Moreton Bay, Queensland, on Saturday and freed 15 men trapped inside.

The men had been kept alive for hours by air pockets inside the hull of the vessel after it overturned late Friday night and, after floating for some time, settled on the bay's sandy bottom.

Seven other members of the 24-member crew of the Danish-owned Kaptajn J. Neilsen were drowned. Two others are missing.

First news of the capsized vessel was brought by crewman Eric Paulsen, 25, who swam 2½ miles to Moreton Island. A rescue party from the island found two men clinging to the hull. Tapping on the hull revealed there were others inside and the work of cutting through to them began.

The rescued men, some injured or suffering from the effects of their ordeal, were taken to Brisbane Hospital.

Cyprus Arms Mission Meets With Khrushchev in Moscow

MOSCOW (AP) — The leader of a Greek Cypriot arms mission met with Soviet Premier Khrushchev on Saturday and said the Soviet leader agreed to send Cyprus military and other aid.

A Tass account of the meeting said only that Khrushchev agreed to consider the aid request "most attentively."

Andreas Araouzos, Cyprus' minister of trade and industry, told newsmen after the meeting that Khrushchev "expressed a willingness to accord assistance as requested by Cyprus."

Araouzos said he would continue talks with Soviet officials "to discuss the implementation of the assistance which is being offered in response to the Cyprus government request."

Asked then by a newsmen what kind of aid, Araouzos replied: "Military and general assistance."

Araouzos said his talk with Khrushchev was wholly satisfactory and details would be disclosed next week.

When Turkish planes attacked Greek Cypriots in early August, the government of President Makarios appealed for military help from the Russians. On Aug. 10, Khrushchev issued a vague offer to send aid but it never was made clear whether the offer was for military help.

The Tass account of the meeting said on this point: "Nikita Khrushchev declared that the requests and wishes expressed by the Cypriot side would be considered most attentively with a view to rendering the peoples of Cyprus disinterested assistance in the struggle for their freedom and independence."

Philip Is Greeted by Angry Mob

VALLETTA, Malta (AP) — An angry mob of Malta's labor party members stoned British cars and shouted "down with Britain" Saturday as Prince Philip, Queen Elizabeth's husband, arrived for independence ceremonies Sunday.

Philip's car was quickly rerouted when stones smashed into the official limousine heading from the airport to the island's capital of Valletta. No one was reported injured.

Unarmed Malta police tried to control the crowd of some 4,000 demonstrators as it spilled into the street outside labor party headquarters in suburban Marsa.

The upsurge of violence presaged more trouble as labor party leader Dom Mintoff, haranguing the crowd from a parked truck, urged members to show dissatisfaction at the official ceremonies.

The labor party claims the island's independence in close association with Britain constitutes a "sellout" and "British occupation."

Closest U. S. Ally

BY LEWIS GULICK
WASHINGTON (AP) — Tough Great Britain is America's closest ally around the world, its election campaign is drawing less than rapt attention from the U. S. public and officials.

Around the United States, the contest between the Conservatives and Laborites for British electoral approval Oct. 15 has produced few front-page headlines in the American press.

In Washington, authorities are keeping one eye on the British campaign. But they seem more absorbed in situations like South Viet Nam and Cyprus, not to mention the race between Democrat Lyndon B. Johnson and Republican Barry Goldwater to be decided at U. S. polls Nov. 3.

Some Britons have been known to grumble that the Americans are not paying as much notice to the British campaign as the British are to the American one.

State Department sources see this as no slap at Britain's importance as a prime foreign affairs partner of the United States from North Atlantic Treaty Organization to South Asia. They figure, rather, that the British campaigners are neither seeking much change in London's policy toward the United States nor focusing on issues likely to excite Americans.

According to an analysis here: —Both Prime Minister Sir Alec Douglas-Home's Conservatives and Harold Wilson's Labor party have shown in their electioneering that they intend to continue close and friendly working relationships with the United States.

—The Labor party has toned down its "socialism," once a lively topic among private enterprise-minded Americans, to a position which in practice it would not be too far from the Tories.

Nationalization of the steel industry, as proposed by Labor, would be of interest to Americans. But they recall Britain's steel has been nationalized and denationalized before. On other economic and social issues, both parties are promising improvements.

Labor's declared opposition to the U. S.-proposed Allied nuclear fleet and intent to renegotiate the 1962 Kennedy-Macmillan Nassau agreement for Polaris missiles to Britain runs against U. S. policy.

But here again U. S. sources believe that if Labor steps into government responsibilities after 13 years out of power, it will find that hard practicalities can force a toning down of pre-election plans.

Titles, Distinguished Service Accent Kolf's Lengthy Career

Bob Once Comprised School's Entire Athletic Department

BY DON CASTONIA
Post-Crescent Staff Writer

OSHKOSH — It was 45 years ago that a young man, just returned from naval service in World War I, entered what is now Wisconsin State University-Oshkosh as a freshman student. Except for four breaks, Robert Kolf has been a fixture at WSU-O since — first as an assistant coach, then as head coach and now as athletic director.

This unparalleled service in state college coaching circles was recognized Saturday with a day-long tribute from townspeople, fellow coaches, friends and former athletes who honored him in a "45 Years with Bob Kolf" program.

There was a time when the athletic department at the school consisted of Kolf and Kolf alone. He coached the football, basketball, track, tennis and golf teams and handled the intramural program. He also taught physical education. Needless to say, he was kept busy.

Today, Kolf heads an 8-man athletic department staff and has retained only the golf team as an active coaching duty and devotes the rest of his time to coordinating the multi-sport program as athletic director.

Win Their Share

Despite the handicap of handling all of the sports and working during the era of extreme de-emphasis under President Forest Polk, Kolf's teams won their share of conference championships, including three occasions of back-to-back basketball titles and eight consecutive tennis crowns.

He played on an undefeated football team at the then Oshkosh Normal School in 1920 and then coached the 1924-25 basketball team through an undefeated season. One of the highlights of his career, he admits, was winning three straight conference Southern division basketball titles in 1947-48-49. The first two of those years they swept the overall conference championship.

"Of course, you remember your championship teams the best," the veteran coach said. "But I think what stands out the most in my memory is the outstanding caliber of men who played under me and my association with Coach Howard Hancock and Dr. Burton Kargus."

Eau Claire Hands Titans 26-7 Defeat

Bluegolds Pull Away in Final Period of Conference Opener

OSHKOSH — Oshkosh State played defending conference champion Eau Claire to a stand-off for three quarters despite giving up two first period touchdowns, but then collapsed in the final period and fell to the Bluegolds, 26-7, here Saturday afternoon.

Mike Devine ran the opening kickoff of the game back 92 yards for a touchdown to give Eau Claire the lead before the crowd had settled in the seats but the Titans hung on until costly errors and a let-down gave Eau Claire the contest.

Coach Russ Young's team trailed only 13-7 going into the final period and had actually dominated the game against the Bluegolds, who are favored to win another State University Conference crown.

The play which probably decided the contest came early in the fourth quarter when Gregg Zastrow punted on third down from his own 31. The punt touched an Oshkosh player and was recovered by Eau Claire on the Titans' 1-yard line. Eau Claire quarterback Jim Van Gorden sneaked for the score to run the count to 19-7.

Four Interceptions

Oshkosh quarterback Jim Jaeger, one of the leading passers in the conference last season, was unable to find the range and completed only 3 of 20 passes and had 4 intercepted, one leading to Eau Claire's final touchdown.

After the opening shocker, the Titans came right back and marched 68 yards in 12 plays to tie the score with the big play being a 33-yard scoring pass to end Floyd Marks on a fourth down situation.

It took Eau Claire only four plays to get the lead back as Dennis Rivers ran the ensuing kick off back to the Oshkosh 49. On second down Devine took a 35-yard pass from Van Gorden to get position and Van Gorden scored from the one.

The Titans missed several scoring opportunities after this point while piling up yardage at midfield. Eau Claire stopped Oshkosh on the 5-yard line midway through the period and the interceptions killed two other drives.

Incomplete Passes
In the third period, a poor

to new men to devote more time to administration of the department. In 1937 Eric Kitzman became basketball coach and in 1963 Russ Young took over the football team.

In 1923 Kolf married his college sweetheart, Marie Finnegan, of Fond du Lac. They have two children, a daughter, Mrs. Betty Kranz, who lives in California, and a son, Robert Jr., a former athletic great, who now lives in Salt Lake City, Utah.

1,000 Pay Tribute to Kolf at Fete

Another 380 Attend Dinner Event at Oshkosh

OSHKOSH — An estimated 1,000 people crowded into Albee Hall Saturday afternoon to hear tribute paid to Robert Kolf, Wisconsin State University-Oshkosh athletic director, who has been associated with the school as a student and coach for 45 years with breaks for military service and work on advanced degrees.

Another 380 attended a dinner in his honor at Reeve Memorial Student Union — the capacity of the union during banquets and, until later, former teammates of his at Oshkosh Normal school and athletes who played under him gathered at the club for luncheon.

Among those present were Howard Hancock, who coached the Oshkosh Normal teams during Kolf's undergraduate days and later went on to coaching fame at Illinois State University.

Four Teammates

Four teammates of Kolf from 1919, his freshman year, also attended. They were Gerald "Dad" Braisher, Devere; Fred "Chick" Deviney, Columbus; Harold Barker, Weyauwega, and Clifford "Wop" Taylor, Racine.

About 150 former lettermen from the college attended the dinner with many others at the recognition program and team reunions.

Douglas Ritchie, who started at Oshkosh State from 1946 to 1950, and is now principal of Madison West High School, served as master of ceremonies.

Kolf was presented with a cash gift, an "O" club blanket and a bound sheaf of letters from former WSU-O lettermen. The presentation was made by Richard Schumacher, who also graduated in 1950 and is now a member of the university physical education department.

Tribute was paid to Kolf by Hancock, Braisher, Reuben Lautenschlager, Sheboygan, class of '37; Arnold Leaman, Brookfield, class of '46; Carl Smedberg, Fond du Lac, class of '50, and the Rev. Jerry Thompson, chaplain and former coach at Ripon College.

Flag Football

Leagues Start Play Monday

OSHKOSH — The Oshkosh Recreation Department seventh and eighth grade flag football leagues will get underway Monday afternoon.

Seven teams representing Campus, Lakeside, Sacred Heart, St. John, St. Joseph, St. Mary, St. Peter, St. Vincent and Trinity-Grace Lutheran schools are in the eighth grade league.

Games are played at 4:15 p.m. Monday through Friday at Mary Jewell and Menominee parks.

Harry Craft Fired As Colt Manager

Coach Luman Harris Elevated To Top Job by Paul Richards

HOUSTON (AP)—The Houston Colts fired Manager Harry Craft Saturday with only 13 games left to be played. Veteran third base coach Luman Harris was named to succeed him.

The announcement was made by General Manager Paul Richards at a news conference. He said Harris, who has been a coach with the club since its entry into the National League in 1962, signed a two-year contract, for the 1965 and 1966 seasons.

Harris began his new duties by directing the Colts Saturday night against the New York Mets.

Harris is believed to have received a contract calling for just under $30,000 a year. Craft's one-year contract was

Braves' Fan Checks Possible Shift Of Franchise to Atlanta Personally

BY TIGER BROOKS

Post-Crescent Staff Writer

As we've pointed out in this space before, Oshkosh is not without its ardent baseball fans and the interest seems to be getting higher as World Series time approaches. There is also more interest than usual due to the uncertainty surrounding the possible Braves' move to Atlanta.

An Oshkosh Braves' backer, Wilbur Mueller, went down to Milwaukee last week to see his favorites and decided to do some of his own inquiring on the possible move South. After quizzing reporters, parking attendants, concession operators, vendors and almost everyone else who would take time out, Mueller concluded that most of the fans are in real doubt about what will happen. He says the majority seems to have the feeling that the Braves will leave Milwaukee.

Right now Mueller is in the market for a ticket to at least one of the World Series games "in Philadelphia." He has none other than the Phillies' Jim Bunning working on it. It seems Mueller is a relative of Appleton Xavier Coach "Torchy" Clark who just happens to be Bunning's brother-in-law!

While we're on the subject, we can't overlook Sister Mary Cornelius out at Lourdes, who is a Chicago White Sox booster. We haven't been able to compare notes with Sister yet, but we assume she has her fingers crossed for the Sox in the AL race.

Observers are wondering if Green Bay East's morale will

Four Veterans Seek Berths At WSU-O

Cross Country Unit Opens at Stevens Point

OSHKOSH — Four lettermen plus last year's state high school cross-country champion will form the nucleus for the 1964 Wisconsin State University-Oshkosh cross country team which opens competition Sept. 26 at Stevens Point.

Jim Hammill, Neenah, who set a new state record last year, heads the list of prospects which includes lettermen Tim Duex, Oshkosh; Jeff Potter, Milwaukee; Charles Bradley, Winnebago; and Ward Weiss, Weyauwega. Weiss lettered in track last spring.

Eric Kitzman is handling the Harriers this fall in place of Tom Dezelsky who is on a year's leave of absence.

Other team prospects include Ken Newman, Phil Krejcarek, Joe Thresher, Jim Reed, Gary Bentilla and Dave Senger. Two other lettermen, Dean Moede and Dan Muinde, are in school and may still report.

Eight dual meets are scheduled in addition to the conference meet Oct. 31 at Platteville. Home cross-country meets are run at Menominee Park.

to have expired at the end of the current season.

Craft, 49, was Houston's last minor league manager as well as its first major league manager.

Houston finished eighth the first year, ninth last year and currently is ninth, 10 games ahead of the last-place Mets.

Richards said the change was being made at this time so Craft will have a chance to negotiate with other teams in the usual season-end baseball job shuffle.

He said he understood Craft was being considered for two other baseball jobs, adding that if Craft did not land a job he wanted he would be given an opportunity to remain in the Colt organization in some capacity.

Contradictory Rules Used to Make Emerich Ineligible at Oshkosh

Conference Votes 5-4 Not to Allow Athlete to Compete

BY DON CASTONIA

Post-Crescent Staff Writer

OSHKOSH — The case against Dave Emerich.

Emerich, as most East Central Wisconsin sports fans know, was an All-Mid-eastern Conference halfback at New London High School.

He later attended Wisconsin State University-Stevens Point where he played one season of football and then transferred to Wisconsin State University-Oshkosh at mid-year last year, where his brother, Dick, is an all-conference end.

A week ago the conference faculty representatives declared Dave Emerich ineligible for competition this semester because, in their opinion, he had not fulfilled the conference's one-semester residency transfer rule. The vote was 5-4.

Paid His Fees

Emerich had filled out a schedule and paid fees to attend Stevens Point the spring semester of 1964 but withdrew from school and transferred to Oshkosh within the permissible period and compiled a "B" average for his work last semester.

The five conference members who voted to declare Emerich ineligible (Stevens Point, Platteville, LaCrosse, Whitewater and River Falls) attempted to justify their ruling on the basis of section 3 (A) of the conference eligibility rules.

This section states, in part, "The completion of forms and/or the payment of fees shall constitute an enrollment; thereafter any student shall be considered as having been in attendance during that term or semester."

However, section 2 (A) of the eligibility rules states, in part, that "Enrollment shall mean the payment of fees, the filling out of a program, and regular attendance at classes."

It is obvious Emerich could not attend classes in two places last semester, and he did attend at Oshkosh.

One Semester

Another section of the eligibility rules, specifically referring to transfer students, reads, in part, no student shall be eligible "until he has been in attendance in the school to which he has transferred for at least one semester." Emerich successfully completed a full semester's work at Oshkosh before the present semester.

Thus, the conference is in the position of having rules which are completely contradictory.

A precedent considered a poor ruling at that time had been set two years ago with an identical case involving a player who transferred from Platteville to UWM. UWM used the player against Platteville in a basketball game and won. Platteville protested and UWM was forced to forfeit the contest.

There is still a possibility Emerich's case could be appealed to the council of Wisconsin State University Presidents.

WSU-O Intramural Football Starts Monday

OSHKOSH — Four 6-team leagues will start play Monday in the Wisconsin State University-Oshkosh intramural touch football program, Director Warren Goehrs said Friday.

Games will be played Monday through Thursday on three fields at Menominee Park with games at 3:45 p.m. and 4:45 p.m. A round-robin schedule will be played with playoffs at the end of the season. Letter-award jackets go to members of the winning team.

Science Council To Get Reports On Projects

Curriculum Program Scheduled at Oshkosh University

OSHKOSH — Reports on a number of science curriculum projects will highlight a meeting of the Fox Valley Curriculum Study Council science committee at 9:30 a.m. Tuesday at Reeve Memorial Union on the Wisconsin State University-Oshkosh campus.

Dr. Richard Netzel, chairman of the physics department, WSU-O, will report on progress made in implementing the American Association for the Advancement of Science Project, which recently announced that it had selected the Fox Valley Curriculum Study Council as a trial center for the new science curriculum it is developing. The science committee selected 17 elementary teachers to participate in Omro, Menasha and Oshkosh schools.

Other Reports
Other reports will include: Stanley J. Harman, Brussels, on information clearinghouse, science teaching center, University of Maryland.
Paul Ubbesen, Fond du Lac, elementary science study by Educational Services, Inc.
Clarence Wine, Winneconne, junior high science project by Princeton University.

School Project
Mrs. Marian Erickson, Omro, elementary school science project by the University of California.

Lyman Tanty, Oshkosh, elementary science project by the University of Illinois.
Bjorn Christianson, De Pere, Minne math science project by the University of Minnesota.
William Flynn, Kaukauna, on National Science Teachers Association project.

2 Fond du Lac Men's Estates Before Court

Charles D. Smith,
Contractor, Leaves
$92,234 in Trusts

FOND DU LAC—An estate totaling $92,234 was left by the late Charles D. Smith, Fond du Lac contractor, according to papers filed in the court of County Judge Jerold E. Murphy.
Smith, who died Feb. 22, left $5,200 in real estate, $71,570 in personal property and $15,463 in jointly-owned personal property.
His estate was divided into trusts for his widow, Pansy Smith, who now resides in Oshkosh. She is to dispose of one trust as she desires. The other trust, upon her death, is to go to two children, Olive McCoy, Neenah, and Donald H. Smith, Fond du Lac.

File For Probate
Filed last week with Judge Murphy was a petition for probate of the estate of the late Armand E. Bohn of Fond du Lac who died Sept. 9. His estate was estimated at $68,000 in personal property and $17,000 in real estate.
The petition names two sisters, a brother, four nieces, 21 friends, the Winnebago Lutheran Academy, St. Peter Evangelical Lutheran Church and Rienzi Cemetery Association, all of Fond du Lac, as receiving bequests from the estate.
Sum for the church will be $2,500. The school will receive $500 and the cemetery association $200.

Universalist Church Group Now Has Meeting Place

Oshkosh Society Meeting Second
Time in History at Old Structure

OSHKOSH — For the second time in its 65-year history the frame church structure at the triangular junction of Church and Union avenues, just east of W. Wisconsin Street, is serving as home for members of the Universalist Fellowship. Only now, these members are joined with the Unitarians in the Unitarian Universalist Fellowship which this month is beginning its second year of Sunday services.

Serving as chairman for the 1964-65 church year is Dr. David F. Conover of the biology faculty at Wisconsin State University-Oshkosh. He succeeds Richard N. Gregg.

Personal Religion
"Traditionally, Unitarians do not meet for regular worship services during the summer months," Dr. Conover said. "Our denomination emphasizes personal religious experiences through communion with nature as well as with fellow men."
The Oshkosh fellowship, which has doubled its membership during the last year, meets in the church built by members of its denomination in 1899. At one time that group, known as "St. John Universalist Society," numbered some 115 families. By 1921 these families had disbanded and the church was sold to the Seventh Day Adventist Society, which still owns the building and has its Sabbath services on Saturdays.
"There is no connection between our Fellowship and that earlier Universalist Society other than sentiment," Dr. Conover remarked. "We enjoy pointing out the address why chose for their building was 'Union at Church'."

Members of the early Universalist organization included Marshall Harris, who later willed to the city the land for the present Public Library; Edward S. Hinman, one time city comp-

$4.5 Billion Value Set on Land, Buildings in District

14-County Fond du Lac Region
Appraisal Includes Winnebago, Outagamie, Calumet Counties

BY ALLAN EKVALL
Post-Crescent Staff Writer

FOND DU LAC — Land and buildings in the 14-county area in east central Wisconsin are worth $4.5 billion. These counties parallel the Fox River and stretch along the Lake Michigan shoreline.

This amounts to 22 per cent of the entire property value of the State.

During the coming two weeks, these counties will be appraised of this equalized valuation and also of the property value ratio of each city village and town in a county to the county's property value total.

Ninety-two different uses are made of these equalized valuation figures, Donald J. Sherman, supervisor of assessments for the Fond du Lac district, which handles the work of the 14 counties, pointed out.

One use is to establish the bonding limit for any city, town, village or school district. Another establishes the percentage of state and county taxes each tax unit within a county is to pay. Determining the tax shares of each area in a joint school district is a third use.

$140 Million New

Sherman said new construction this year in the 14 counties comes close to $140 million which equals the combined total valuation of Waushara and Kewaunee counties.

In most of the counties, agricultural lands were given a higher valuation on the basis of sales recorded for farm land in those counties. These counties include Winnebago, Outagamie, Calumet and Fond du Lac.

In two counties—Green Lake and Sheboygan — land values were raised considerably as the result of a mass physical appraisal made this year in those two counties.

For example, Sherman mentioned, in Green Lake County, Lake shore lots were found to be selling for $200 a front foot for just the land. A lot with 60-foot frontage was selling for $12,000.

One of his staff members met Thursday with Green Lake County Board members and said the real estate value in that county this year increased 24.76 per cent to a total this year of $101.2 million. The land value increase was more than $20 million.

Only $1.5 million of that increase was because of new buildings erected during the last

Costs, Expenses Filed by GOP In Winnebago

OSHKOSH — Receipts totaling $5,293 and expenses of $1,345 were listed with the register of deeds office by the Winnebago County Republican Party Friday by Joyce Laedtke, party secretary.

The receipts include $4,471 from the State of Wisconsin Republican Party. The expense included county fair booth, postage, telephone expense and the annual corn roast held at Winneconne in August.

Expenses for the corn roast were listed as totaling $793 while donations and the sale of excess corn at the corn roast brought in $447.

Budgets Due By Sept. 30

Many Winnebago
Board Committee
Meetings Expected

OSHKOSH—Winnebago County Board committees will have numerous meetings to complete department budgets before the Sept. 30 deadline set by the finance committee for the receipt of all county budgets for 1965.

Meeting Monday will be the special building committee for the new Pleasant Acres home with the architect at 1:30 p.m. at the county hospital and the judiciary committee at 7 p.m. at the courthouse to work on the budget for the courts and county board.

The taxation committee will meet at 10 a.m. Tuesday and the judiciary committee will have a second meeting at 7 p.m. Tuesday. Taxation committee members will meet as the equalization committee at 2 p.m. Thursday to hear of the county's equalized valuation.

Aviation committee members will meet at 7 p.m. Thursday at the airport terminal for work on its budget. The county park and recreation committee has set an 8 a.m. meeting Saturday to prepare its budget.

Bridge Lesson Series Offered at Oshkosh

OSHKOSH — Registration for recreation department bridge lessons will start Monday at the Recreation Department office.

Military Bearing of Drum Corps Attributed to Marine Sergeant

OSHKOSH — One of the newer and upcoming drum and bugle corps in the area is the K-Y Warriors of Oshkosh who have won acclaim for their marching and maneuvers.

If they give a military appearance, it isn't accidental, for the man responsible for their maneuvers is Gunnery Sgt. Eugene Thorn, an 18-year veteran of the Marine Corps and a former Marine drill instructor.

Transferred

Sgt. Thorn, who has been on the inspector - instructor staff at the Oshkosh Marine Corps Reserve center for three years, is being transferred to Camp LeJeune, N. C. where he will join a force reconnaissance unit. He was honored at a dinner last week by the K-Y Warriors Parents Club for his work with the drum and bugle corps.

Included in the presentation was a proclamation signed by Common Council President John Fitzgerald citing Sgt. Thorn for his volunteer work.

Sgt. Thorn started working the K-Y Warriors about 15 months ago after a member of the Marine reserve unit, who had been helping out, asked if one of the regular Marine staff would be interested in helping the Warriors. Thorn volunteered and has since worked one - night a week drilling the youngsters. Before competition they work every night.

"It was quite an experience," Sgt. Thorn admitted. "It was quite different working with boys 10 to 14 years old than with 18-year-old Marine recruits." He said, but it is harder to impress upon the youngsters the importance of minor details.

Last fall they added a "rookie" corps to the K-Y Warriors with the better ones being added to the regular corps this spring. They also added a girls flag - bearer unit to the drum and bugle corps.

Among the honors Sgt. Thorn has received in cludes being named to former President Harry Truman's honor guard at Quantico, Va., in 1950. He also served in the Korean War.

Although Sgt. Thorn is leaving, the Warriors will not be left without a drill master. Gunnery Sgt. Charles Brookfield, who is replacing Sgt. Thorn at the Marine Reserve Center, also has agreed to take over Sgt. Thorn's work with the drum and bugle corps.

A native of Boston, Sgt. Brookfield also is an 18-year veteran with the Marines and comes to Oshkosh from Camp LeJeune. He is married and has three children and will make his home in Omro while assigned here.

The present Fellowship was started about five years ago by Dr. Morton Nachias and met for some time in the Eagles Aerie hall. It was formally recognized as a Fellowship by the American Unitarian Universalist Association in the spring of 1963.

"The main difference between a church and a fellowship," explained Dr. Conover, "is that the latter is lay-led. This puts a greater responsibility on the shoulders of each individual member, but there is much satisfaction to be gained from the very sense of participation."

Fellowship services are held at 10:45 a.m. Sundays, followed by Sunday school at 11:15 a.m. Mrs. Robert Forman is director of religious education, assisted by Mrs. M. E. Deaton.

Dr. Conover also is Fellowship chairman for the North Central Council of the denomination. Besides large churches in Milwaukee and Madison, the Council consists of representatives from nine other Wisconsin Fellowships and one at Hancock, Mich. Included is the Fox Valley Liberal Religious Fellowship of Neenah-Menasha and the Fond du Lac Fellowship.

Oshkosh High School Enrollment Up 117
OSHKOSH — Enrollment at Oshkosh High School is up 117 to a high of 2,273 this year, according to Homer Fratt, vice principal.

This includes 745 in the sophomore class, 780 in the junior class and 748 in the senior class. Previous enrollments were 2,156 last year, 1,943 in 1962 and 1,680 in 1961 when the new school opened.

102 Years Ago

In September, Fond du Lac Recalls Its 'Great Indian Scare' of 1862

BY MAY AUGUSTYN

FOND DU LAC — Just 102 years ago this month Fond du Lac had the scare of its young life.

One September morning the residents of the pioneer town awoke to find their business streets jammed with horsedrawn vehicles of every description, carrying frightened settlers from the eastern part of the county.

They all told the same harrowing tale. Hundreds of Indians were descending on the town with fire and murder as their chief objectives.

The settlers in the eastern section of the county, they said, had already been murdered and their homes burned. They further warned that Fond du Lac would be next.

Reassurance
Prominent citizens such as Edward Beeson, Edward Pier, Curt Lewis, Dave Curran and other residents familiar with Indians, assured the frightened people that the rumor was ridiculous, and told them to return to their homes. The settlers who had come would not listen and more families continued to pour into town. They all repeated the same blood-curdling stories.

By noon when no Indians had appeared a company of men rode out to the eastern part of the county to see what was really happening. They traveled east for 12 miles and found no sign of Indians.

Another party of men rode into Lake DeNeve, stopping at the Egbert Foster farm, two and one-half miles east of the present Eder Station. On the way the party had been informed that the family had been butchered and their crops and buildings burned, but they found the Foster home intact, surrounded by hysterical settlers who were certain they had seen their homes for the last time that morning.

The more the Fond du Lac group tried to assure the settlers there were no Indians in the vicinity the more hysterical they became.

Straight Account
Mrs. DeNeve later called the whole incident the most absurd thing she had ever heard of, and said it was entirely caused by rumor. Who lit the first spark of that rumor was never revealed.

Mrs. DeNeve said, "Just to show how people lose control of themselves, this is what happened. One day in the fall of 1862 my six children came running home from school scared nearly to death. They were so frightened they could hardly speak. They made known that a neighbor was coming to take us into town."

"The neighbor and his family soon arrived, but in his fright and haste, he loaded only some of my children into his wagon. The others went to town with another neighbor. My husband and another son had gone to town early that morning and were startled to see the children on Main street and to hear the terrible stories of bloodshed and fire."

Mrs. DeNeve did not believe the stories for she could think of no place from which so many Indians could come. So she refused to leave her home when a neighbor, Mr. Haight, came for her. The man was so terrified that he forced her into his wagon and clattered madly off to town. Before they had gone a mile Mrs. DeNeve refused to go farther so Mr. Haight was obliged to let her out of his wagon.

She found the family's clothes scattered all over the place when she reached home. The maid had been doing some laundry when the news of the Indians came. She threw the clothes in all directions and fled in terror with the other neighbors.

Mrs. DeNeve gathered up the clothes and kept a sharp lookout but saw no trace of Indians. Late in the afternoon groups of neighbors passed the DeNeve residence on the way home. They intimidated, in a shamefaced manner, that they had been shopping in town that day. No one cared to discuss the preposterous incident.

So fizzled the great Indian scare of 1862. But the great scare has become a part of Fond du Lac's past and is always recounted when historical groups get together in the month of September.

for other communication. Mabie, who is a radio technician, installed the boats communication system.

The 8,700 pound 30-foot craft constellation is powered by twin 185 horsepower motors and is capable of speeds up to 36 miles an hour. The fuel tank carries 100 gallons of gasoline.

For help, Mabie calls upon members of the Fond du Lac Yacht Club's Coast Guard Auxiliary whose commander is Pete Langolf, 301 Stowe St. For water rescue work, they can pick up a resuscitator at the fire department, about seven blocks from the dock. There are 13 members, all on 24 hour call.

On Sept. 4, two boys who started a trip across the lake to the west shore had their jaunt interrupted by a severe storm which capsized their 17-foot sail boat and left the boys clinging to its sides for nearly an hour before Mabie and Ralph Materson, radio engineer for the county police, rescued them.

Langolf says it is the duty of his unit to prevent lake disasters by inspecting boats for safety measures such as possession of life jackets, proper lights and fire extinguishers. This season the Coast Guard Auxiliary inspected 250 boats.

Another preventative measure is the pram sailing program, put on by the yacht club. This year there were 120 youngsters, youngsters are taught how to age 9 to 16, who participated, handle a boat and the safety Ed Malone, 164 Rose Ave., is measures of sailing and good director of the program. Gerald C. Mabie Uses Own Boat To Serve Sailors

BY DOROTHY RICHTER

FOND DU LAC — Fond du Lac's harbor master, Gerald C. Mabie of 11 E. McWilliams St., has answered eight or more emergency calls so far this boating season on Lake Winnebago. He uses his $13,000, 30-foot cabin cruiser, the Inceptor, that is docked at the municipal harbor.

Fond du Lac has no official marine police force. Mabie offered his boat and its services for lake rescue and police work. He is a member of the U.S. Power Squadron and the Coast Guard Auxiliary. He and his wife, Florence, who assists him, are licensed by the Federal Communication Commission.

Mabie came to Fond du Lac from Mason City, Iowa in 1929. After finishing his duties as a service manager for a Fond du Lac automobile dealer, he patrols the lake from about 6 to 10 p.m. each weekday and from 1 to 9 p.m. Saturdays and all day Sundays during the boating season.

On Alert

The Inceptor has stand-by service with city police and the county sheriff's department frequencies, two ship-to-shore-telephone systems in addition to Mabie's own base station facilities and a 27 megacycle band scattered all over the place when she reached home. The maid had been doing some laundry when the news of the Indians came. She threw the clothes in all directions and fled in terror with the other neighbors.

Mrs. DeNeve gathered up the clothes and kept a sharp lookout but saw no trace of Indians. Late in the afternoon groups of neighbors passed the DeNeve residence on the way home. They intimidated, in a shamefaced manner, that they had been shopping in town that day. No one cared to discuss the preposterous incident.

So fizzled the great Indian scare of 1862. But the great scare has become a part of Fond du Lac's past and is always recounted when historical groups get together in the month of September.

Paine Receives New Painting

Daubigny Work Given Center by Milwaukee Woman

OSHKOSH — Mrs. Louise Ott Van Antwerpen of Milwaukee has presented an original oil painting to the Paine Art Center.

The picture was painted about 1865 by Charles Francois Daubigny (French, 1817-1878). Its title is "Bend on the Oise River," and measures 14 by 23 inches.

The work was purchased during the early 1900's in Europe, by the late Emile H. Ott, grandfather of Mrs. Van Antwerpen, long prominent socially and professionally in Milwaukee. The painting was given to Mrs. Van Antwerpen's father and then to her — the third generation owner.

New York Exhibit

The newly acquired painting has just returned to the Paine Art Center from the Gallery of Modern Art in New York city, where it has been on display this summer. Also on view in New York, were two other compositions by Daubigny in the Paine Art Center's permanent collection. All three landscapes are now on display in the Paine Art Center's Main Gallery.

According to Richard N. Gregg, Paine Art Center director, the work compares in composition to that of "The Pond of Giverny," also by Daubigny. This was done in 1855, later sold to Napoleon III, and is now owned by the Cincinnati Art Museum. The artist is known to have used similar compositions many times.

On exhibition during September is a selection of over 80 drawings and paintings by the internationally-known Oshkosh-born cartoon artist, Robert Osborn.

6,000 Enroll At WSU-O

Number of Campus Students Is 1,160 More Than Last Year

OSHKOSH — When all is totaled up and counted, Wisconsin State University - Oshkosh may be serving some 6,000 students this fall.

Included will be 4,935 full-time students on the campus in the daily university program, 345 in the Saturday campus program and some 500 to 700 in the university's extension program of classes in other cities and its new adult education program.

Enrollment in the campus program ended Saturday while enrollment in the extension and adult program will be continued into this week.

1,100 More

The campus enrollment of 5,280 is 1,100 more than that for last year when there were 4,220 enrolled in the daily and Saturday classes, of whom some 3,800 were in the regular daily class program.

The 4,935 full-time students keeps Wisconsin State University-Oshkosh as the largest of the schools in the state university system. The approximate 5,300 daily and Saturday student population also exceeds the 4,900 which was the official enrollment projection for this fall set by the office of the regents of the state university program.

Because of the heavier enrollment than that anticipated the Oshkosh institution has been authorized to secure additional teachers in biology education foundations, Latin, Spanish and women's physical education.

Race Attacks Van Pelt's Stand on Park

FOND DU LAC — Sixth District Democratic Congressional Candidate John Race continued his attack against Congressman William K. Van Pelt's opposition to the Ice Age National Park Saturday, charging, "The congressman apparently doesn't think we need the hundreds of jobs the park would create."

Race, speaking to Lakeside Lodge 1402 of the Machinists

Evening School Opens in October At Oshkosh

OSHKOSH — The evening school of the Oshkosh School of Vocational, Technical and Adult education will begin first semester classes during the week of Oct. 5, and will continue through Dec. 11.

Registration for first semester courses will be held from 7 to 9 p.m. Sept. 28 and 29 and from 8 to 11:30 a.m. and 1 to 3:30 p.m. Sept. 29, 30 and Oct. 1 and 2.

Persons interested in attending should register early. When classes are filled, late registrants are placed on a waiting list and notified when a vacancy occurs.

The registration fee is $2, with an additional semester fee of $2 for non-residents.

A variety of courses in business education, homemaking, trade and general subjects will be offered. Popular classes scheduled again this year include modern mathematics (for parents), know your car (for women), accelerated reading, oil painting, beginning Spanish, cake decorating, hat design and upholstery.

Dual casts will again be used

Union, AFL-CIO, said, "It's time we woke up to the fact that what this area needs is a project that will bring us some new jobs. We don't need a government handout or subsidy — we need jobs!"

"It's time," continued the Democratic candidate, "that we elect a congressman who realizes folks must work for a living and that jobs in this area are getting scarce."

Race's remarks came on the heels of an announcement by Van Pelt that he would continue to oppose the establishment of an Ice Age National Reserve in the Kettle Moraine area of the Sixth District. The establishment of an Ice Age National Reserve would "add hundreds of needed jobs in this area and would bring millions of needed dollars into the economy of the Sixth District. Why can't our congressman understand this?" asked Race. "Why is he the only man in the House of Representatives that chooses to fight against our interest?"

OSHKOSH — If you're driving down the highway and see a red and white "Monster" with little pairs of eyes peering out at you, don't be alarmed. Take another look and you might recognize the Donald Below family of 1633 Doemel St.

It's not that the Belows like to scare people—they're just having a ball in their new, 10-ft. high, tri-level camper. Since they got the camper "home" on July 24, the ambitious travelers have covered 4,000 miles in the United States and Canada. Their most recent excursion was a 1,620 mile journey around Lake Superior.

"We searched for a year for a self-containing camper that would sleep six," Mrs. Below recalls. "We went to stores, wrote for catalogs and looked from Fond du Lac to Appleton. Finally we found a dealer in Waukesha who could get this kind of camper. A fellow in Milwaukee had one and when we looked at his we fell in love with it, hook, line and sinker."

Mr. Below picked the 1,850-pound unit up on a Friday and the family took off the next day for Shawano County Park. "He was so anxious to use the camper, he didn't bother to get the instructions and we didn't know how anything worked," Mrs. Below laughs. "The first time I let the water out of the sink it backed up in the bathroom!"

Compact & Tasty
There are many canned goods and dehydrated foods in the camper's cupboards. "These foods are tasty and they don't take a lot of space," the busy mother remarks. There are also plenty of plastic dishes on hand and a hefty supply of their favorite beverage. For safety while traveling, cupboard drawers don't open unless they are lifted up and then pulled out.

The camper sleeps six to eight and has a 30-gallon water tank under the sink, a 20-gallon septic tank, a four cubic-foot refrigerator that runs on gas or electricity, a gas stove with oven and broiler, a thermostatically controlled furnace, a linen closet, beds with storage space and an intercom system.

Mrs. Below rides in the camper with the three children: Billy, 5; Lori, 7; and Toby, 12. "Don can drive without being disturbed and if he sees something ahead that might be of interest he can tell me about it over the intercom," Mrs. Below remarks.

Snugs and Warm
The Belows left Aug. 10 on their Lake Superior trip and were often greeted by rain and wind along the way. "To keep the kids entertained I have a toy box filled with books, crayons and games. We have fun playing pass-word, checkers and cribbage," Mrs. Below declares. The children were disappointed when they didn't see a "Royal Mountie" in Canada, but they loved the sign that read: "58 miles of Moose crossing" near Wawa, Canada.

A Day Off
What did the family think of their first long trip? "We can't wait to go again," Mrs. Below comments. "Campers are so wonderful and helpful. They all have the same things in common. No one really misses radio and television when they can have the soothing stillness of the woods." She indicated that the smell of bacon and coffee in the early morning isn't hard to take either.

The travelers took up residence in a motor home. "primarily because we needed a little more space and for one have beds to sleep. Below chuckles.

The Belows' trailer camps clean and inexpensive.

The water in the full of iron it good-tasting. Low youngsters believe they were "dirty" water.

After an over-night stay at a Niagara Falls hotel, the Belows of their garbage ed. In its place paper and pavement.

At Port Arthur, William the first freighters loaded and ore and pulling mile-long paper mills.

Wawa, the gold capital of Canada, 486 miles to St. Canada. They through the lo Mackinac Island City. "We tourist bit at the Below remark the souvenir museums."

Next year to take a six-month, by way take the south to Oshkosh.

Roger Dehn Claims Miss Judith Hardel

OSHKOSH — Wedding promises were exchanged by Miss Judith Lynn Hardel and Roger V. Dehn in a 7 p.m. candlelight ceremony Saturday.

The bride chose Miss Sandra Hanson as her maid of honor. Serving as bridesmaids were Miss Grace Schroeder and Miss Joan Losse. Miss Mary Ellen Dehn acted as junior bridesmaid.

A cousin of the bridegroom, Terry Reitz, Fond du Lac, performed as best man. Assisting as groomsmen were Gordon Jones and James Tigert. Steven Hardel attended as junior groomsmen.

The Eagles Club was the scene of a reception. After a honeymoon trip to Canada, the couple will reside at 2245A Fisk Ave.

The bride attended Wisconsin State University-Oshkosh, where she was affiliated with Kappa Gamma sorority. She is a teller at the American Auto Bank. Mr. Dehn is co-owner of Dehn and Son Transportation Co.

For Better Coverage

For more thorough coverage of 1964-65 activities, Oshkosh women's clubs, school organizations and church groups are reminded to send a copy of their yearbooks to the Post-Crescent office, P. O. Box 1249, Oshkosh. Information may also be brought to the Post-Crescent, located at 117 State St.

The Below family named its truck and camper 'The B Hive'. Behind the wheel is Donald Below, who recently brought the family back from a camping trip around Lake Superior. Pointing with pride to their slick red and white transportation and home away from home are Toby, 12; Lori, 7; Billy 5, and Mrs. Below. The family lives at 1633 Doemel St. when not on a camping jaunt. At left, Mrs. Below talks with her driving husband by means of the inter-com unit. Mr. Below informs the family when there is a wayside or tourist stop ahead. At right, rockhound Lori examines some of the collection she gathered on the Lake Superior trip. Every stop involved a rock hunt. (Post-Crescent Photos)

Campers Are Always hungry and Mrs. Below complies with the family's demands by using the camper gas stove, complete with oven and broiler. She takes along a large supply of canned goods and dehydrated foods, commenting, "They're tasty and don't take a lot of space."

Engaged Pair Plans Winter Wedding Rite

NEENAH — Mr. and Mrs. Norman Bergstrom, Oshkosh, Iowa, have announced the engagement of their daughter, Christina Marie, to Richard Allen Bryne, 2010 Marathon Ave. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Gustav Bryne, Sioux City, Iowa.

Miss Bergstrom attends Iowa State University, Iowa City, Iowa. Mr. Bryne was graduated from Iowa State University and is employed as an engineer by Marathon Division of American Can Co.

A December wedding is planned.

Promises Exchanged

OSHKOSH — Wayne A. Wesner claimed Miss Sally Lee Coombs as his bride in a 2 p.m. double ring ceremony Saturday at Plymouth Congregational Church.

The Rev. Lynn Scovil officiated at the wedding of the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Coombs, 28 Canniff Court, and the son of Mr. and Mrs. Arnold Wesner, 2339 Ashland St.

A sister of the bride, Miss Linda Coombs, attended as maid of honor. Bridesmaids duties were performed by Miss Joan Chapin, Mrs. James A. Decker, and Miss Marla Wesner.

The bridegroom chose Howard Coombs, a brother of the bride, as best man. Assisting as groomsmen were James Ruck, Ben Norse and Terry Wesner.

Dale Felix and James A. Decker ushered. The bride is a bookkeeper.

I recently read an essay by a great American humorist. He suggested the problems of the world could be solved by humor. This may be, but can you imagine a summit conference that might go something like this:

DE GAULLE: Have you heard zis one? Zere was three men — a Frenchman, an American and a Commie . . .

KHRUSHCHEV. Was watching your language, please Was heard the one about the traveling com-misar?

HOME: Careful. Ladies present, you know.

JOHNSON. Y'all hear about the two Texans who . . .

ALL. What's a Texan?

Humor may leave something to be desired at the conference table.

We got a letter from a young girl from Neenah who said she went to Milwaukee to see the Beatles. There, she said, "I hung onto a rafter, climbed on a high windowsill, got partway backstage, almost jumped on Ringo's drums, and re-entered the Arena unlawfully."

Actually, the only thing funny about this is that the girl is proud of what she did.

Gov. Reynolds and Our Four-Year College

The Post-Crescent has been critical of Governor Reynolds for attempting to make a political issue out of the need of this area of the state for a new four-year public college or university. In a recent editorial we took to task the Governor's executive secretary, Mr. Zuckerman, for a statement he made that the future of higher education in the Fox River Valley is dependent on the re-election of Governor Reynolds.

Mr. Zuckerman in a letter to the editor published on this page today declares that the editorial missed the point of his remarks. We are happy to grant him this space to elucidate his point.

But after reading his letter, we are more convinced than ever that our editorial hit the essential point.

Mr. Zuckerman states: "I stand by my remark that the future of higher education in the Fox River Valley is dependent on the re-election of Governor Reynolds. I said that because Governor Reynolds is totally committed to the cause of education, and his efforts succeeded in preserving Wisconsin's commitment to higher education. Between the two candidates for governor, I believe it is clear that Governor Reynolds is the man with the deepest conviction on this subject. I do not know what his opponent holds on this matter." (The emphasis is ours.)

How can Mr. Zuckerman be certain of his ground when he has not informed himself of Warren Knowles' stand? We are happy to enlighten the governor's secretary, for Mr. Knowles' views are a matter of public record.

In a recent speech at Amery, Mr. Knowles said: "He (Governor Reynolds) wrecked the calm deliberation of a committee studying the needs for a four-year college in the Fox River Valley by calling for immediate construction at Green Bay and interjected politics into an educational problem to the consternation of all educators."

In remarks at Green Bay Mr. Knowles said that he supported fully the proposal for a four-year institution in this area. But he cautioned that it would be an expensive program and that considerable study should go into where and how it should be built and how it can be financed.

That type of thoughtful study was being directed at the problem until Mr. Reynolds arrived on the scene. A committee representing all of the urban areas in this part of the state had been working together for a number of months to document the need and was also working with the Coordinating Committee for Higher Education on the questions of what type of institution should be built and where it should be located.

The committee through conscious effort had sought to avoid an intra-city hassle over where the facility should be located. The committee felt all cities in this area who were interested should have an equal opportunity of presenting their cases to the CCHE and that the final decision should be made by that body.

Then the Governor called the committee to a meeting in Green Bay, announced that he was going to push the project more rapidly than state educational authorities had planned, and that as far as location was concerned it should be in his home town of Green Bay.

The case for a four-year facility in this part of the state rests on its own merits and doesn't need any help from either Governor Reynolds or Candidate Knowles. The final decision will be made by the legislature, which must appropriate the money, and we firmly believe any thoughtful legislator of either party will become convinced it is more economical to provide for expansion of the state's higher educational facilities in this area than at a central point like Madison.

In locating the school, we believe that the needs of prospective students from the Fox Cities area and Manitowoc must be considered along with those of Green Bay, and from this point of view a location between Green Bay and Appleton lying east of the Fox River would be ideal. We do not believe that placing it in the home town of the governor is the important consideration.

Mr. Zuckerman must think people in this area are naive. Governor Reynolds has chosen to back a popular project that was already well on the way to accomplishment for what votes it may bring him.

We don't think the forthcoming election has any bearing on the matter, and we wish Governor Reynolds would drop it

Paperback Boom and Boon

One of the major boons to education in the last couple of decades has been the continued growth of the paperback book industry.

No longer do most of the paperbacks mean smutty stories or bosomy covers although there are plenty of both. A visit to a paperback only bookstore now means perusal of the time honored classics, surveys of various educational courses, titles aimed at improving the study of knowledge for a particular subject or examination. And a happy result of the availability of the paperbacks is that they are being used.

The industry has been of particular assistance to literature and history courses but the paperbacks are also widely used in philosophy, religion and science. There is hardly a high school or university instructor worth his salary who does not assign reading in books that are available in paperback form. Many schools have installed shelves of paperbacks which can be purchased by the students.

The paperbacks are a sound educational investment from several points of view. A major study aid for most students is the marking of important passages or information to stress in textbooks, whatever the understandable objections of school authorities when the books must be re-collected and handed out to a new class of students the following year. The cost of the paperbacks of course is far less than the hard covers required in other days. And when students buy their own paperbacks, it ought to mean that school funds for library use can be expended on the expensive research volumes now much in demand in many fields of study.

To the Moon—And Back

The successful journey of Ranger VII to the moon, its cameras snapping pictures to transmit to scientists back on earth until they were smashed upon impact, was certainly a step forward in space travel and the eventual attempt to land a man on the moon—and bring him back alive. But Saturday Review Science Editor John Lear warns that we are in danger of not facing up to the tremendous problems that lie ahead. Ranger VII's journey probably raised as many questions as it answered.

One big query answered is what the craters on the moon are. As suspected by a Russian scientist, they are "chains of secondary and tertiary craters formed by the ejection of debris during the formation of primary craters." But a question of extreme importance to future moon visitors was raised by the Ranger VII photographs — of what is the surface of the moon composed? And will it hold the weight of a man?

Before the Ranger's journey, it had been assumed that there was a thick layer of dust over the moon's surface which would be dangerous to visitors. The layer was thought to be there because of the almost constant bombardment of meteors. The earth is subject to the same bombardment but our relatively thick atmosphere so increases the friction that the majority burn away before they can hit the earth's surface. The moon, being smaller, has less gravitational pull and a thinner atmosphere so scientists thought that most meteors would strike the moon's surface and be pulverized into dust.

But the pictures sent back by Ranger VII showed clear outlines of small craters, indicating the thick dust layer did not exist. So what happens when the meteorites hit the moon?

Professor Gerald Kuiper of the Lunar and Planetary Laboratory of the University of Arizona and chief scientific investigator for NASA has two theories. The meteorites must strike with such force, he says, that they either glance back into space or they go through the moon's surface. If the latter happens then the surface may be something like a rocky sponge, pockmarked with holes down to an undetermined depth. Will this crunchy crust collapse at the weight of a space ship or even a man? And how deep might either or both sink?

A colleague of Kuipers at the University of Arizona, Dr. Alvar Wilska, has proposed a way to find the answers. Another Ranger vehicle could carry a plummet with an accelerometer tape. Seconds before the crash, the plummet would be fired into the surface and it would send back readings of depth achieved and at what force.

Science Editor Lear charges that officials of both NASA and the Jet Propulsion Laboratory of the California Institute of Technology have tended to mislead the American public through oversimplification. Part of this is in what Lear calls "instant science" — the wooing of a top scientist by Congressional money and then pressing him to come up with research achievements which will impress Congress into handing out more money for the research the scientist wants to do. Lear suggests that if we stop accepting it as "a foregone conclusion that a man could land on the moon . . . and that we know how to keep him alive . . . perhaps a sense of humility in the face of frightening natural grandeur would not only fit the real circumstances but would actually add a dimension to our capability in dealing with forces immeasurably more powerful than ourselves."

The controversy over whether or not the money we spend on the moon shot is justified will go on until such a shot is achieved and certainly the argument will be continued by future historians. Understandably those in favor of the space projects will exert all pressure possible to impress public opinion and therefore Congress about the wisdom of the projects and the reasonableness of the expenditures. But both the public and Congress should be wary of easy answers and glib assumptions of achievement. The moon may be a step nearer because of the Ranger VII journey but it is still more than 230,000 miles away in an atmosphere we still know very little about.

Governor's Secretary Takes Issue With Education Editorial

Editor, Post-Crescent:

Your editorial of August 30, 1964, concerning the future of higher education in the Fox River Valley, missed the point of my Green Bay remarks completely.

Governor Reynolds has supported the advancing of plans for a four-year college in the Fox Valley because of four major considerations:

1. Our rate of college enrollment increase is such that it will grow from 70,000 to 140,000 within the next 10 years.
2. We have no civilized choice other than to provide a college education for the Wisconsin youths who have the ambition to seek one.

3. It costs no more for the state, in the long run, to educate a student near his home rather than away from it.

4. It is cheaper for the student, and for his parents, to educate him near his home.

I stand by my remark that the future of higher education in the Fox River Valley is dependent on the re-election of Governor Reynolds. I said that because Governor Reynolds is totally committed to the cause of education, and his efforts succeeded in preserving Wisconsin's commitment to higher education.

Between the two candidates for governor, I believe it is clear that Governor Reynolds is the man with the deepest convictions on this subject. I do not know what convictions his opponent holds on this matter.

Education, I assure you, will not be kept out of the fall elections. It is the most important issue of the campaign. It is the single most important responsibility of government. The people have a right to know where the candidates stand on it.

Writer Doubts If Expansion Of Oshkosh 'U' Is All Good

Editor, Post-Crescent:

Oshkosh urban renewal advocates are herewith offered cold, hard facts, to refute contentions, that were it not for the college, (Oshkosh's sacred cow!) our city would very likely "go out of business."

Comparisons of population growth obtained from U. S. Census Bureau figures show over a twenty year period from 1940 to 1960 a population gain of only 6,021 for Oshkosh, while Appleton had an increase of 19,975 persons, and Green Bay increased in size by 16,655 in the same twenty year period!

How then can it honestly be said that the college has contributed significantly to our economic climate through any startling increase of population since 1940?

A drive down our Main Street, from the bridge to West Irving Avenue, produced a total of seventeen vacant stores, not including the site of one store which was razed to facilitate a street widening. This does not include a count of vacant "off Main Street property," nor the impending razing of our venerable old Athearn Hotel. If these be signs of a "burgeoning economy," it is devoutly to be hoped that business never gets bad here!

Most merchants will verify that they have experienced no startling gains in profit as a result of college trade. Students normally arrive at school replete with wardrobes and all the trimmings, and about the only things which it would be safe to say they really buy in any quantity would be pizzas and beer. A slowly dying Main Street is surely not a sign of substantial contributions to local economy.

It has oft been whispered that future long-range plans for Oshkosh reveal the city will one day be strictly a college and resort area. How many Oshkosh citizens want this, we don't know for sure, but will wager our last nickels that it's darned few!

Oshkoshians are willing to accept the college as a vital part of this city, but not so willing to continue to sacrifice "home and hearth," to the continuing and unceasingly insatiable appetite of urban renewal bulldozers.

Especially is this true of our senior citizens, who have worked hard and long to acquire what property they have, and now exist on meager Social Security allotments. If ever an injustice and hardship has been thrust upon those who can least afford it, urban renewal is it! Proponents of the "love, compassion and something for everybody" doctrines might do well to practice what they so readily preach.

One cannot help but wonder, if in order to eliminate any further "land-grabs," additions, going up, not sprawling out, could be made on existing dormitories and buildings, and then only, if absolutely necessary! Federal urban renewal is nothing more than a political weapon, and further infringes on our Constitutional rights. This continued "grabbing of land" removes much valuable property from our tax rolls and results in a "burgeoning" tax rate (which was too high many moons ago) rather than an economic boost.

An afterthought! What will be done with vacant dorms and classrooms in a few short years when the "saturation point" is passed and enrollments drop, as well they must? Apparently, not much, if any, consideration has been given to this angle in the insane rush to tax and spend, spend and tax, and build, build, build!

If the mad rush to build the college bigger, and make the city smaller as a result—continues, some ingenious musician might well capitalize on the result with a composition entitled, "There Won't Always Be an Oshkosh," because this will prove to be more truth than fiction!

Junior Attic Theater Member Defends Play

Editor, Post-Crescent:

What will follow is written in a spirit as equally charitable as that of Ellis W. Whiting's letter of September 11 to People's Forum. It is also written in the hope that it will clear up a few misconceptions and answer a few questions posed by Mr. Whiting concerning "Gypsy", recently produced by the Attic Theater.

I heartily agree with Mr. Whiting that Attic is a fine institution in our community. In fact, I have been a member of that institution for the past three summers. This year each of Jay Joslyn's glowing reviews of Attic productions made me proud to be a member. I was exceptionally proud of "Gypsy," Attic's most polished production.

Here we stand in open disagreement, Mr. Whiting and I, and I should like to defend my pride. As to why Attic should decide on "Gypsy" to close its season; why should Attic not choose such a warm, sparkling, genuinely humorous and "fun" musical? Both entertaining acts kept the full auditorium ringing with laughter every night and the cast and crews exclaiming over the wonderful reception of each scene and number. If Mr. Whiting could have met and known "Tesse Tura," "Mazzeppa" or "Electra," seen their smiles and heard their laughter over their "Gotta

Have a Gimmick" number, I doubt if he would have wanted to air his criticism of the "degrading and disgusting second act."

Many of the teen-ager's who viewed "Gypsy," myself included, were members of cast or crew, and I believe I can speak for all the junior members who worked on "Gypsy" when I say we loved it, every minute of it! Speaking of teen-agers, Mr. Whiting either has a very low opinion of today's teen-ager's mentality or is appallingly behind the times. Most young adults were well aware before the production of "Gypsy" that all is not proper language and proper attire everywhere. After all, "Gypsy" is a true story concerning a true era in American history. However, this is excellent material for a little "low humor" which ought not to be detrimental to the refined people of this area.

If Mr. Whiting had seen or read some of the plays currently playing on Broadway he might not have been so quick to pass judgment on Attic's selection. It might broaden his opinions to attend the theatre more often and someday, he, too, could be among the many that enthusiastically applauded "Gypsy" and joined Jay Joslyn in his "Congratulations, Attic Theatre."

Arranging Eisenhower Visit to Rail Museum Absorbing Experience

BY JOHN TORINUS

Several months ago this column detailed the background story of how Harold Fuller and a hard-working group of men from the National Railroad Museum had acquired the Eisenhower locomotive from England for the Museum. I remarked in conclusion that it was Fuller's ambition to get General Dwight D. Eisenhower to come to Green Bay to dedicate the locomotive as a permanent Museum exhibit, and that knowing of Fuller's dogged determination, I would bet that he would accomplish it.

Well the former President came to Green Bay Friday and visited the Museum and had his picture taken in the cab of the famous steam engine which pulled his official train during World War II in England. And it was quite a day for the Railroad Museum which certainly gained much national stature in the process.

Back when Fuller was talking about getting General Eisenhower to come to Green Bay, I somewhat jokingly offered to chairman such an event if it ever came about. I had to eat my words, of course, but this was certainly the most interesting civic promotion I ever worked on.

Before we could get a final commitment that the General would come, and before we could announce it publicly, we had to work out the day's program in minute detail, blocked out in time segments what he would be doing practically every minute, and have it approved by his aide, Brig. Gen. Robert Schulz.

I was on vacation in Door County at this time and the telephone operator at Baileys Harbor must have received quite a jolt from the number of long distance calls that were going back and forth from Gettysburg, Pa.

When the details were finally set I prepared a news release which had to make the 4 p.m. mail truck out of Egg Harbor to get in that Sunday's papers. But I had to read it to Gen. Schulz before it could be sent. It was quite a scene. I was using the public booth on the main corner in Egg Harbor, trying to reach Gen. Schulz at Gettysburg. He had left for the day but his secretary said I might reach him in his private car as he was driving home to Arlington, Va.

So here was I in that booth by Murphy Moore's tavern talking with Mr. Eisenhower's aide somewhere on the highway between Gettysburg and Arlington, my daughter down the street holding the mail truck while my son stood by to rush the releases to the post office when approved. Fortunately Gen. Schulz changed only one word.

As chairman I had the privilege of flying out the night before to Pennsylvania and flying back with General Eisenhower and his party on the Johnson Wax Company's Gulfstream plane.

I can say without equivocation that I found Gen. Eisenhower to be the most remarkable man I have ever met. It is generally true that the greater a man's character, the easier it is to converse with him. Within five minutes after we had been on the plane together one felt that he had known Mr. Eisenhower all his life.

He took over leadership of the conversation immediately, yet never dominated it. Contrary to the impression he sometimes gives in his TV appearances, he has a great sense of humor, intersperses his remarks with rollicking stories and a great laugh, and his conversation is flowered with GI language. He has a humility that is truly convincing but which only adds to his great dignity.

One young girl who saw him at Green Bay probably summed all this up better than I when she remarked "He looks just like grandpa."

We talked in a wide range of subjects in the first hour and one-half on the plane, including his fishing vacations in Wisconsin, his memories of his "whistle-stop tour" in 1952, golf, and then into politics as he asked us our opinions on the trend of the Wisconsin campaign.

Since I was aboard as chairman of the arrangements committee rather than as a newspaper editor I prefer to hold some of his franker statements in confidence, as I am sure he intended them. But he spoke feelingly of his fears that an all-consuming federal bureaucracy was trampling on American traditions and freedoms.

"I have refused absolutely to take one nickel's worth of federal aid for my farm," he remarked. "I swore to myself that I'd go broke rather than accept any federal assistance." And then with a laugh: "And it looks like that's what I'm going to do. I have to work harder every day at writing articles and books to keep that darn farm going."

With less than an hour remaining before landing at Green Bay, his aides got him down to work, reading the outline of the speech he would give at the Arena, being briefed on the program for the day, what persons he would meet, etc.

Brig. Gen. Robert Schulz, his aide de camp, has been with him 17 years. As a Transportation Corps officer, he organized the homecoming celebration for the General in 1945, has been with him practically ever since. He acts as the buffer between the former President and the public, and sometimes he has to get pretty rough with people who are trying to impose themselves on "the boss."

Dr. Kevin McCann is an old-time newspaperman who is his speech-writer and secretary. He once operated a chain of weeklies in Illinois, vacations twice a year at a hide-away in L'Anse, Mich. He chain-smokes cigarettes all of which he borrows from Gen. Schulz, guests or police officers.

When Gen. Eisenhower remarked in closing his Arena address how much he had enjoyed the day and when he said the reception he had received had touched him deeply, I was sure he meant it. It was obvious that he was enjoying himself tremendously as each event progressed. At age 73, almost 74, he enjoys the active life, he loves meeting and talking with people. It certainly is no exaggeration to call him "our greatest living American."

The Story of KREBIOZEN

A Medical Controversy

BY JAY JOSLYN
Post-Crescent Sunday Editor

An idea developed in an Italian prisoner-of-war camp, brought to fruition on an Argentine ranch and hopefully offered as a potent weapon against cancer has sent abroad in our land a debate—sometimes heartbreaking, often vituperative—that has echoed into the halls of Congress, where it has reached an impasse.

In the process of the debate, one of the nation's and the world's most honored and respected physicians and scientific researchers has been labeled and dismissed as a senile old man suffering from a paranoid syndrome of persecution, and one of the officials of the American Medical Association has been charged with conspiracy and misuse of power aimed at personal financial gain.

The impasse in the halls of Congress devolves from a report of a federal agency concerning this hopeful idea, the drug Krebiozen. A group of U.S. Senators, headed by Sen. Paul Douglas of Illinois and Sen. William Proxmire of Wisconsin, has taken exception to that report. Armed with an extensive, exhaustive survey of the facts involved, Sen. Douglas has requested repeatedly that questions arising from discrepancies between his survey and the agency's report be answered. He has been stubbornly ignored.

Today through the land there is a cry—a plea—for a scientific, clinical test to free this hope to the general public or to give incontestable proof that this particular hope is hollow.

The plea for the test comes from Congressmen, a handful of doctors and numerous other persons who claim they have been helped, cured or could have been helped by this hope.

The answer, so far, has been expressed in substantially the same words given this writer by an Appleton physician deeply interested in the treatment of cancer, "The medical profession has long ago lost interest in this substance."

This controversy has been going on for about 13 years but chiefly in the rarefied atmosphere of medical science. Lately layman groups, including Congressmen, have taken up the cudgels for the scientific test. One of these groups is active in the Fox Cities, making an explanation of the controversy cogent at this time.

The backers of the substance under question claim that it reverses the run-away cell growth caused by cancer. Its detractors claim it is merely "creatine, a normal component of the human body concerned primarily with muscle contraction."

The American Medical Association through its president, Dr. Edward Annis, called Krebiozen "one of the greatest frauds in the 20th century."

On the other hand, the National Health Federation has declared that it will not consider the Krebiozen controversy settled until it is resolved through a clinical test.

The story of Krebiozen starts with Dr. Stevan Durovic, a Yugoslavian medical researcher who worked on the study of molds at the Pasteur Institute in Paris.

When World War II started, Dr. Durovic became a member of the Yugoslavian army as a captain in the medical corps, and when the Fascists overran the land, he was captured and placed in an Italian prisoner-of-war camp. While his brother, Marko, a Belgrade munitions manufacturer who had escaped before the approach of the Nazis, was effecting his release through friends in Rome, Dr. Durovic had 18 months to while away by musing over the phenomena that caused mold to grow and stop growing.

With the age-old medical puzzle of cancer in his mind, he strove to link up his knowledge of mycology with the similar phenomena in the human body. He theorized that if there was a substance that could trigger run-away growth, there must be a substance that could stop that growth and, perhaps, could set up body defenses against uncontrolled growth.

By the time his brother had effected his release as a POW, Pearl Harbor had been attacked and the United States, his primarily-desired destination, was closed so the Durovics fled to Argentina.

In Argentina, Durovic continued his theorizing and in seeking some example of his "start and stop" growth in animals, he recalled a disease that had devastated his father's herd of horses in Yugoslavia. It began as a tiny growth, usually on the side of the neck or jaw. Within a few weeks, the growth would burgeon into a huge tumor, and the horse would become very sick and often die; but sometimes, the horse would recover and the "lumpy jaw" would recede. The "lumpy jaw" was caused by a fungus, Actinomyces bovis.

Durovic infected many hundreds of horses with Actinomyces and from their blood extracted about a half-teaspoon of whitish powder. This he believed was the growth-control regulator he was looking for.

He tried the new substance on old dogs with "natural" cancers and the results were astounding.

This drawing by AP artist Dick Hodgins Jr., depicts the giant figure of Death dwarfing a scientist in his laboratory searching for a cure for cancer. (AP Wirephoto)

The dogs' cancers shrank noticeably and some even disappeared altogether.

Dr. Durovic arranged with doctors of the School of Veterinary Medicine, University of Buenos Aires, for a series of independent tests which confirmed his own experiments.

He sealed 500 ampules of this substance, which was manufactured in some yet-unknown tissues of the horse, and came to America.

Actually, his American trip was motivated by another substance he had been working on, Kositerin, which he hoped would benefit victims of high blood pressure. Although he had been licensed by Argentina to sell Kositerin, Dr. Durovic wanted more clinical tests before he released it to the market, and came to America to obtain these series of tests.

Because he had recently read a paper on cancer by Dr. Andrew C. Ivy of the University of Illinois which closely paralleled his own theories on the disease, he had hopes of showing Dr. Ivy his new substance and, perhaps, having this eminent researcher assist in further testing of it.

He was met upon his arrival in Chicago by two businessmen who were interested in Kositerin. They were Edwin Moore and Moore's brother-in-law, Kenneth Brainard. They had been recommended to Dr.

According to the story related by Herbert Bailey in his book, "A Matter of Life or Death, The Incredible Story of Krebiozen," Moore and Brainard were in constant attendance on Dr. Durovic. Brainard, speaking French, served as an interpreter for the Yugoslavian doctor who spoke that tongue but no English. They arranged a meeting with Dr. Roscoe Miller, head of the Northwestern University Medical School, who accepted the Kositerin for a three-month test. He made no inquiry of its make-up or chemical content.

The three-month test at Northwestern did not produce the results the Argentine tests indicated, and Dr. Miller suggested that perhaps Dr. Ivy at Illinois would be able to give it a better test and arranged for a meeting between Dr. Ivy and Dr. Durovic.

Both Believed Growth Regulatory Theory

To Dr. Durovic the name of Dr. Ivy was a pass key into the realm of the most respected research in the world. Furthermore, Dr. Ivy's paper had indicated to him that both believed in a growth regulatory theory of cancer.

Dr. Ivy had been honored by many groups in medicine and was recognized as an expert in the field of cancer, having been a member of the National Advisory Cancer Council from 1944 to 1951 and its executive director from 1947 to 1951. He had been the scientific director of the Naval Medical Research Institute in 1942 and 1943. He was a fellow of the American College of Physicians, a member of the American Medical Association and chairman of the AMA section on physiology and pathology, president of the American Gastro-Enterological Association in 1940 and 1941 and president of the Society of Internal Medicine in 1941 and 1942, president of the Chicago Institute of Medicine, president of the Society of Internal Medicine, the author of 1,500 scientific papers and manager editor of "Gastroenterology," the official publication in the field, from 1942 to 1952.

More spectacular, perhaps, was Dr. Ivy's position in the Nuremberg War Crimes Trial when the world, in effect, turned to him to lay down a code of ethics for permissible medical experiments by which the Nazi medical experimenter defendants would be tried and under which the world would agree to conduct experiments in the future.

Developed Arm Lift Respiration Method

A more commonplace, but no less important, result of Dr. Ivy's work is the widely used "arm lift" artificial respiration technique that is saving lives all over the world. He also pioneered in space medicine.

When Dr. Durovic explained his theories and brought his ampules to Dr. Ivy, the eminent scientist was head of the University of Illinois Medical School.

The meeting between the two doctors was attended by Brainard and Moore and Dr. Ivy agreed to test Kositerin. Later, early in August of 1949, Dr. Durovic received results of further Krebiozen tests in Argentina and brought them to Dr. Ivy telling him he wanted to suspend the Kositerin tests

Testifying to the continuing controversy over Krebiozen are these printed materials, distributed by proponents of the drug. Shown are Herbert Bailey's controversial book, "A Matter of Life or Death," the Ivy Cancer News published by the Ivy Cancer Research Foundation, and the Congressional Record, in which the speeches of Sen. Paul Douglass (D-Ill.), urging a fair test for the drug, are reprinted. (Post-Crescent Photo) and explained to him the results of his cancer experiments.

At this point, Dr. Durovic committed an act that has haunted the Krebiozen question ever since. He refused to give exact information about the manufacture of Krebiozen. This refusal tended to cast a shroud of a "secret remedy" over Krebiozen. In scientific circles, a "secret remedy" is one whose "secrets" are withheld because they are fraudulently conceived and cannot withstand exposure.

According to Bailey's book, Dr. Durovic explained to Dr. Ivy, "It is certainly not my wish to withhold anything. It is true that I cannot reveal the processes at this time. As one scientist to another, I can tell you I produced this substance in much the same way as I produced Kositerin, that is, by stimulating substances to make Kositerin and this. The end products must be greatly different too, because I extracted more than two grams of Kositerin from a comparatively small number of cattle. It took many hundreds of horses to obtain this substance, of which there are only two grams."

The theory behind Krebiozen, Dr. Durovic's reputation and the microscopic evidence that the substance had the power to destroy cancer cells moved Dr. Ivy, according to Bailey, to brave the hazards of backing a "secret" remedy on the chance that this was the key mankind had been searching for for so long.

Dr. Ivy told Bailey, "I weighed the evidence for and against the experiment and I believed that the greater good was to leave no stone unturned in the search of truth. Besides, if the substance proved of merit, scientific history has shown it could not be kept secret very long."

Dr. Ivy accepted Krebiozen for experimentation and research by his own staff and other private practitioners, and he agreed to arrange for tests on human patients where cancer could be measured and observed day by day.

On Aug. 25, 1949, the first dosage of Krebiozen was given a human with a terminal case of cancer, a woman with a prognosis of but a few weeks to live. Within 24 hours, Bailey reports, the patient felt no pain and the swelling about the main tumor had started to subside. In three days, the cancer and the secondary cancers (metastases) had softened and had started to shrivel. A second patient showed even more dramatic results.

Eventually, there were 22 patients in Dr. Ivy's preliminary study. Most of them were dying or were given up for dead. Few had prognosis of more than a few weeks or months to live. Only one had received another form of treatment somewhat prior to Krebiozen which could be interpreted as causing the improvement.

Dr. Ivy developed a strict methodology to be followed by the experiment and the area of testing was widened with prominent doctors in New York, Washington, D.C., and other centers participating. It was noted that about 30 per cent failed to react to any noticeable degree, a percentage considered low in the light of the drastic physical condition of the patients.

At this point, late in 1950, the Durovics—Marko had joined his brother in Chicago—received a million ampules and placed about 200,000 of them in light mineral oil. It was their thought that the oil would help preserve the substance, but in effect they had prevented anyone from learning the full chemical formula of Krebiozen. Although they had planned to prepare other ampules of Krebiozen in the future for chemical analysis, their use of the oil cast another shadow over Krebiozen.

However, about this time, Dr. Louis Krasno, the first doctor to participate in the Krebiozen testing, took microscopic slides of tissues of one of the test patients recovered before and after treatment to the pathology laboratories run by Dr. Josiah J. Moore, treasurer of the AMA. Dr. Moore reported that he found definite disintegration of cancer cells after the administration of Krebiozen.

In the light of later developments, this was a significant report.

The experiments continued and results approaching the fantastic piled up. Among the results was a doctor's wife, on the threshold of death, who responded within two hours after an injection of Krebiozen.

Word spread and the Durovics and Dr. Ivy gathered a coterie of enthusiastic friends about them.

Krebiozen Was Used On Sen. Vandenberg

On the night of March 31, 1951, Sen. Arthur Vandenberg of Michigan lay in a coma, dying of cancer. For several months he had been in extreme pain and the cancer was widespread. His doctors had given up all hope, but they placed a call for Dr. Ivy to try his Krebiozen since they said, "If your new drug did anything for him it would be a miracle." They warned Dr. Ivy that it would not be a fair test, that it was unlikely the senator would last the night.

The Krebiozen was administered. After three days, the pain disappeared and the senator became alert and comfortable with, however, periods of recession. It was believed that during these periods of recession the body was passing off the highly poisonous debris of the tumors. As this sloughed off, the patient regained his well-being. However, the earlier destruction had been too widespread and on April 18, 1951, Sen. Vandenberg died; but his last days had been free of the racking pain that is the major horror of the disease.

In March, 1951, Dr. Ivy sent out a soberly-worded invitation to a group of cancer researchers inviting them to a meeting in Chicago on March 26. He wrote, "It is my opinion that the substance merits a thorough clinical study and evaluation, since (and this is the only claim Dr. Ivy made for Krebiozen) I believe it shows much promise in the management of the cancer patient."

Because of the many variables in the disease of cancer and because of the still unexplained natural regression of the disease in some patients, any substance aimed at controlling the disease would have to be tested on thousands of patients to obtain clear-cut statistical findings. It was this kind of widespread testing Dr. Ivy was seeking.

The meeting was to be a calm, considered gathering of scientific men brought together to examine the findings obtained from the first 22 patients treated by Krebiozen. In this quiet atmosphere, these men would weigh these findings, and if they saw fit, would agree to participate in further testing. Dr. Ivy and the Durovics had prepared for nothing more than this. There had been no arrangements made for widespread distribution of the drug or information about it.

But things went wrong. Somehow word leaked to the press in a release composed and circulated without Dr. Ivy's knowledge or approval. The spurious release said in part, "The battle of medical science to find a cure for cancer achieved its realization today."

Atmosphere Seemed Like Circus, Rally

When the scientists gathered for Dr. Ivy's meeting, consequently, the atmosphere was more akin to a circus or a political rally than a scientific meeting. The hotel was overrun with members of all media of the press, completely ignoring the "no publicity" notation on the hotel reservation book. The authorship of the "cure" release has never been established.

Understandably, medicine dislikes premature, exaggerated claims and the invited cancer researchers especially felt they had been lured into an untenable position by Dr. Ivy's quiet, correct call for a meeting.

Despite the circus atmosphere, Dr. Ivy was able to get 200 or more physicians to agree to test Krebiozen. However, all of the big cancer clinics but two refused to participate and most of the physicians entered the test with misgivings.

In this sort of test, the participating physicians are obligated by law and ethics to report their findings to the originating agency and to follow its strict methodology. However, Bailey states that many of the physicians, instead of following Dr. Ivy's rules and reporting their findings to him, made haphazard, limited tests and made their report to the American Medical Association.

Because of the spurious press release and the circus atmosphere of the March meeting, it is believed some of the physicians felt they had caught the eminent scientist in an uncharacteristic flaw and were willing to assure the fall of the mighty.

Because of the entrance of the AMA into the Krebiozen testing, however, a reason more closely attached to that organization seems feasible and it has been charged by the Krebiozen supporters that this was, indeed, the case. The link, they say, was Dr. Josiah J. Moore, the AMA treasurer and the pathologist who, earlier, had affirmed the power of Krebiozen.

Conspiracy Charged In Bailey's Book

It has been charged in Bailey's book, at Illinois legislative hearings on Krebiozen, in numerous articles in the press and from the floor of the United States Senate that Dr. Moore attempted to use his position in the AMA to force the Krebiozen people to give the distribution rights to Moore and Brainard and that he threatened to ruin all chances for medical acceptance of the drug if these rights weren't turned over to them.

In a cloak-and-dagger type of investigation, the Krebiozen people established in sworn testimony and tape recordings that Dr. Moore was actually active and a prime mover in such a conspiracy. Despite all of the adverse activities Krebiozen eventually experienced, the Moore faction never lost interest in the Krebiozen rights.

while the AMA was piling up its file of unregulated test findings—some of which the Krebiozen people contend were falsified—a personal and professional attack was launched against Dr. Ivy which resulted in his withdrawing from all of the associations in which he had been active.

After the March meeting, the AMA, using the unregulated and suspect findings, issued a "status report," edited and written in the AMA Chicago offices and, it is contended, under the control of Dr. Moore. Under these circumstances, it would seem that this report would at least be shaded by the suspicion of being less than scientific. However, the medical profession and all of the agencies which depend on the profession for counsel have used this report as the foundation of their consideration of Krebiozen.

Nevertheless, the Moore faction continued its pressure on the Durovics, who also received munificent offers for their drug from large pharmaceutical companies which they refused because they desired to have the drug scientifically tested first to find out if it were of permanent worth in the treatment of the cancer patient.

Krebiozen detractors see in this refusal evidence of the Durovics' fear of exposure.

'Status Report' Was Lashed by Critics

One of the most glaring faults in the AMA "status report" is the inclusion of the statement that all of the 100 patients included in the haphazard survey of only a few weeks were either dead or dying at the time of the report. In fact, 73 included in the report were so close to death that they received only two or three Krebiozen injections, but three years later 10 of the remaining patients were still alive and seven haven't died yet.

It is axiomatic in historical research, at least, that a researcher that is "wrong in one is wrong in all." Apparently, the medical profession when dealing with its own spokesman organization doesn't follow or even consider this rigid control for accuracy.

While this sub rosa and less-than-scientific attack was being made through the medical profession journals, reports continued to pour into the Krebiozen offices—where all the reports legally should have gone — and the incidence of favorable reaction mounted.

With the AMA "status report" bolstered by disciplinary action against Dr. Ivy by the Chicago Medical Society and an unfavorable—and suspect—report by the National Research Council, the University of Illinois felt forced to evaluate the drug because of the part the head of its medical school, Dr. Ivy, was playing. A committee was named to do the evaluating. It contained members known to be adamant against Krebiozen and who were included over the protests of the Krebiozen people because obvious prejudgment militated against an impartial finding.

Among other things, three reports were presented the committee. One was an exhaustive, 700-page, closely-detailed report by Dr. Ivy commenting on the now 500 patients treated by Krebiozen. Another was a report from the Lankenau Institute for Cancer Research in Philadelphia whose extended experimentation of more than a year moved it to call for further clinical testing "since this represents the first and only non-toxic chemical agent to show definite biological activity of any degree against tumors of many types. . . ."

The third report was from the late Dr. James M. Garland of the Marquette University Tumor Clinic in Milwaukee. Dr. Garland wrote, "It has been demonstrated that Krebiozen can raise the hemoglobin and erythrocyte (blood factors) count. It is, therefore, reasonable that Krebiozen can give symptomatic improvement." He included several case histories in the report.

Both Lankenau and Marquette sent treated patients to the Illinois committee for examination. These patients testified at a later legislative hearing probing the Krebiozen controversy at the university and they told the legislators that the Illinois committee members did little more than pass the time of day with them and that none of them had been examined.

Evaluating Group Had Adverse Report

The Krebiozen people's premonitions were correct and the university evaluating committee returned an adverse report. Despite the report's many contradictory elements and equivocations, the university withdrew its research facilities from the Krebiozen experiments and Dr. Ivy was forced from his position at the school.

The report led a Chicago newswoman to write a series of articles on Krebiozen, based on her own digging. Public opinion forced the legislative hearing and resulted in the resignation of Dr. George D. Stoddard as president of the University of Illinois.

The findings of the legislative hearing caused the state's attorney general to rule that Krebiozen testing and use could continue in Illinois. In 1954, Dr. Durovic obtained permission from the Canadian government for similar testing and use in that country. All of this time the American Krebiozen testing was continuing under license of the Federal Food and Drug Administration.

Dr. Ivy now had been working closely with Krebiozen long enough to make a five-year report based on records of full reports on 687 patients followed for times up to six years.

'Five-Year Cures' Reported by Ivy

Medicine does not recognize a cancer cure until the patient has been cancer-free for five years. The American Cancer Society achieved widespread publicity when it reported one five-year "cured" patient resulting from radioactive iodine treatment.

In 1956, Dr. Ivy published a monograph on his findings. It included records of 23 "five-year cures." It must be remembered that patients treated in the Krebiozen tests were terminal cases whose prognosis was death. He was forced to have his report printed by a general publisher, Henry Regnery of Chicago.

According to "A Matter of Life or Death," by Bailey, "Dr. Ivy was informed (by the numerous medical journals to whom he had sent his monograph) that the publications were told by AMA headquarters they would lose all their revenue from pharmaceutical advertising if they published Ivy's report."

In the monograph, which was countered in medical journal reviews with the specious 1951 AMA report and the National Research Council "findings" based on that report, Dr. Ivy urged that a "double-blind" clinical test be made to establish his own findings beyond a doubt.

A double-blind test is an accepted technique to determine the value of a medical discovery. It involves a large number of patients whose disease has been diagnosed beyond a doubt. They can not have received treatment that would cloud the effectiveness of the drug being tested.

A large supply of dosages is prepared by a disinterested party. Half of the dosages contains the drug to be tested. The other half contains some innocuous substance. The identity of the dosages is known only to the party preparing them. Each is given a coded number and then sent to the testing clinics at random and the patients are treated as though all were receiving the drug. Close records are kept and after a stated time an evaluation is made according to agreed-upon standards.

Krebiozen detractors agree that this kind of test would lay the Krebiozen controversy once and for all, but they point out that such a test is very time-consuming and that during that time at least half of the patients would be receiving no treatment. They also indicate that they feel even the Krebiozen-treated patients would be sacrificing more acceptable care. Of course they base this feeling on the report of several committee evaluations.

Dr. Ivy wrote this writer, "I believe strongly that such a test (a double-blind test) is merited and should be done because I believe that 'Krebiozen' has merit in the treatment of patients with an advanced or hopeless cancer, and history shows that in the field of science, and especially medical science, the opinion of committees has been notoriously wrong. I accept the results of a scientific test, but never accept the decision of a committee on a scientific matter. The opinions of such committees have usually been based on political considerations and on the rejection of a new idea without having made an experimental trial."

More Committees Probed Krebiozen

In 1956, Krebiozen was to undergo several more treatments from committees.

While Krebiozen was being thwarted by the medical profession collectively, individual members of the profession were continuing to use the drug with mounting records of good results.

Throughout the country the number of "Krebiozen Survivors" mounted and they gathered together in organizations backing the Krebiozen Research Foundation. The help of these people has allowed work on the drug to continue.

Krebiozen is a product of Dr. Durovic's South American Promak Laboratories and the cost of the production of each ampule is $9.50. Patients receiving Krebiozen are asked to pay this cost. However, each case is reviewed financially and many Krebiozen patients have received treatment at little or no cost to them with the Krebiozen Research Foundation or its chapters making up the differences.

When Dr. Durovic applied for a renewal of his FDA license to continue interstate distribution of Krebiozen for the purpose of the tests, the FDA, it is charged, began a program of harassment that caused Dr. Durovic so much mental anguish that he withdrew his license application on June 7, 1963. The action prevented further distribution of Krebiozen in the United States outside of Illinois.

Groups of the "Cancer Survivors on Krebiozen" started petitioning their congressmen for renewal of the distribution. A number of them made a march on Washington and picketed the White House. Dr.

F. Allen Rutherford, a doctor who treated nearly 300 patients with Krebiozen, was among the marchers to Washington.

He explained the feelings of his patients at this time. "Threatened with the possibility that availability of Krebiozen might be halted, these patients are convinced that any chance they have for recovery or even control of their disease would be halted too. Krebiozen to them is what insulin is to the diabetic."

On Sept. 7, 1963, the FDA called a press conference and announced that it had ascertained that the sample of Krebiozen given the National Cancer Institute by Dr. Durovic and Dr. Ivy was "creatine," an amino acid derivative plentifully available from meat in the ordinary diet and is a normal constituent of the human body." Its report indicated that it identified a spectrogram of Krebiozen as being nearly identical with one of creatine. This conclusion was fortified by similar examinations by a number of other scientists and agencies.

On Oct. 16, 1963, the National Cancer Institute released the results of the examination it said it had been conducting for two months with a committee of 23 doctors and a statistical consultant.

The report said, "The committee is unanimous in its conclusion that 'Krebiozen' is ineffective as an anti-cancer drug and strongly recommends that no clinical trial be undertaken."

Clinical Test Urged By Health Federation

A few days later the AMA's Dr. Annis made his "greatest fraud of the 20th century" remark and the National Health Federation made its call for a clinical test.

The FDA and NCI reports enlisted the power, prestige and energy of Sen. Paul Douglas of Illinois. He recalled his feelings about the reports in the Senate on Dec. 6, 1963. He said, "I was surprised and shocked, and it forced me to ask that there be an independent inquiry and a report made to me."

Sen. Douglas first went to the National Cancer Institute, the National Institute of Health and the Department of Health, Education and Welfare to negotiate for a fair test of Krebiozen and he reports that he was being received graciously until opposition was raised by members of the AMA and then these governmental agencies hardened and finally, after the reports, even refused to answer letters addressed to them by this United States Senator.

He then organized an independent evaluation of the drug, moved, he said, by his feelings that the FDA and NCI reports "were based on unfair, inaccurate and prejudiced statements," because he had "personally interviewed many cancer patients who have been treated with Krebiozen. Many of these patients have told me (Sen. Douglas) that they were on the point of death from cancer until Krebiozen treatments arrested their decline," and the third reason for his regard for a fair test came from the "statistical record submitted by Dr. Ivy on the first 4,000 cases treated with Krebiozen." He said these records "indicate that in a large percentage of cases markedly beneficial results had been obtained in first, the reduction of pain and the necessity for narcotics; second, the arresting of cancer and the reduction of the size of the cancer tumors, and third, the improvements in the general condition of the patients."

$44 Million Spent On Research Yearly

Sen. Douglas said that he had found "that the cancer institutes are spending approximately $44 million a year on cancer research and . . . they are testing as anticancer agents—approximately 25 thousand chemical preparations a year on animals and at least a hundred a year on humans.

"It seemed to me that no harm, and possibly some good, would be done if Krebiozen were added to the list. . . ."

Sen. Douglas' independent evaluation was done by a team consisting of Dr. Scott Anderson, a physicist; Howard S. Clark, a chemist; Dr. Miles H. Robinson, M.D., a physiologist, a pharmacologist and practitioner in internal medicine, and Howard E. Shuman, Sen. Douglas' administrative assistant.

The NCI report laid down three criteria for a clinical test of an anticancer agent. It must be based on a valid theory, show strong anticancer activities in animals and anticancer activity in humans. Fulfillment of any one of these criteria would be sufficient to warrant a test, the report said.

The Robinson report indicated Douglas' committee had found that the FDA spectrograph was faulty and that Krebiozen was not creatine. In fact the Robinson committee found 29 differences between Krebiozen and creatine.

The theory upon which Dr. Durovic and Dr. Ivy based their work, the Robinson report pointed out, had been propounded by no less than 27 scientists ranging in time from 1915 to 1963. An Associated Press series on cancer research published in the Post-Crescent recently indicated that this growth-regulation theory is the major basis of experimentation today.

The Robinson committee also found that the NCI had used standards unusually harsh in evaluating the 504 medical histories submitted by Dr. Ivy and that standards usually used in approving the thousands of drugs by the NCI and FDA would cast a much more favorable light on the findings. The committee bolstered these reports with the rest of the more than 4,000 case histories Dr. Ivy had obtained.

These discrepancies between the Robinson report and the other agency and AMA reports on Krebiozen, Sen. Douglas says, "raise very serious questions." He has asked that these "serious questions" be answered and has been ignored by the FDA, the NCI and the HEW department.

Krebiozen Obtained In Illinois, Canada

As the Krebiozen controversy stands today, physicians in Canada and Illinois can obtain Krebiozen for treatment of cancer patients and many cancer victims are going to these areas of free research for treatment.

In America, "the medical profession has long ago lost interest in this substance." However, the cry for a clinical test for this "only non-toxic chemical agent to show definite biologic activity of any degree against tumors of many types" continues from the halls of Congress, from victims who report they are again racked with pain after the removal of Krebiozen, from "cancer survivors" who use their own recovery as testimony and from laymen and from professionals in fields allied to medicine who are convinced of Krebiozen's effect or who are dismayed at the restrictions on free research and scientific inquiry the controversy has uncovered.

The frustrations inherent in bucking the medical establishment are matters of record. Lister and his adherents were shunned and many broken because they espoused the idea that a doctor should wash his hands before treating a patient, quackery was roared at Pasteur when he said disease was caused by bacteria, even Hippocrates' life was endangered because of his then radical practices.

Six Alexander Fleming wrote, "Penicillin stood on the shelf for 12 years while I was called a quack. I can only think of thousands who died needlessly because my peers would not use my discovery."

In addition to this historic obdurate attitude toward the novel, it has been charged that Krebiozen is being fought on more crass grounds.

Dr. F. Allen Rutherford, one of those who picketed the White House in favor of Krebiozen, propounds this opposition in this way.

"The government earmarks millions yearly for research to produce a drug which will successfully treat cancer. The drug companies vie for a slice of these millions. When they come up with something they think might work, they submit it to the National Cancer Institute for testing at government expense. It is a foregone conclusion that a drug developed at government expense will be accepted for testing by the NCI. . . .

"Remember that AMA representatives are on the boards which advise the government where to put its research money. AMA representatives are on the boards of the government agencies which test the drugs as they are developed. AMA representatives are also on the boards of directors of the large drug companies. It would indicate that the AMA is part of a conspiracy against Krebiozen, and it is also part of the strong conspiracy in favor of other drugs developed by large corporations."

Dr. Ivy wrote this writer, "I believe that a test of 'Krebiozen' or of a similar substance under a different name, will be done in the near future. But, the 'consumers' will have to exert their influence in that direction."

FDA SPECTROGRAMS OF KREBIOZEN AND CREATINE SQUARELY OVERLAID

In this chart, distributed by proponents of Krebiozen, the FDA spectrograms of Krebiozen and creatine are squarely overlaid. Proponents of Krebiozen contend the chart proves that Krebiozen is not creatine, as charged by the FDA.

Fearless Frank Sinatra Directs Film, Has Patience With His Cast

BY JAMES BACON

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Fearless Frank Sinatra is directing his first movie—although directors who have directed him might argue the point.

But, officially, Frank is director of "None But the Brave," being filmed here, and his behavior is adding one more chapter in the life story of this most complex of Hollywood stars.

Sinatra the actor is a "one take" specialist, impatient with actors who require more.

Sinatra the director is the opposite. A young actor hired for a bit that will take all of 10 seconds on the screen spoke his line and made a fast exit.

"Hey, Charlie," said Sinatra, who calls everybody Charlie, including girls. "You make an exit like that and you walk right out of the picture business. There's nothing more important in show business than getting off stage."

Then for 15 minutes, he patiently taught the youngster how to exit at the right camera angle.

Novice Director

Fearless Frank—so called because he's the only novice director who would start with a cast that mostly doesn't speak English—also acts in the picture.

But he doesn't have the biggest role. These go to Clint Walker, television's "Cheyenne," and Tatsuya Mihashi, a top Japanese actor.

Walker, who would make three of Sinatra, thinks the singer is the most relaxed director he has worked for.

Ten other key roles are played by Japanese actors who don't understand English.

An assistant director interprets for Sinatra.

"I first felt the urge to direct five years ago," says Sinatra. "Directing is the real challenge of this business. Movies are a director's medium."

Then Sinatra stepped in front of the cameras and did a difficult scene where he amputates the leg of a wounded Japanese soldier on a South Pacific island in World War II. The act of mercy produces a temporary truce between marines and Japanese soldiers.

Sinatra the actor did the scene in one take and then Sinatra, the director yelled, "print it."

Spontaneous Style

"Spontaneity is my style. I can't work any other way. Some people say I wing it. Before I do a scene, I have read the script 50 times. It that winging it?"

Stanley Kramer directed him in Spain in "The Pride and the Passion" some years back. Kramer, who had his differences with Frank, recalls:

"Our location was a good three hours drive from Madrid. Everybody in the cast, Sophia Loren, Cary Grant and all lived at the location. This is, everybody but Frank. He stayed in Madrid.

"It used to make me angry to see him drive up to the set at 8 a.m.—and in a taxi yet.

"He'd take a quick look at the script and say: 'Let's get this circus on the road.'

"He wanted no rehearsals or run throughs. 'Keep the cameras turning,' he would say.

"There would be one take.

"But I realized that with that one take he had made the scene come alive—as if he had been rehearsing it a week. It could not be improved on and if Frank had done it any other way, he wouldn't be Sinatra. He is the master of naturalness in acting, much as I hate to concede it."

Another director who has made several pictures with Sinatra refuses to call this picture Sinatra's debut as a director.

"I must confess that Frank never ordered, demanded or even pleaded on how a scene should be shot. But he often suggested.

"A Sinatra suggestion is more than a suggestion. It's an implied command."

ELIZABETHAN MUSIC

Music of Shakespeare's England: works of Byrd, Gibbon, Morley, etc.; Krainis Consort. Mercury SR 90397 (Mono MG 50397).

Anyone looking for songs from Shakespeare's actual plays will find few of them in this album. There are a couple, but basically it is exactly what the title says, music of the time. The Krainis Consort is a very capable ensemble and it performs with great artistry and style to make for an interesting and enjoyable record, even though it is a trifle bland.

BROADWAY MUSICALS

"Girl Crazy" by George and Ira Gershwin, with Mary Martin, Louise Carlyle, Eddie Chappel, chorus and orchestra conducted by Lehman Engel. Columbia OS 2560 (Mono OL 7060).

"Oklahoma!" by Rodgers & Hammerstein, with John Raitt, Florence Henderson, Phyllis Newman, orchestra and chorus conducted by Franz Allers. Columbia OS 2610 (Mono OL 8010).

"The King and I" by Rodgers & Hammerstein, with Barbara Cook, Theodore Bikel, Jeanette Scovotti, chorus and orchestra conducted by Lehman Engel. Columbia OS 2640 (Mono OL 8040).

Columbia's Goodard Lieberman has issued three more recordings of Broadway shows of the past in the same general vein as the half dozen released last month. Everything said about the previous batch applies here—they are concert versions of the songs and orchestral music, and as such give a sampling of the musical styles and flavor of the shows without much indication of the actual productions.

Of primary importance, the singing and playing is of very high quality. Only in the choral work does the standard drop below that set by the soloists and orchestra.

"Girl Crazy," first produced in 1930, does not match the others although it has three great tunes in "I'm Bidin' My Time," "Embraceable You" and "I Got Rhythm," sung inimitably by Mary Martin. The best of the three is "The King and I," largely because it is a more integrated book and projects the spirit of the play more.

"Oklahoma!" the great hit of 1942, has an extra lift in the singing of Raitt and Miss Henderson, both of whom played in the early road show and who have a ball recreating the roles. Raitt is particularly good in this respect.

Both "King and I" and "Oklahoma!" incidentally, are new recordings. "Girl Crazy" is an electronically rechanneled release of a monaural version first made before the days of stereo.

GERSHWIN-GOULD

"Porgy and Bess," (Gershwin) a Symphonic Picture; Minneapolis Symphony, Antal Dorati conducting. "Latin American Symphonette" (Morton Gould); Eastman-Rochester Philharmonic, Howard Hanson conducting. Mercury SR 90394 (Mono MG 50394).

This is apparently a re-release of two works in a new package or one that has been lifted out of the can, since Dorati has not been with the Minneapolis for a number of years. Both are well done, especially the symphonic arrangements of the "Porgy" music by Robert Russell Bennett. The Gould work is no block-buster but Hanson does what he can with it.

Stamps

Africa's New Image Is Emerging on Its Stamps

Post-Crescent Staff Writer

Diamonds and dirt, pet-like tiny antelope and nerve-chilling killer creatures, primitive nomadic living and highly specialized agriculture — all are part of the giant that is Africa. And all these aspects of the continent of contrasts have been well represented on the postage stamps of its many lands.

That the giant is awakening to its modern destiny is also apparent in the appearance of stamp issues of the past decade or so. Senior collectors of pre-World War II experience well recall the deluge of bi-colored French Colonials—cheaply typographed — which were spawned in the 20s and 30s. In typical mint condition, these stamps are generally still rated low in philatelic value.

Desirable Items

More recent issues are quite another matter. Well-designed, engraved and printed French Colonials have become very desirable items. What's more, a great many can be procured in authentic used condition.

One of the more significant signs of African progress, however, is a new theme in subject matter — concern for the debilitating diseases which have plagued its peoples for so long. The 1953 issue of French West Africa (illustration) is a prime example. Four years later the same colony released a stamp noting the activities of mobile leprosy clinics.

So we still see bananas, dates and dozens of other fruits of the soil on the postal adhesives of Africa's countries. There's still portrayal of bare-to-the-waist native women and fearsome tribal chiefs.

Modern Reality

But modern reality is replacing superstition and ignorant fear; medical research and application are broadening Africa's horizons. Just as Texas has declared war on encephalitis-bearing mosquitoes, the tsetse fly is a major target of eradication efforts in African tropics.

It's doubtful that anyone will someday shout, "The tsetse is dead, long live the tsetse."

Freedom Singers Vocalize for Negro Cause

BY MARSHALL GRANROS
Of The Post-Crescent

Senator Kenneth B. Keating took to the floor a little over a year ago with a swift, tongue-in-cheek rebuttal to a resolution passed by the Fire and Police Research Association of Los Angeles calling for Congressional investigation of possible subversive influences in folk music.

Said the Senator: "Of course, I realize that folk music tradition is grounded in movements of political, economic, and social unrest, and I did not expect to find—in music which originated among sharecroppers, miners, union organizers, factory workers, cowboys, hill folk, wanderers, and depressed Negroes—a pattern of tribute and praise to such symbols of orthodoxy as the gold standard, the oil depletion allowance, and the standing rules of the United States Senate."

My only argument with the Senator would be in his use of the past tense, for this music is still alive, still growing, still originating from some of the same sources.

I'm not talking here of the kind of general protest song that people like Bob Dylan have been so successful in writing or those such as Joan Baez and Joan Collins have gained fame by singing. Theirs is a false kind of affectation—the long hair, the blue jeans, the work shoes and the unkempt look that is so carefully arrived at. They are looking backward and downward. It is an infantile, meaningless and, most of all a hopeless kind of protest.

Unifying Theme

The one unifying theme that appears sooner or latter in all forms of folk music is hope. Hope of better days, of freedom from want, oppression and bondage. America's Negro minority still hopes for these things.

These hopes are being translated into action in our Southland. With the backing of private and religious bodies, groups like the NAACP, CORE, and especially SNCC have undertaken the seemingly insurmountable task of organizing, inspiring and registering a frightened and subdued Negro populace. It is a sad and frustrating task. Poverty, ignorance and fear breed a spiritual and economic stagnation that is almost too deeply imbedded to overcome.

One of the most important and useful weapons is to re-awaken a long-buried pride of race in the Negroes. An effective way to do this is through the people's own music.

The melodies are usually the same as those of the old, well-known folk songs, but new words are added relating to the colored man's present station in our society and how it can be improved. The songs are intense, positive in theme, often humorous, and filled with a rare and beautiful dignity. They have in them a powerful sound of hope and determination, an optimistic statement of belief that the American Dream is theirs, too.

Two recent Mercury releases have done an amazingly good job of capturing the spirit of the songs and of the meetings at which they are sung. The first is easily the most beautiful, for two young girls take part in the song-fest, adding an element of softness to the sometimes harsh lyrics. In addition, some songs are included here that are sung purely because they are beautiful folk songs and not because they have any message. Their version of "Cotton Eyed Joe" is one of the most charming and melodious ever recorded.

Editorial Approach

The second recording, without the girls' voices, is more editorial in approach, for it was recorded at the 4th Annual Conference of Snick at Atlanta last Spring. The approach, as the change in initials suggests, is more powerful and much more satiric. It includes a speech by John Lewis, explaining the aims of the conference.

It is a fiery, crowd-pleasing talk that set the mood for the Mississippi Project and for the songs on the program. There is a sad song, based on the old frontier song "Jesse James," entitled "They Laid Medgar Evans in His Grave." And the anthem of the Mississippi Summer Project, "We'll Never Turn Back." But, in most of the songs, there is a biting kind of laughter that pokes fun at the absurdities of segregation.

It is there "I'm A Demonstrating G.I. from Fort Bragg," focusing on the fact that Negroes in the military can die fighting for freedom on foreign shores but not in their own Southland. Again it is represented in "Oginga Odinga" in which the Snick singers tell how they got the "truth" about conditions in the Atlanta area to an African diplomat on tour of the area.

But by far the funniest and most effective is one with the unlikely title of "The Student Non-Violent Coordinating Committee." Out of this unpromising start, the Freedom Singers move into an uproarious and strangely beautiful story of a grandfather of the 1990's attempting to explain the events of the 1960's to his grandchild. The laughter of the crowd at the inability of this child of the hopeful future to understand the terror and forces at play in our era is hopeful and wholehearted.

It seems to be a statement on the part of these young people that these things will come to be.

As these skillful singers once again emphasize, the folk music traditions are far from dead, though dguj in a constant state of change. Until the answer to the question "Would you want one living next door?" can be answered with "Which one?", these songs will be sung, the demonstrations and boycotts will continue. Until each of us can overcome his ignorance and fear and look upon each Negro as an individual American, these songs and singers, and what they represent, will influence our lives.

Marcellino's Whistling Provides Good Background Music

BY MARY CAMPBELL
AP Newsfeatures Writer

In the mood for music as easy on the ears as Jackie Gleason instrumentals or Bing Crosby's ba-ba-bo-boo? Then try Muzzy Marcellino's "Whistling on the Beach at Waikiki." (Coral)

Muzzy Marcellino is known to daytime radio and TV listeners because he is musical director of Art Linkletter's "House Party."

He also whistles, and dubbed the whistling in the movie and best-selling record, "The High and the Mighty."

That song is included on this album. The rest of the songs are Hawaiian—"Hawaiian Wedding Song," the cheerful "The Hukilau Song," "Song of the Islands," "Aloha Oe," etc.

This isn't amateur night, with trilling stunts of virtuosity; it's calm and relaxed enough for background music; melodic and interesting enough to concentrate and listen to.

Live Recording

A good lively live recording is the two-LP set, "Peter, Paul and Mary in Concert." (Warner Brothers.)

If you're a fan of this top urban-folk trio, you'll enjoy this because it has some new material and if you don't have a P-P-&M album, this is a dandy one to get.

They sing some of their hits—"Blowin' in the Wind," "If I Had a Hammer," "Puff (the Magic Dragon)." They're good when they're serious—"One Kind Favor;" they're good when they're funny—Paul does a hilarious monologue. And they generate almost as much fun with a sing-along "Rocka My Soul" as Harry Belafonte does with "Matilda."

Some more of our adult singers are singing for the kids. Dean Martin's new album, "Everybody Loves Somebody," begins with the top-10 single and Frank Sinatra and Count Basie's new "It Might As Well Be Swing," includes "I Can't Stop Loving You." (both Reprise) Ella Fitzgerald's new "Hello Dolly!" album has her doing "Can't Buy Me Love." (Verve)

We feel like the women in "Li'l Abner" when they sang "Put 'Em Back the Way They Was." But we can't really argue with the market—us old folks just don't buy enough records.

Stars Speak

From the 1930s, there are two new releases—"The Young Chevalier" (Capitol) and "Garbo!" (MGM).

This is the music hall Chevalier, songs all in French and none of his trademark songs like "Louise" and "Mimi."

One song, "Dites-Moi, Ma Mere," must have been recorded in the very early '30s; the voice is fast and anonymous, jerking along like an early film.

But the rest are Chevalier at his jaunty best.

The music is so appealing that this album has much more than nostalgia value.

Dramatic scenes from movie soundtracks. (1930-39) make up "Garbo!" Reproduction is good, but occasionally scratchy enough to remind the listener that it really is from 30 years ago. Garbo plays opposite Melvyn Douglas, John Gilbert, the young voices of Robert Taylor and Clark Gable.

Her own voice has great emotional depth. We couldn't believe how much she put into "I don't even know your name," said to John Barrymore in "Grand Hotel," and had to play it again.

Not Sentimental

An LP titled "America, I Hear You Singing," (Reprise) sings praise of America without getting sticky sentimental. Fred Waring and his Pennsylvanians, sometimes joined by Bing Crosby or Frank Sinatra or both, sing such lovely things as "The Hills of Home," "This Land Is Your Land" and "Give Me Your Tired, Your Poor."

The two official children's albums from the World's Fair are "Jump to New York on a Pogo Stick" and "Hop to the Fair." (Pied Piper) Each of these is three seven-inch flexible 33 1/2 r.p.m. records with grooves on one side. Each disc weighs 1/8 of an ounce; each contains two or three little songs written by Ruth and Russ Alben of New York.

We were not charmed.

Table for two

Cooking for two is fun, whether the cook is a bride, a bachelor girl or an older woman out to please her husband now that their family is grown and scattered. When there are just two to be served there's time for those little extras that make mealtime a happy time. Planning ahead a little is important . . . it takes the hurry away from last minute meal preparation and makes the decor . . . candles can match flower arrangements . . . linens and tableware can be just right to suit the occasion.

STUFFED CORNISH GAME HENS

- 1 cup finely rolled Triscuit wafer crumbs
- 2 tablespoons butter
- ½ cup chopped walnuts
- 1 tablespoon grated lemon rind
- ½ cup chopped prunes
- ½ teaspoon salt
- 1 teaspoon ground allspice
- 1 teaspoon ground marjoram
- ¼ cup cranberry juice cocktail
- 1 teaspoon ground ginger
- 2 frozen Rock Cornish hens, thawed
- Melted butter

Mix wafer crumbs with next nine ingredients. Stuff hens; truss. Place birds on rack in shallow pan; roast in preheated 350-degree oven about one hour. Brush with melted butter; baste occasionally while cooking.

CHICKEN LIVERS en CASSEROLE

- 1 pound chicken livers
- ¼ cup butter
- ¼ teaspoon ground black pepper
- 1 large bay leaf, crumbled
- 1 tablespoon instant minced onion
- 1 can mushroom crowns, drained
(4-ounce can)
- 1 can stewed tomatoes, slightly drained
(1-pound can)

- 1½ cups Chicken-in-Biscuit crackers, finely rolled
- 1 pkg. frozen mixed vegetables

Saute chicken livers in butter. Add remaining ingredients, except two tablespoons cracker crumbs reserved for topping. Mix well. Cook over medium heat five minutes, stirring occasionally. Pour into 1½-quart casserole; add crumb topping. Bake in 350-degree oven one hour. This recipe makes about four servings.

HAM en CROUTE

- 1 cup finely rolled onion cracker crumbs
- 1 cup all-purpose flour
- ½ cup shortening
- ¼ cup cold water
- 1 canned ham
(1½-2 pound)

Mix crumbs with flour. Cut in shortening; stir in cold water to form a very stiff dough. Turn out on a heavily floured board; roll into a rectangle about 8 by 12 inches. Remove gelatin and fat from ham. Place ham in center of pastry; fold pastry over ham. Invert on shallow baking pan. Flute edges of crust if desired and prick with fork on top and on sides. Bake in hot oven (400 degrees) for 50 minutes or until brown. Serve hot or cold. Recipe makes four servings.

A lovely, elegant candlelit dinner for two features roasted Rock Cornish game hens stuffed with a moist dressing of wafer crumbs, chopped prunes and walnuts. Brussels Sprouts are cooked just before the meal and the simple but colorful tomato-cottage cheese salad may be prepared ahead of time.

Two 'Swingers' Star for Circus

GREEN BAY—Elephants are intriguing. Tigers are dramatic. Dogs are cute. And clowns are fun.

But the real circus excitement is a pretty girl swinging perilously on a trapeze or rope high above the center ring.

Two of the prettiest and most talented young girls in all circusdom, each with her own unique specialty unequaled anywhere in the entertainment world, will be playing peek with the rafters of Green Bay's Brown County Veterans Memorial Arena Friday, Saturday and Sunday, Oct. 2, 3 and 4, when Ringling Brothers Barnum and Bailey Circus returns to northeastern Wisconsin for the first time in four years.

Famed Fathers

Both girls, known professionally as Miss Chrys and La Toria, are just two years out of high school but are living up to circus tradition by following paths cleared by famed fathers.

Miss Chrys has the most hair-raising act of the two. She juggles a variety of objects and spins hoops on her arms and legs while hanging by her hair from the top of the arena.

La Toria, unlike Miss Chrys' strength of hair, has strength of arm as she hangs from a suspended ring with one arm and executes a minimum of 100 overarm, complete swings of her body.

For Chrys, a beautiful brunette with hair three-feet long, hanging by an unsuspecting part of her anatomy is not strange. Her father, Bert Holt, is famous throughout the world for his juggling and hoop spinning while hanging by his teeth.

La Toria, a dazzling blonde, must have also gained her strength from her father, the famed Unus, the man who stands on his forefinger.

Family Secret

Miss Holt, 21 years old and 128 pounds, admits that her scalp and the back of her neck get a little sore after each performance "but I'm getting kind of used to it."

Exactly how her hair is prepared for her performances is a family secret that Chrys coyly says she doesn't "really know because my mother does my hair."

What is revealed, though, is that her hair is braided into two loops. One is a safety loop in case the other one gives. The loops are then fastened onto a hook at the end of a wire which is used to hoist her into the air. It takes six men to pull her to the top of the arena and any sudden jerk could remove Chrys' scalp from Chrys.

It would seem that headaches would be one of the occupational hazards of this job.

"No, I never get headaches any more," Chrys smiles, "and if I did, all I would do is take an aspirin. And I'm not going to tell you what shampoo I use. That's not any help when I'm playing up there anyway."

Vicky Unus, which is La Toria's real name, does not have the mystery about her act that Miss Chrys does. Her act is clearly amazing. Just 20 years old, La Toria has been featured in a number of national magazines and TV shows, including the Ed Sullivan Show.

Circus people call her the greatest exponent of the plange, the term used for her mid-air cartwheels done to the cadence of a booming drum and count-off of the ringmaster, since Lillian Leitzel.

And it's dangerous. Miss Leitzel was killed when she dropped from her rope during a performance.

These two sensational artists, along with scads of others, will put on six shows during their Green Bay stay at 4:30 p.m. and 8 p.m. on Friday, 11 a.m., 2 p.m. and 8 p.m. on Saturday and 5 p.m. on Sunday.

Warren

Important Rulings Made Him Center of Struggle

BY BEM PRICE

WASHINGTON (AP) — There are billboards, scattered along some of the nation's highways which exhort:

"Impeach Earl Warren!"

Earl Warren is, of course, the 13th Chief Justice of the United States, a three-time Republican governor of California and the Republicans' 1948 vice presidential candidate.

He is also head of the commission investigating the assassination of President John F. Kennedy, and personally heard dozens of witnesses. The report of the commission is expected shortly.

Solemn Duty

Warren took this assignment, perhaps one of the most solemn duties he will ever perform, only at the insistence of President Johnson.

Warren was 73, eligible for retirement from the Supreme Court at full salary of $35,000 annually, when the President assigned him the task. Warren accepted, though it violated his own firm belief that Supreme Court justices should not take outside assignments.

As for the highway signs, they are indicative of the deep controversy which Warren and the court he has headed for 11 years has stirred among countless Americans.

Criticism

Hotly defended as a protector of individual rights against the encroachment of authority, Warren and the court have been just as hotly criticized as, among other things, "being soft on Communism," usurping the legislative powers of Congress, and basing decisions on emotion and sociological findings rather than on legal fact.

Two decisions which fostered bitterness against Warren were the decision ten years ago ordering desegregation in schools and another the following year which declared that desegregation must be accomplished "with all deliberate speed."

In both cases, the rulings were unanimous.

No Impeachment

There is little likelihood that Warren will be impeached. Even the John Birch Society, which has been a leader in the movement, doesn't expect it to happen.

Says John Rousselot, official spokesman for the society:

"Actually, we know Earl Warren won't be impeached by the Senate. What we want is a trial there as provided by the Constitution that will result in re-establishing where the legislative authority resides — in Congress, not in the courts."

Middle Roader

While arousing the ire of rightist groups, Warren has always considered himself a man of the center in politics. He has described his philosophy as "progressive conservatism," and while he was in politics he urged the Republican party to repudiate "extremists of the right."

Warren's views once prompted President Harry S. Truman to say, "He's really a Democrat and doesn't know it."

That some men would disagree vehemently with the court's interpretation of the Constitution was foreseen long ago by the fourth chief justice, John Marshall, when he wrote:

"A constitution is framed for the ages and is designed to approach immortality as nearly as human institutions can approach it. Its course cannot always be tranquil. It is exposed to storms and tempests."

Staunch Advocate

But whatever can be said of the present court — called the most important in the last 100 years — several things appear quite clear:

It has been a staunch advocate of individual freedom, including the freedom to dissent; it has been a vigorous foe of governmental encroachment upon those freedoms, and a notable number of decisions in important cases have been unanimous.

The court has made it quite plain it feels that before the law, all men are equal, that none can claim privileges denied to others by reason of race, creed, or national origin.

Warren's concern with individual rights has been manifest in a number of opinions.

Warren Decisions

He has written: "The abhorrence of society to the use of involuntary confessions does not turn alone on their inherent untrustworthiness. It also turns upon the deep rooted feeling that the police must obey the law while enforcing the law; that in the end life and liberty can be as much endangered from illegal methods used to convict those thought to be criminals as from the actual criminals themselves.

And again: "The privilege against self-incrimination is a right that was hard earned by our forefathers. The privilege was generally regarded then, as now, as a privilege of great value, a protection to the innocent through a shelter to the guilty, and a safeguard against heedless, unfounded or tyrannical prosecutions."

In the 11 years, come Oct. 5, Warren has served as chief justice, few men in judicial history have been damned and denounced quite as much.

New Term

The new term of court, opening Oct. 5, offers little promise of peace between the court and its critics. The court has agreed, as its first act of business, to review the public accommodations section of the new Civil Rights Act.

The particular case involves the harrangue of negroes from the Heart of Atlanta Motel in Atlanta, Ga., and, by extension, the Pickrick Restaurant, also in Atlanta, which closed its doors rather than serve Negroes.

Later, the court also has on its docket a case from Florida in which a white woman was fined for living with a man described as a Negro. A decision in this case will affect miscegenation laws in all Southern states.

In still another case, the court will decide whether states are barred by the Constitution from using trespass laws to keep negroes from business establishments.

Counter-Attack

In the days when Warren was a practicing politician an attack would have brought a devastating counter-attack.

"A senator or a governor," he once told an interviewer, "may explain or defend his position publicly but not members of the Supreme Court. We can't be guided by what people think or say, except in legal discussion. We can't be guided by public appraisal. If we did, we'd be deciding cases by other than legal means."

If the white-haired Warren is perturbed by any of the criticism it rarely shows. He still turns a sunny smile upon the world and finds refuge amid the highly partisan crowds at football and baseball games where he carefully refrains from booing the umpires.

On one occasion, however, when he was asked whether he sometimes wished he might reply to attacks upon the court, he replied: "Oh, boy! Sometimes it makes you cringe, to see what other people say and write."

Vast Changes

There is no doubt that in the 11 years Warren has occupied the highest judicial post in the land, the court has set in motion vast changes through its majority opinions — opinions which go to the root of American life.

It has ruled that: "Legislatures represent people, not trees or acres" and hence state legislatures should be apportioned on the basis of population.

States may not segregate school children on the basis of race, color, creed or national origin.

The Fifth Amendment's protection against self-incrimination applies to state as well as federal courts.

Indigent persons are entitled to legal representation provided by the courts in both state and federal jurisdictions.

Bible reading and state-composed prayers as required exercises in public schools clash with the Constitution's guarantee against governmental interference with religion.

Racial imbalance in schools does not violate the Constitution.

A federal law denying passports to Communists was unconstitutional on its face.

Many Cases

These were just some of the decisions which stirred the passions of some men throughout the nation. In the last session alone, the court reviewed 2,410 cases — highest in the court's history.

One decision of the past session which aroused wide reaction, mainly among politicians, was the ruling that state legislatures must be apportioned on the basis of population.

What this decision does, in effect, is to end rural domination of state legislatures.

The House of Representatives has already passed and sent to the Senate a proposal which would strip the federal courts of jurisdiction in apportionment cases. The bill, by Rep. William Tuck, D-Va., would leave intact the Supreme Court's ruling that both houses of a state legislature must be apportioned on a population basis. But it would give the court no enforcement powers.

Little Chance

Senate Minority Leader Everett Dirksen, R-Ill., has given the Tuck measure little chance of passage in the Senate. Dirksen has his own measure which would delay enforcement of the reapportionment decision for a year or two.

Whether either the Dirksen or Tuck proposals can be acted upon in this session of Congress is problematical.

Warren also wrote the 1954 school desegregation decision. In that decision, which upset some 250 years of southern tradition, he declared:

"Education is perhaps the most important function of state and local governments. It is the very foundation of good citizenship.

"We conclude that in the field of public education the doctrine of 'separate but equal' has no place. Separate educational facilities are inherently unequal."

Become Law

But whatever the opposition, Supreme court decisions have a way of hardening into the law of the land. The passage of the 1964 civil rights legislation is indicative.

In all his 11 years on the bench, Warren has only once come close to answering the court's critics. That was in 1963 before the California Bar Association meeting at San Francisco.

In that speech Warren said the landmark cases of the past 10 years had been charged with emotion, but then so were decisions of the 1930s and 1940s.

Those earlier decisions, he said, "are now shorn of emotion and are a part of the settled jurisprudence of the nation."

Then Warren said:

"There are many people, and, I fear, some lawyers, who believe that whenever the court disapproves of some facet of American life, it reaches out and decides the question in accordance with its desires.

Normal Course

"We can reach for no cases. They come to us in the normal course of events or we have no jurisdiction. When they do come to us, we decide them or we do not do our duty."

As for those who say the court is invading the rights of states, Warren had this to say:

"Where the Supreme Court of a state is vigilant in its protection of constitutional rights, as is the supreme court of California, few differences arise between it and the Supreme Court of the United States."

Warren concluded that speech by saying:

"Too often we find people who believe fervently in that portion of the rule that protects them in their own sphere of activity but are intolerant of that portion which protects other people."

All Men

"When we say we have a government of laws and not of men, we mean, at the very least, that the law protects all men equally in their property and individual rights, regardless of their race, religion, color or wealth."

The lawyers cheered. To the baffled Warren, it must have been a rare balm.

De Gaulle Carries Dreams of Resurgent France Into New World on His Goodwill Tour of Latin America

BY RICHARD O'MALLEY

PARIS (AP) — President Charles de Gaulle, aiming at tightening old bonds and emphasizing that France is a country with world interests, lands in Caracas, Venezuela, Monday for the start of a 10-nation South American tour.

It is a part of De Gaulle's insistent program to reestablish France as a powerful global voice, intellectually and physically able to act in the world's affairs.

As one informed source puts it:

"Now that France has recovered from the war and is freed from colonial problems and the Algerian question, she can at least approach world problems and perhaps do something to help."

Another Choice

Practically, France is not in a position to offer great financial aid, and this is not De Gaulle's present plan. He wants to reopen avenues of communication between France and South America that were interrupted by World War II and never fully reestablished.

He also feels, informants say, that it is time South America had more than two choices: the United States or the Communist bloc. One said:

"He wants to show South American nations that they have the possibility of opening up their lines of communication with the outside world, unrestricted by only two choices."

Offer Aid

To further this program, De Gaulle is going to press for a marked increase in technical assistance to South American countries, with the accent on the human level, such as labor relations, planning and educational organization.

It is extremely doubtful any spectacular agreements will be signed during the trip. But De Gaulle plans to take economic soundings and see what, if anything, can be done to help. Such help, as now envisaged, would be offered by France, acting with her European allies.

Highly qualified sources emphasize that De Gaulle will not be seeking to weaken U.S. influence in South America, as plans now stand, he is not expected to say anything during his three-week, 50-speech trip which could be construed as a slight to the United States. Neither is he expected to say anything about Cuba's Fidel Castro.

No Change

Some circles believe that by urging a third avenue to South America, in which it is taken for granted the United States will continue to play its massive role, the net result will be implied rebuke of Castro.

But stripped of all its side-plans, such as offering technical assistance and tightening bonds,

De Gaulle's trip boils down to this:

He is going out to show the French flag in areas where it was once better known than it is today.

Dream France

It is the continuing process of a proud old man to create the France of his dreams, and points up again his supreme conviction that "France cannot be France without greatness."

Greatness, in this sense, means a spreading of French influence, a strengthening of the French voice in the world, a sort of international re-birth.

And so, despite his 73 years and a serious operation only last spring, Charles de Gaulle will take to the road to bring his message of the new France to South America.

Itinerary

It undoubtedly will be an exhausting trip, but all arrangements have been made to make it as easy as possible. He will break his travels at least twice and rest aboard the French cruiser Colbert, along the coast of Chile, and on a voyage from Montevideo to Rio de Janeiro.

After Caracas, his schedule calls for visits to Colombia, Ecuador, Bolivia, Peru, Chile, Argentina, Paraguay, Uruguay and Brazil, taking in all of South America except the three Guianas.

25 Years Witness Giant Strides in Discoveries

BY ALTON BLAKESLEE

WASHINGTON (AP) — Dr. Glenn T. Seaborg is a toweringly tall (6 feet 4) scientist who recalls well how things used to be back in the 1920s when he was a teen-ager.

Then was the time of crystal-set radios. A few homes with those newfangled "electric iceboxes." Model A Fords purring along to doom the model T's. Prohibition and "flappers" and the Charleston. Lindbergh trusting enough in a flying machine to drone across the Atlantic alone. Friends or relatives dying from pneumonia or blood poisoning and other "hopeless" infections.

It was also a time when ideas and discoveries were coming from men's minds and research to seed what Dr. Seaborg calls the Scientific Revolution.

That revolution began to blossom only 25 years ago.

Commonplace

Today the teen-ager accepts as commonplace such wonders as television in virtually every home. Tiny transistorized radios. Jet air travel. Hi-fi music. Polio vaccines. Antibiotics for when you're sick and soon well again. Wash-and-wear clothes. Astronauts zipping around the earth and taking aim on the moon. A-bombs and H-bombs and atomic power plants. Hair sprays and crabgrass sprays. Nearly instantaneous photography. An astonishing listing of things and controls and abilities undreamed of a generation ago. And these are only some first fruits.

"The Scientific Revolution is really only beginning," says Dr. Seaborg, Nobel laureate in chemistry, former chancellor of the University of California, now chairman of the United States Atomic Energy Commission.

Next 25 Years

In another 25 years, he speculates, teen-agers and adults may not quiver an eyebrow over having two-way wristwatch radios. Their own computers to aid their studies or to automatically translate foreign tongues into English. Vaccines against cancer. Dining on totally synthetic foods. Reading books from electronic libraries via closed-circuit television into their living rooms. Flying to Europe in one or two hours or taking skiing holidays in Antarctica. Wearing clothes of special material once or a few times and then throwing them away. Watching astronauts depart or return from Mars with nuclear-powered rockets. Being secure from hurricanes or tornadoes because scientists have learned how to prevent disastrous storms.

With all the good it is bringing, the breathless pace of the revolution is creating new social, economic and political problems, Dr. Seaborg says.

Many adults feel lost, unable to understand.

That feeling is not new. Even in the 1930s, there were proposals for a "moratorium on science" to allow time to digest and adapt to new discoveries and their implications.

Can't Stop

"But whether we like it or not, we can't stop this revolution," Dr. Seaborg believes. "If we tried to slow it down, we would run into serious difficulty. Our economy and standard of living would decline. So would our position in the world, and our ability to defend ourselves."

"Other countries, including the new young nations, know they must become part of this scientific age also."

In the field of education Dr. Seaborg hopes for better general courses to give non-science students an understanding of science.

Skill Demands

"More and more, the ability to hold a regular job will call for some skilled knowledge, with decreasing opportunities for unskilled workers."

The public generally "needs to get on speaking terms with science and technology. So many issues on which the public is being asked to pass judgment call for some knowledge of science — from questions of fallout and nuclear testing to decisions on how best, and how extensively, to support education and to support the research, basic and applied, on ponds."

Additionally, he says: "People must understand that science is inherently neither a potential for good or for evil. It is a potential to be harnessed by man to do his bidding. Man will determine its direction and its effects. Man, therefore, must understand science if he is to harness it, to live with it, to grow with it."

Draft Science

Lawyers were drafted into government service from the beginning of American democracy based on law and order, Dr. Seaborg says, and "now we must conscript science and technology into this service, too. We must bring the engineer and the scientist across the threshold and into the chambers where our national policy is created — not merely allow them to stand in the corridors where it is discussed."

The pressure of population growth calls for new ways, through science, of meeting human needs for food, housing, jobs, and sources of electrical or other energy, Dr. Seaborg says.

In 25 to 30 years, atomic power plants likely will be supplying half of the nation's tremendous need for electrical energy, he predicts.

Energy Source

"And I am optimistic that we shall ultimately solve the tricky problems of controlling the thermonuclear (H-bomb) reaction to produce electrical energy."

That would mean an inexhaustible source of energy, using hydrogen atoms in the oceans.

"Perhaps we will have found means by 1990 to 'farm' the seas for more food, and to 'mine' the oceans for abundant minerals."

"We can expect new materials with amazing qualities of strength, insulation and heat transmission. And we can look forward to great progress in treating the sick, the lame, the deaf and the blind, and in preventing or controlling mental illness. We should have a far greater understanding of the basic mysteries of life itself."

But such expectations may be overshadowed by the unpredictable, Dr. Seaborg adds.

For science consists in part of asking questions — and nature frequently has surprising answers.

U. S., Britain Open Pavilions At German Fair

BERLIN (AP) — The United States and Britain opened their pavilions at the West German industrial exhibition today. Spokesmen for both countries stressed the role being played in the exhibition by Latin America.

The ceremonies were led by U.S. Ambassador George C. McGhee and Robert Carr, British secretary for technical cooperation.

The U.S. exhibit is devoted mainly to machinery for speeding up house building.

Carr said he was impressed by the fact that 20 Latin-American countries were represented and had put on separate displays of their national products.

DEAR HELOISE:

To clean a man's felt hat, brush it with a foam-robbor powder puff, such as women use to put on make-up.

The soil comes off, the hat is clean, and all you have to do is wash the puff every now and then.

This is also the best method I know of to wipe suede shoes. There are no wire bristles to damage the leather.

Carl Camp

And it also works on women's slightly soiled felt hats. Not those which need professional cleaning and blocking.

STRAIGHT CANDLES

DEAR HELOISE:

I have discovered a new way to keep candles in their holders. Just cut a piece of nylon net the size and shape of a half dollar (the color can match your candle), and then place this in the candlestick. The candle will fit firmly inside, and no more wiggling!

Grandma

Gals, this works like a charm. Cut off any excess nylon net. Just cut a small enough circle to fit down into your candlestick. Great idea.

ARTIFICIAL FLOWERS

DEAR HELOISE:

I have some very lovely artificial flowers. A thought occurred to me to drop a bar of highly-scented soap into the vase (the bar may be left either whole or cut up in little pieces). I was amazed at the way the fragrance added "aliveness" to my attractive bouquet of artificial flowers!

B. A. C.

THREE-MINUTE SHINE

DEAR HELOISE:

When boiling eggs, I always use the aluminum pot or pan which needs cleaning the most and add one teaspoon of cream of tartar to the water!

The cream of tartar removes the dark marks from the aluminum pot, and my eggs are boiled both in one operation. The cream of tartar does not harm the eggs.

Matilda

MAGNETIC RECIPES

DEAR HELOISE:

Attaching a clothespin to the inside of a cabinet door (or on the top of your recipe box) is an excellent idea for holding recipes when baking. However, I have an even better idea:

Those who have magnetic door-catches on their cupboards can put a paper clip on the recipe card and it will "stick" to any of the magnets. Use the cupboard nearest your working area.

Olivia

HOME PRESERVES

DEAR HELOISE:

When I make jellies and jams I melt paraffin for covering jelly in an old coffee pot. This holds the wax beautifully, is easy to melt and is easily poured.

Belle Henderson

SAVE DIPLOMA!

DEAR HELOISE:

To preserve wedding certificates, high school diplomas and college diplomas, just save the tubes from foil or waxed paper, roll the document carefully, and insert it in the tube!

I have some documents which I have kept this way for years.

Label each tube on the outside so you can refer to them without having to remove the contents of the others.

Kansas

DEAR HELOISE:

If you should break the creamer of your good set of dishes, use the sugar bowl for a mayonnaise dish. It will be real attractive and you will love it. The lid on the sugar bowl makes a good cover and keeps the mayonnaise from drying out.

Mrs. P. D.

SHOWER ROD TIP

DEAR HELOISE:

Do you hate the squeak when you pull the shower curtains aside? Nerve-racking, isn't it? Here's how to solve the problem.

Take a small amount of petroleum jelly or an old bar of soap and rub it across the top of the metal bar and the sides of the curtain rods. Result: Squeak-free curtains and steady nerves.

S. L. M.

DIAPER PINS

DEAR HELOISE:

If you have safety-pin trouble and a baby, here's a hint:

Take an ordinary key chain, fasten it on your bathinette, and just snap your pins to the key chain. Be sure the chain is safely out of baby's reach. You will always be able to find the diaper pins.

Carolyn Callison

USE OLD NYLONS

DEAR HELOISE:

Old nylon stockings make excellent containers for moth balls, crystals and repellents. The stockings can be tied in a knot and adjusted to any length for hanging on the wall or a coat hanger, and the thin nylon allows the fumes to escape.

If your children are sensitive to rough-textured wool sweaters, line the sleeves with discarded nylon stocking legs. This also serves to reinforce the elbows, making the sweater last longer.

When refinishing furniture or woodwork, you can make sure the surface which you have sanded is completely smooth by pulling an old nylon stocking over your hand and rubbing the surface with it. If there are any rough spots, they will make themselves known because the stocking will snag.

Blanche Campbell

CROCHET TRICK

DEAR HELOISE:

I use my sewing machine with a large needle... no thread... to sew around scarves to be finished with a crocheted edge.

The small crochet needle slips right into the little holes made by the big needle of the sewing machine. Very neat trick.

Uncle Jack's Garden Diary

BY UNCLE JACK

Professional duties this year provided the opportunity for travel from coast to coast in this beautiful country of ours, with some impressions resulting that may interest fellow enthusiasts of gardening as a hobby.

A casual windshield assessment, persuades me that the petunia, zinnia and geranium, for example, and probably in that order, are by all odds America's favorite flowers for borders and plant boxes. There may be exceptions, as in the deep South, but in the representative states of the country where I took my visual poll, these are the popular favorites by a long margin—even as they probably were in Grandmother's time.

Plastic Flowers

The peripatetic gardener, however, occasionally finds some things that horrify. There was a sight in an otherwise attractive little town in central Pennsylvania that lingers in my memory. Plastic flowers planted in neat containers in front of a motel, no less! It was very nearly enough provocation to persuade us to try another hostelry. But the highways were crowded, the day was growing late.

Random observations: as highway engineers know, one of the financial penalties of the big freeways and divided toll roads now being built in the country at an accelerated pace is the cost of maintenance of the broader right-of-way and dividing strips including the mowing of the grass. Except for California which has advantages in climate; my personal nomination for the best-kept major road observed this summer was the Indiana turnpike. The foreman there has the soul of a gardener, or, perhaps, a greens committee chairman.

The drought which disappointed many a backyard dirt dabbler in Wisconsin this year afflicted most of the other states of the Midwest and the Northeast. New Jersey, the Garden State by its own appellation, provides attractive rural vistas, largely because of the extensive orchard enterprises there. In states with less arduous winter climate than Wisconsin, highway departments are increasingly using ground cover plants as substitutes for grasses on embankments associated with bridges, highway separations and other structures, with visually appealing results and apparently lower cost management.

Outdoors Wisconsin Shrubs Belonging to Aristocratic Heath Family Bear Classical Names

BY CLARA HUSSONG

Cassandra, Andromeda, Rosemary and Laurel are all aristocratic names. They are the names of shrubs in the aristocratic heath family, most of which blossom in late May. These four as well as many more, are found in Wisconsin, mostly in northern areas.

Most plants of the heath family grow in cold bog where the soil is moist and acid. One good place to look for these shrubs is at the Ridges Sanctuary at Baileys Harbor. Mossy, boggy edges of northern lakes have these plants too, and so do mossy hollows overgrown with cranberries, spruce trees and other plants.

A number of heaths have thick evergreen leaves, that is, the leaves winter over and are replaced the next spring or summer by new leaves. Heath species with such leaves are Cassandra, cranberry, laurel, Labrador tea and Andromeda.

White Blossoms

Cassandra, which is also called "leather-leaf," has white blossoms which droop down in a single row underneath the stem. One of the more common of the state's heath shrubs, it is often found on floating bogs of small northern lakes.

Andromeda, also known as bog or wild rosemary, has long, slender leaves whose edges curl in, or under. The undersides of the leaves are blue-white. Its white or pale pink blossoms occur in clusters, and are shaped like bells which are almost closed.

Labrador tea is conspicuous because of its starry clusters of white flowers, and the rusty or orange undersides of its leaves. In this plant the leaf edge is rolled under too. Blossoms and leaves of this plant were once made into a tea to alleviate the pain of rheumatism and arthritis.

The only species of laurel to be found in the state is pale laurel, also called swamp laurel and bog laurel. It resembles the southern laurels, but is smaller with few branches. Its deep rose flowers are easily recognized as laurel blossoms because of their joined, fluted petals.

Curved Stamens

Botanists are interested in the laurel, because of the way it expels its pollen. The curved stamens hold the pollen at the bottom of the flower cup. When a bee or other small insect enters the flower, the stamens uncurl and explode the pollen all over the insect. Look for this interesting flower toward the end of May in sphagnum bogs.

Other shrubby heaths include bearberry, which grows in dry, sandy places, huckleberry, blueberry and cranberry. Smaller plants with only half-woody stems are arbutus, pipsissewa and wintergreen.

The heath family also includes a number of wildflowers without woody stems. Among them are shun-leaf, and at least seven varieties of pyrolas. Many of them can be found at the Ridges, where they blossom in June.

Love for Perfect Specimen Motivates Dog Enthusiasts

A Sturdy Pointer

BY BUD LARIMER

We turn now and trudge back and back—really to a different era, a different way of life. But one thing there seems the same as it is today, whole-hearted enthusiasm and love for a perfect specimen of a dog.

There in 1936 Germany and her dog show crowds, native and visitors, were discussing warmly a new star on the show horizons, a young fraulein who later became the famous and, by the older Doberman enthusiasts, remembered as Ch. Jessy Vd. Sennenhohe.

She was sired by Cherloc V Rauhfelsen, who was a much used and successful sire in Germany at that time. He was later sold to a breeder in Milan, Italy, and quickly achieved the Award of Highest Merit there. He was strongest in his bitch get, and besides Jessy, other famous offspring were Gretl V. Klienlesberg, later owned by Bert Dow of Davenport, Iowa, and two daughters who remained in Germany—Julia V Silbergrund and Blanka V. Hebelgruft.

Jessy's dam was little shown, but was a fine specimen of good disposition, and was a rare producer whenever bred.

Brief Visit

In the summer of 1936, F. H. Fleitmann, New York, N.Y., paid a brief visit to Germany, and friends there were as one as they praised the excellence of that recent grand champion, said to be the finest seen in years. Mr. Fleitmann was much interested and eager to see her in action, but his 1936 visit was too brief.

Returning to Munich in 1937, he was present at the Sieger Show, where Jessy again won the grand championship, at that time establishing a record for bitches. After a certain amount of chaffering, he became the owner of Jessy and sailed for the United States immediately, that she might be entered forthwith at Morris and Essen.

Still not perfectly reconditioned from her long journey, she paced into the ring proudly to take best of breed, best working group and was barely ousted for best in show by an equally noteworthy English setter, Ch. Sturdy Max.

In the six shows at which she was shown, hard upon her American citizenship, she was best of breed at all, won four groups and two best in shows.

She was said to have an exceptional head and expression, superlative development and a showy gait. She was large for a bitch, and had a fine type of coat and markings. In December, 1937, she was bred to Ch. Kurt Vd. Rheinperle. This dog was the grandson of Germany's top sire, Helios V. Siegestor. Jessy was also a granddaughter of Helios through her sire and a great granddaughter through her dam. Many Doberman greats resulted from this breeding and several of her later ones.

Mr. Fleitmann's Far Hills, N.J., kennels was very well known in those years, and his "stable" of winners impressive.

In this recent spate of "looking back" that we have been indulging in, we seem to have concentrated rather too abundantly on the bench and ring group. Here now for your bird-dog field trial old timers are some equally bright stars among fast going, staunch pointing setters and pointers. Do some of you remember a few, perhaps seen some of them run a heat or two, or even hunted yourself over or trialed under your own handling one of their scions?

In the English setters, the backbone of the breed is the various Gladstone and Count Noble combinations. Later came Roderigo, Ch. Mohawk, the Whitestone strain. Boaz, Eugene's Ghost, Roger de Coverly and countless other stars of slightly lesser light.

Then the dashing English pointers—Fishel's Frank, Manitoba Rap, Hard Cash, Alford's John, Rip-Rap, Comanche Frank, John Proctor, oh so many other flashing figures that quartered the fields of long ago—and part of their blood and heart still run for some of us today!

Sometime soon we would like to do more than just touch the peaks of the field trial greats, including too the Irish and Gordon setters. Above all, we would like to comment on and describe a bit, that Holy Mecca of all who are bird-dog men, the Grand Junction, Tenn., United States Field Trials!

Burt Takes Credit for Burton's Roles

BY JAMES BACON

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—A lot of people may think that Elizabeth Taylor made Richard Burton one of the highest paid international stars.

Actually, Burt Lancaster can take some of the credit.

Before "Cleopatra," Burton's price per picture was $150,000. He recently replaced Lancaster in "The Spy Who Came in From the Cold" at $750,000 plus 20 per cent of the gross.

Rise to Riches

Lancaster, a friend of Burton's, reveals this facet of Burton's rise from able actor to box office personality.

"Walter Wanger first approached me to do Marc Antony in 'Cleopatra.' He told me he had Elizabeth set for the title role.

"But there was no script—just an English translation of an Italian high school history of Cleo. I turned him down. I wasn't interested in doing a spectacle anyhow.

Vetoed 'Sandpiper'

"Then John Huston approached me to do 'Night of the Iguana' but I turned that down because I figured it another 'Elmer Gantry.' There's no fun in this business if you keep doing the same parts all the time.

"Then 'The Sandpiper' was offered me. I turned that down too. Richard is doing that one with Liz.

"I liked 'The Spy' but it has to be shot in Europe and I don't want to leave home. So I told Marty Ritt that while I believed it should be shot abroad, he would have to get himself another boy."

'Car-Riding Day, 1906,' Called On Family's Mechanical Skill

BY CHARLES HOUSE

Post-Crescent Staff Writer

Today you are a pioneer; You have a pioneer car and it is Sunday—"car-riding day," 1906.

Your father hurried home from a church and donned working clothes. You go out to the barn (there are no garages) to tinker with the engine and to hand-pump the seven tires full of air.

Your pop doesn't know much about cars because almost nobody does. But he takes the hub caps off and he lobs some grease into them. He puts them back on and then lifts the cushion from the front seat. He unscrews the gas tank cap, takes a magnificent gulp of air. Then he bends over the tank and blows a mighty blast into it.

"That," he says, "will clear out the gas line." Maybe so.

You help him crawl around under the car, each of you with a gob of heavy grease on a flat stick—a splintered shingle, maybe. Then, by his direction, you open the grease cups one by one. You force grease into the cup with the end of the stick, then you close the flap and move on to the next one.

Knows Little

You don't dare to do anything without your dad's direction; he likes to feel that he knows everything there is to know about the horseless carriage. But he really doesn't

Your mother comes to the barn door and calls in.

"Is it almost ready?" she asks.

Your father stands up, wipes his hands on a greasy cloth, cocks his head expertly, calculatingly, at the auto.

"I'd say another 20 minutes," he guesses. Mother returns to the house to get the other kids ready and to dress for the journey.

Your dad checks the gas line again to determine whether it is leaking. Then he examines the brake rods and the steering mechanism. Now he oils the springs and studies the clutch.

"Ready, dad?" you ask.

"One more job," he says. He raises the hood by lifting a pair of hooks which hold the hood flap down. He opens the carburetor and peers at it intently for a moment. Then he steps aside, gallantly.

"You want to do 'er?" he asks. And you feel proud.

You come up close, bend over and you spit into the carburetor. He smiles, tells you you did well, then closes the carburetor and the hood.

'Ready to Roll'

"Tell your mother we're ready to roll," he orders.

Mother is ready. She wears a duster which covers her from chin to feet. Her motoring hat is tied down with a scarf. She is wearing goggles.

The kids are dressed nicely from the waist up, because people can see that part of them in the car. They wear older clothes from the waist down where most of the dust will settle. Dad puts on his duster, his hat, his goggles, and he goes to the steering wheel.

He pulls down the lever on the right side of the steering column.

"That," he announces, "is the gas." He pushes the lever up, on the left side. "That," he tells you, "is the spark."

He fiddles a little, adjusting. The spark lever is placed on the third notch; the gas lever is well down.

You and your family shove the car out of the barn by hand and push it so it faces the right direction. Now is the time!

Everybody climbs in. There is a wonderful minute or two of exhilaration. Will the car start? Dad turns the key.

He walks importantly to the front. He hooks the index finger of his left hand in a wire loop, tugs on it a bit, tentatively. Now he places his right hand on the crank, his thumb along the forefinger and not around the crank handle. (If the engine "kicks,"

Wisconsin was once burdened by an "epidemic" of trails laid out and marked by promotional organizations.

The trails movement spread throughout the United States from 1911 to 1917, and because they were unofficial, there was no restraint on the number or the kind that were marked and routed, usually for commercial reasons.

Promoters sought subscriptions from towns or villages through which they laid their "trails," and one result was that many of the marked routes led nowhere in particular and often over extremely bad roads.

The first trail laid in Wisconsin was the Lake to River Road, from Milwaukee to Prairie du Chien and to LaCrosse. Later, there were others laid out and marked—the Yellowstone Trail, Black and Yellow Trail, the Grant Trail, the Red Ball Trail, and many others.

By 1916, there were so many trails as to cause confusion. This led the State Highway Commission to seek laws prohibiting the marking of any trail without approval of the Commission. The law was passed in 1917, and today it is illegal to erect or display any guide or warning signs on the highway system except in case of emergency or when approved by the commission.

dad will get a "Ford Fracture" as the crank jumps from his hand and strikes his forearm, breaking the bone). Now dad lifts the crank to the right, shoves it in to give it purchase, then he pushes down on it quickly. He pulls out the wire choke and you hear a hissing sound.

He stands upright, comes around to the driver's seat, reaches in and retards the spark lever one notch. The gas lever up two. He returns to the front, sets the crank, pushes down. Again, again, again. The car hisses a little.

Crankes Quickly

Now he moves the crank handle around to the left so that he will be able to lift on it instead of push on it. He lifts quickly once, twice, three times. Then he stops, mops his brow.

"I'm going to spin 'er now, he says." And he spins it swiftly, seven or eight times. It coughs, sputters, trembles. There is a great, thunderous roar! The car creeps forward. Dad leans against it with his shoulder to hold it back for a moment until he gets his footing and a chance for a good running start.

Then he leaps out from the front of the car, runs to the side and clambers in while the car is creeping forward. He pulls down the spark lever, and he "adjusts" the gas lever so that it no longer roars like 10,000 devils.

He steps on the clutch pedal, slowly lets it out as he advances the gas lever. The car leaps forward—and we are almost en route.

Just at the end of the lane, Dad stops the car and shouts something to us. He's forgotten the tools. He decides to let the car "warm up" while he gets his boxes. He jumps from the car, puts two bricks in front of the rear wheels and runs back to the barn.

He returns with a tool kit for removing the tires, a vulcanizing kit to repair our tires. (We have three spares but they almost always get punctured on a long trip of 10 or 15 miles). He also has the tire pump, a dip-stick to measure the gasoline, a rope tow-line for emergency pull-outs if we get stuck in the mud. He throws them on the floor, runs back to the barn to get the ising-glass-leatherette side curtains, tosses them in, too.

Then he mounts to the seat, advances the gas, engages the clutch and we are up and over the bricks which we leave there for another time. You are off—eight miles an hour! Behind you there rises a great cloud of dust. You can no longer see your house through the dust cloud, but you look back anyhow. You like to watch behind because we go so swiftly! As we ride, we stow the tools and kits and curtains under the rear seat cushion.

At Platzer's hill, Dad turns the car around, pushes down the reverse pedal which is one of the three, and we back up the hill. You have never been able to go up that hill in the forward gear because then the engine is higher than the fuel tank and the gasoline, fed by gravity to the carburetor, will not flow up to the motor. We back up every steep hill, else the engine will stop and we will have to coast to the bottom of the hill, turn around and start the engine again. Therefore we go up in reverse.

Roar Onward

After we reach the top of Platzer's hill, we turn around and roar onward, forward. Dad points to the sky and butters. Rain clouds! But we ride on, and hope.

When the first raindrops fall we stop the car and all of us jump out. We lift up the back seat where we have stored the side curtains and everyone takes a portion. We race around the car, fitting the proper section to the proper part of the car.

We fit the holes in the curtains to the turnbuttons on the car, push them through, turn the buttons and—after 10 minutes of frantic work—we are all well soaked, but the curtains are up. We look out at the passing world (not dusty for a change) through the ising-glass windows as we ride.

Dad makes an announcement: "We have come nine miles," he said, "all that way and we haven't had a single blow-out or flat!"

We make it all the way home without a bit of tire trouble—first time in 14 months of Sunday driving that such a thing had happened.

"It's the roads," Dad tells us. "There are enough cars nowadays so that the roads are getting better because automobilists are causing their improvement. And," he said, "we had no engine trouble today, either. I think we'll all have to agree. We've got a very good automobile. This modern world—it's wonderful!"

WORLD OF BOOKS

Free-Lance Author Lashes Schweitzer

Verdict on Schweitzer. By Gerald McKnight. John Day. $4.95.

McKnight, a British free lance writer, has made no equal balance of pro and con in his study of Albert Schweitzer.

He starts with the premise that the jungle doctor is a legendary figure, and says "legend is rarely true to its subject even in the most inspiring cases." Then he proceeds to examine all aspects of the Schweitzer career from a very skeptical viewpoint. And while he concedes his subject has many virtues, he devotes most of his text to the techniques of debunking.

Questions Theology

He questions Schweitzer's theology and philosophy. He questions the importance of the doctor's books in those fields, as well as his writings on Bach, organs and other subjects. He challenges the doctor's motives in establishing the hospital at Lambarene, and repeats what critics and detractors have said about the lack of progress there. He casts doubt on the doctor's attitude toward his wife and daughter. He asserts "the benign dictator" gives little credit to his staff, and devotes a chapter to the theme that Schweitzer allows wealthy, but untrained, women to clutter up the hospital.

McKnight's methods are far from superficial. He cites many passages from Schweitzer's books and from books about the doctor. He visited Lambarene himself, and quotes many individuals who have worked with the doctor. He does knock down a few of the rumors about inefficiency in the hospital's operation, and gives rebuttal to some of the criticisms made by others.

But the whole trend of the book leads to a final chapter that is anything but favorable. It is a doubt-raising, image-breaking book.

Manhattan's Smart Set Is Satirized

Perdita, Get Lost. By Alan R. Jackson. Simon and Schuster. $3.95.

There was a time when the English had a monopoly on describing, against a background of London's smart set, the very foolish adventures of various young men—usually called Bertie or Freddie—who were endowed with more lucre than logic. So amusing, old chap.

Perhaps there is a Manhattan offshoot of this genre in Jackson's novel. For one of the three central figures is Jerrold (Jerry) Blake, a fortyish bachelor who keeps making shoals of money without trying, and divides his time between archeology and cafe society. (He has a butler, too.)

Blonde Receptionist

The others are Chan Cumings, a sweet (blonde) young thing who is a receptionist for an advertising agency, and Teddy Maitland, a copy apprentice for the same agency. The fun begins when they succeed in getting fired on the same day.

Terry becomes involved with a predatory fashion designer, Carla Fabricant, by the simple device of walking into her chauffeur-driven limousine. Chan, meanwhile, is taken for a whirl by "Uncle Jerry."

There is a bit of farce about a seven-foot statue shipped from Greece as a thank-you for Blake's financing of a dig. The rest of the comedy develops from Blake's misguided notion that he has to become a 20-year-old playboy to impress Chan.

BY KAY STANTON

Everyone likes to hear the invitation, "Come to my party!" But the work of planning a well-rounded party can sometimes take all the fun out of the party for the hostess. Now a publisher from Grand Rapids, Mich., offers the answer to party-planning with several practical books that provide fun-for-all, including the hostess.

Come to My Party. By Margaret Epp. 204 pp. Zondervan. $3.95.

A book of complete party plans — programs, games, decorations, even recipes. Planned with the average family in mind, the down-to-earth approach is welcome. Want to put on a Hawaiian holiday? An African safari? A Mexican fiesta? Do your ideas lean towards an art gallery? A music night? Or a newspaper party?

Perhaps you need help in planning a surprise party, an engagement party, or an autumn party. This author offers the best results for the least effort.

These are adult parties. The Mad Hatter party, for example, includes an "icebreaker" where guests make their own hats from newspapers, scissors and pins.

Suggested menu, invitations, decorations and entertainment are carefully detailed. The bonus is a "game" section; followed by recipes which include Grandmother's soup recipe which sounds like the local chicken booyah, and Schinkennudeln (German ham noodles), yeast breads and favorite candies.

Sound like fun? There's lots more in this book.

Encyclopedia of Party Ideas. By Lora Lee Parrott. 190 pp. Zondervan. $3.95.

An author, well-known for her cookbooks, here combines her talents for hospitality with her talents for making everyone welcome. Mrs. Parrott shows how everyone can have a good time by sharing with the reader some of the ideas she has used in her church work. She is the daughter of a minister and wife of a minister.

A total of 80 party ideas can be found, suitable for family gatherings or church groups. Perhaps you are planning a new members party, a senior citizens party, a missionary party, or a farewell party. Here are specific ideas. Or you may want help with a get-acquainted party, a pastor's birthday party, or a wedding anniversary.

Add to this ideas for showers, banquet themes, party recipes, and you have a lot for your money.

Food 'n' Fun Craft. By Eleanor Doan and Gladys McElroy. Zondervan. $1.95.

As the two editors say, "Food is not only fun to fix, but it is also—fun to serve—fun to eat—and fun to talk about!"

In a booklet printed on high-quality gloss paper, directions and illustrations are given for unusual ways to prepare party food. Specializing in hand-made decorations, centerpieces, favors and food prepared in decorative fashion, the author offers ideas which will get your party off to a good start.

For example, wieners adapt themselves to becoming cowboys, boatmen, and drivers of hot-rod cars. For birthday parties children will love Happy and Sad, the cookie twins. They will squeal with delight over the popcorn creations—snowmen, owls, witches and bells. Marshmallows make clever caricatures that beg to be eaten, whether ghost or penguin. Gumdrops are among the most versatile for making a covered wagon, a gumdrop girl and boy, or a hallowe'en scarecrow.

You may want to surprise your family with a gumdrop Christmas tree cookie, a frosted snowman. In February you may want to make a cherry tree log or red heart cake.

Many of these "fun with food" ideas are just the thing mother needs to tempt an appetite when children are convalescing, or hard to please. Service groups will find ideas for hospital tray favors. Ideas are year-round.

The Good Housekeeping Book of Cake Decorating. Edited by Dorothy B. Marsh. Barrows. $4.95.

Every well-planned party or celebration needs at least one wonderful, fanciful cake to display as a centerpiece and draw exclamations of admiration. The colored illustrations which grace 64 pages in this book show you just how your cake will look, plus many black and white drawings.

Everything you need to know can be found in these pages.

How to frost them . . . wonderful frosting recipes.

How to decorate them . . . detailed directions that make decorating easy.

Special Chapters

And . . . special chapter on fancy cookies and decorated cupcakes. For a hint of what you might find between these fascinating covers, look for sugarplum tree, old-woman-in-a-shoe, Peter Rabbit cake, or Raggedy Annabel cake.

For that special occasion, look for the "sweetest birthday" cake, or gala anniversary cake. There is a birthday basket cake for Mother and a celebrating Dad's Day cake just for him. Holidays are not forgotten.

Recipes for cakes and frostings, guaranteed perfect every time. Plus general pointers on how to fill and frost your cake, color frosting, tint coconut. How to use decorating tubes and sets. Instructions are definite, easy to follow.

For little folk and big folk—a cake for everyone, to make that "special day" extra special. A book to treasure for yourself; or to delight a bride as a gift.

Bing's New Burden Is 'Collins' Clan

BY EDGAR PENTON

HOLLYWOOD—For those who ask Bing why he finally decided to put himself through the weekly television grinder, he is ready with a selection of disarmingly simple answers such as:

"If that old geezer Bob Hope can do it, so can I."

"An actor has to act."

... "I like to work, and this is the kind of work I do."

He delivers these bland statements with a sangfroid that is pure Crosby, but we suspect there are underlying reasons of deeper significance.

Business Reasons

For one, an additional burden of work for The Groaner makes sense business-wise.

His new situation comedy series, ABC's "The Bing Crosby Show," is being filmed in juxtaposition to two of the company's other enterprises, "Ben Casey" and "Slattery's People," at the Desilu-Gower Studios in Hollywood.

Bing is performing on Stage 7, "Casey" is operating on Stage 8, and "Slattery" is politicking on 9 where "The Untouchables" schemed for several years.

Obviously, Bing thrives on the daily work schedule. A thorough pro, he is the first member of the troupe to show up each morning, neatly groomed, made up, and with his dialogue down pat.

Stevens Gethers, producer of the new series, says: "When I go onto the stage at the end of the day, Bing is usually doing a time step or singing up a storm, and, for my money, singing better than he has for 30 years."

"The man is fabulous. I find it hard not to act like a fan."

"When we started shooting, it bothered Bing that other members of the troupe—with the exception of his old pal Frank McHugh—stood in awe of him."

"Even the outgoing, poised and fun-loving Beverly Garland had difficulty the first day or so, adjusting to the fact that she was playing the wife of a man who is a living legend."

Happy Family

"But all that has passed, and bromidic as it may sound, this is now truly a happy 'Collins' family."

Beverly won the role after Gethers showed Crosby the segment from "The Farmer's Daughter" in which she played a career congresswoman who was about to have a baby by her architect-husband.

Beverly was then about to become the real-life mother of a daughter, Carington, by her builder-husband.

A bit nervous on her first meeting with Crosby, who was to be her engineer-husband in "The Bing Crosby Show," she blurted, "How have you bing, Been?"

In the general outline of the show, which was written by Gethers and had "sold" Bing on the idea of doing the series, he had word-drawn Bing Collins' wife, Ellie, as "lovely, vibrant—and untalented."

"I never realized my own genius for typecasting," says Gethers.

"Although Beverly is a skilled actress, we thought she was a bad singer—until we saw her dance. Bing breaks up every time she warbles or does a time step."

Producer-writer Gethers described Bing Collins' younger daughter, Janice, as "11 going on 35." How close he came to the thought processes of Diane Sherry, 10, is crisply illustrated by the red-haired youngster's remark when she tested with Crosby. She looked at him squarely and said, "I hope you get the part, Mr. Crosby."

As you can see, Diane is respectful but not overawed.

Carol Faylen, 16-year-old daughter of actor Frank Faylen, has some trouble overcoming her self-consciousness in Crosby's presence, but Bing seemed to solve that by tickling her before each take.

Memory Game

Frank McHugh, who plays Willie Walters, a wartime buddy of Bing Collins, spends every free moment on set playing a memory game with Bing Crosby, whom he has known for the past 30 years.

It's a standoff when they try to see who can best remember the names of obscure or famous vaudeville performers and the songs which identified their acts.

It's "Bing Collins" on ABC-TV's "The Bing Crosby Show." Beverly Garland, next to Bing, plays his wife. Carol Faylen, 16, and Diane Sherry, 10, are daughters. Frank McHugh is Bing's longtime buddy, who came to dinner 10 years ago—and lingered.

There probably has never been a half-hour situation comedy series on television that can boast such an array of musical talent (excluding Miss Garland) than the lineup for "The Bing Crosby Show."

Crosby's long-time director from radio days, John Scott Trotter, is on hand all day, every day, arranging the songs which will be sung in logical integration by The Groaner.

Also, the song-hit team of Sammy Cahn and Jimmy Van Housen have written the opening theme, "There's More to Life Than Just Living," and "It All Adds Up," the closing number.

Basically the series is about the Collins' family. Again, to quote producer-writer Gethers:

"In this day of preventive psychiatry, psychoanalysis, female mystique and calories that don't count, we are faced with the pleasant task of dealing with a happy family."

"In this half-hour situation comedy, Bing Crosby plays Bing Collins, a consulting engineer who couldn't make the grade economically, as a singer in his post-college days."

Deeply in Love

"He and his college sweetheart-wife are deeply in love after 20 years of married life, and they share the joys and problems of their two daughters in a spirit of camaraderie."

The fifth member of the family—though no relation—is Willie Walters. He and Bing met during the war and were drawn to each other by their mutual desire to take nothing too seriously.

Years later, Willie walked into Bing's engineering office at Taylor University, and tried to con him into developing the latest Walters invention.

He was invited to the Collins home for dinner, and, after 10 years he is still there.

Gethers adds another pertinent point: "In Bing Collins we have the antithesis of the typical television father who is stupid until the end of the play, at which time he becomes smart."

"Our television father will start out smart and wind up the same way."

Bing says, "What we set out to get was quality, and I guarantee we have achieved that. Above all, the shows are entertaining and, in some respects, quite sophisticated."

Guest stars will be used on occasion, but the only member of The Groaner's own family on the docket is Gary. Plans are already being made for a Christmas show, done in traditional family style.

Sheinwold on Bridge

Expert Relies on Judgment Instead Of Mere Memory

BY ALFRED SHEINWOLD

Fifteen or 20 years ago the bridge expert had an easy time because there were only experts and dubs; there were no good players.

If you played a match against average opponents you just sat back and waited patiently for the profits to roll in. Along would come a part-score hand, and your foolish opponents would somehow bid their way to an impossible slam. You could count on them to dig a pit and then fall into it on every fifth or sixth hand.

The 4-3-2-1 point count changed all that. It enabled any competent pair to tell when to stay below game, when to bid game, and when to press on to slam.

Today the expert's advantage in the bidding comes from knowing when to go beyond the basic rules. The expert relies on judgment instead of memory.

Developing Judgment

According to the old saw, judgment comes from experience and experience comes from making mistakes. To develop judgment, therefore, you must make mistakes. A short cut is available with the publication of "Morehead on Bidding," a book that should develop thousands of experts where only scores now exist.

Albert H. Morehead is the complete bridge writer. He played on the first teams to represent the United States International competition, he served as president of the American Contract Bridge League, he helped to write the laws of the game, and for 28 years he wrote the New York Times bridge column, read just as eagerly by his fellow experts as by the rank and file.

Nobody knows more about bridge than Morehead, and nobody writes as well. My personal reaction to his new book is that I wish I'd written it. My advice to others is to get it and read it twice in quick succession.

on the number and nature of the high cards held in the other suits," Morehead writes.

"To estimate the trick-winning value of his hand, the player must foresee the conditions that will obtain when the cards are actually played. The better the player, the more accurate the valuation; for he can foresee only those plays which he can actually execute."

No system of valuation could tell West what his cards were worth in the hand shown. Considered by itself, his hand was worth two aces and perhaps a club trick. As Morehead points out, West foresaw a far greater value when he played the hand "mentally" before a single card appeared on the table.

"Because of North's diamond bid and South's diamond raise, West expected his partner to have at most a singleton in diamonds. West could therefore open a diamond, regain the lead on the first round of trumps, lead a second diamond for his partner to trump, and get in once again with the ace of hearts to give his partner a second ruff.

"West's double was based on mental play of a most elaborate sort, tantamount to a play-by-play forecast."

Signals With Lead

West opened with the nine of diamonds, clearly a higher card than necessary. This was a signal to indicate that he preferred a return in a high suit rather than a low suit (hearts rather than clubs).

East ruffed the opening lead and duly returned the queen of hearts. South played low, and East continued with the jack of hearts. West took his ace and led the deuce of diamonds for East to ruff.

East returned a club, and South put up the ace and led a spade in the hope of cutting the ruffing down. It didn't help, for West was able to give his partner a third ruff and still got the king of clubs for the seventh defensive trick.

If West had not played the hand first in his mind, he might not have led a diamond—and this might have allowed South to make the contract. If West had made the right lead without thinking first, he would have collected only 400 points. The thought, and the double, increased this to 1100 points.

As Morehead points out, no system would teach anybody to double with the West hand or to make the killing opening lead. His book doesn't do your thinking for you, but it helps by suggesting the directions in which you can profitably think.

Refugees Pour Into Congo Fleeing Portuguese Angola

BY KENNETH L. WHITING

KIBENTELE. The Congo (AP) — This town on a dusty road in the western Congo has become a haven for a torrent of refugees fleeing an anti-rebel offensive and food shortages in Portuguese Angola.

Hungry and poorly dressed, the refugees stream across the border to relief agencies here to get their first bit of food in days. Some come with battle wounds.

The relief agencies say the flow has increased heavily in the past six months. There are no precise figures. Some member of Holden Roberto's Angolan exile movement say as many as half a million have left the Portuguese West African territory. Other sources estimate 300,000.

Upper Hand
Portugal appears to have the upper hand in the three-year guerrilla war in Angola. Insurgent leaders who find haven here admit Portuguese troops and planes apply steady pressure.

A Portuguese spokesman in Leopoldville said. Portugal's army was hampered in early stages of the fighting by lack of knowledge of the terrain.

"We now have the initiative and pursue rebels everywhere and in all seasons," he added.

Tens of thousands of refugees have slipped into the Congo since March. Civilians caught in areas where Portuguese forces are fighting guerrillas are treated brutally, refugees say.

"Most of them reach here suffering malnutrition," says David Grenfell, a 58-year old Baptist missionary who supervises a relief station.

Kibentele is about 23 miles from the Angola border in Congo Centrale Province. It is reached over 17 miles of twisting dirt road from the main highway between Leopoldville and the seaport of Matadi.

Grenfell and his wife were ousted from Angola two years ago "for military reasons."

Refugees — 85 per cent of them children — register at his station for food and clothing shipped here by relief organizations in a half dozen countries. Most of the beans, wheat, powdered milk and butter is from surplus stocks. Clothing comes from the United States, Britain, Germany, Belgium, Yugoslavia and other countries.

Refugees present a travel permit issued in Angola by Roberto's underground officials. Their personal background is recorded by the Grenfells. His 30 years of experience in Angola helps weed out would-be relief cheaters.

Kimberly WCOF Plans Diocesan Convention

KIMBERLY — Members of the Woman's Catholic Order of Foresters have made plans to attend a diocesan association convention at Kewaunee. Oct. 18 with Mrs. John Lamers in charge of reservations.

The affair will open with a 9 a.m. mass at Holy Rosary Catholic Church followed by a 10:45 a.m. meeting for financial and recording secretaries. Dinner will be served at noon. Mrs. Lamers was named delegate to an Oct. 15 diocesan meeting at Green Bay.

Mrs. Lucille Vander Zanden and Mrs. Anthony Oudenhoven were in charge of the lunch committee. Mrs. Adrian Van Drunen was named chairman for the October meeting.

House Ransacked, Man Reports to Police

Appleton police Friday investigated a complaint from a man who said he left his home shortly after noon and returned an hour later to find it ransacked. Robert Roberts, 908 W. Grant

St., told police he left his home about 12:15 p.m. When he returned the drawers were pulled out, food thrown on the floor in the kitchen, pictures taken from the walls and tossed around and furniture overturned. There was nothing missing from the home, he told police.

At Least Burned Fire in

Napa Valley Hit as Well

BY DEL MILLER

CALISTOGA, Calif. — A wild forest fire burned out of control into Calistoga, destroying at least one home and warring up hundreds of ignited fires in five communities.

The fire, which tore through Napa Valley resort Sunday when 70- mph winds changed direction, burned on three sides of town, Police Chief Kenneth H. said.

More than half the 500 residents and 1,000 been evacuated, police said. There were no immediate reports of casualties.

Many Refuse to Evacuate
 Many residents refused evacuation, braving the heat and ash to try and save their homes.

More than 500 families from surrounding towns moved into Calistoga to aid in the fight.

Hively said an official showed 35 buildings in the historic Tubbs area of Calistoga had been burned. But there were no firm reports that 50 homes had been destroyed.

Other Fires Reported

Calistoga police said the fire had been reported on the Napa, 30 miles south of Calistoga, in Stonecrest, near the towns of Ruth and Angwin to the east, and in the Lakes.

Emergency shelters were set up at an elementary school in St. Helena, 10 miles from Calistoga.

De Gaulle 27-Day Tour Latin America

CARACAS, Venezuela — A big welcome awaited Charles de Gaulle, president of France, at the start of his 27-day Latin American tour.

The nation, wealthy and booming 21-gun salute greeted the 73-year-old chief of state.

Strict security measures were ordered for De Gaulle's visit with President Raul Leoni at the airport, bedecked with bunting.

Officials fear the attempts on De Gaulle's life by exiled members of the Secret Army Organization in South America. Attacks are also feared made in Venezuela by the Castro Armed Forces for Liberation — FALC.

Speaks to Congress

During his 30-hour tour, De Gaulle will speak to Congress and confere with President Leoni, who is sound out the French advantages of a Latin American common market. He will attract more French investment to his country and welcome more French tourists to train labor.

De Gaulle and his wife will stay abroad for any of state since the death of Leon I. He spent the last 10 years in France's Guadeloupe and the Caribbean.

Johnson to Visit In Up to 30 States Outlines Travel

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Johnson said he was going to go out to see the people and "look the eye," campaigning in states as he can, probably more than 30.

The President outlined his upcoming news conference.

He also said he is confident about a victory in the polls which show a Republican nominee would defeat Goldwater.

Burma Widens Activities to Buck Reds

Pendulum Swings to Favoring Western Position in Asia

BY PETER BOOG
RANGOON, Burma (AP) — Burma's military government is taking steps to whittle down
Communist influence in this Southeast Asian country nestled against Red China. It looks as if leader Gen. Ne Win intends to keep Communist presence under firm control.

In the past it was mostly Western influence that suffered.

Two big American philanthropic organizations, the Ford and Asia foundations, were forced to close shop. U.S. Information Service activities were suspended. An $84 million American-Finance highway project was scrapped. Travel by state-sponsored scholars to Western countries slowed to a trickle.
Western correspondents virtually were barred.

Other Way
Now the pendulum has apparently swung the other way.

—The government has launched intensive military operations against Red guerrillas in a determined bid to end a bloody, 15-year old war against underground Communists;

—A lengthy manifesto has been issued, emphatically denying that Ne Win's Socialist-oriented regime is Communist-patterned;

—The editor of the widely circulated leftist daily, the Mirror, was arrested and his newspaper taken over by the government.

Reds on Run

On the military front, Communists have been forced on the run by repeated government thrusts that have carried the fight to the Red high command's threshold in the hills of central Burma.

The government is known to be accepting U.S. military aid to strengthen its hand, although details of this assistance have not been disclosed.

Chinese Communists in Burma can no longer depend on loans from Chinese banks, which have been nationalized along with Western financial houses. Most of the Chinese loans had been channeled into expanding influence over the country's economy.

Communist-run schools no longer are permitted to hold indoctrination courses but must follow a rigid curriculum laid down by the education authorities.

Balanced Act

It has become apparent Ne
Win has embarked on a delicate balancing act between East and West, aimed at keeping Burma uninvolved in Southeast Asia's power struggle.

Deteriorating conditions at home seem to have stiffened the government's resolve to isolate Burma from international affairs while its leaders focus on domestic reforms.

One compelling factor behind the government's recent effort to dissociate itself from communism was increasing Buddhist concern over what was considered only a narrow distinction between Marxist Leninism and Ne Win's brand of socialism.

Young monks in this predominantly Buddhist country made their feelings plain when they burned a newspaper plant in Mandalay last month.
